Burdock Blood Bitters is not a Whiskey Stimulant or fancy drink to pander to the depraved appetite of the intemperate, but a pure vegetable life-giving Tonic and regulator of the Secretions. It acts promptly on the Bowels, the Liver, the Blood and the Kidneys, purifying and giving tone to the entire system. Try a Sample Bottle which costs only 10 Cents Large Bottles $1.00. 19-2t.

On Saturday, six hundred Chinamen, employed on the Canada Pacific Railroad works, incensed against their Chinese bosses by reason of a tax imposed presumably to recoup the cost of their transportation, attacked the town of Yale, B. C., and threatened to burn it to the ground. A conflict between the rioters and authorities took place, but with no fatal result as far as ascertained. A general strike of the Chinese labourers on Onderdonk's contract has taken place.

A story is told of an old hostler who died in Cobourg the other day at a hotel where he had been in constant employment for over forty years. He was a very faithful servant and was temperate in his habits. During the last twelve years of his life it is said he never entered a bar-room. Just before he died he told those around him that there was some money in his trunk, half of which he wished to be given to the Presbyterian Church and the other half to the eldest daughter of his employer. When the trunk was opened it was found to contain $4,000, mainly in small coin, just as it was "tipped" to him by guests at the hotel.

According to a Toronto Globe special, the future of the cattle export business evidently depends upon the ability of our shippers to compete with the American dead meat exporters who are just now making such a strenuous effort to obtain a footing in the English market. Their success will, to some extent, probably lessen the profit of the Canadian business, or else the steamship freight must be considerably reduced. The present season's business may be regarded as a turning point in the trade, as the result will test our ability to meet this new phase of competion. In Nova Scotia the question of whether it is not advisable to adopt the system of forwarding carcasses instead of live cattle is exciting a good deal of discussion, and should the results of the season's shipments prove unfavourable it is altogether likely that the same subject will force itself upon the attention of Ontario shippers.

An honest medicine is the noblest work of man, and there is no remedy that is more justly meritorious in "curing the ills that flesh is heir to" than Burdock Blood Bitters. An important discovery has been made at Cincinnati of a process for fusing and moulding iridium into bars. It is really a wonderful medicine. 19-2t

It is estimated that the Government will have a majority of 110 on the second reading of the Land Bill in the House of Commons. It is said the Ministry will reject the amendment proposed by the Conservatives for compulsory purchase by the land commission of any estate of a landlord requiring it, also for the compensation of landlords, though it is likely the House of Lords will insert them. Regarding the reduction in the scale of compensation for disturbance it is believed that there will be a compromise.

A healthy man never thinks of his stomach. The dyspeptic thinks of nothing else. Indigestion is a constant reminder. The wise man who finds himself suffering will spend a few cents for a bottle of Zopessa, from Brazil, the new and remarkable compound for cleansing and toning the system, for assisting the Digestive apparatus and the Liver to properly perform their duties in assimilating the food. Get a 10 cent sample of Zopessa, the new remedy. A few doses will suprise you:—from J. D. Tully or T. Ruston. 44-17

A public conference was recently held at the invitation of the Committee of Clergy, on "Trades Unions and the Church," in the Chapel House, St. Paul's Churchyard, the subject under consideration being emigration as a Remedy for Social and Industrial Distress." Sir A. T. Galt was one of the speakers. Gentlemen from the colonies strongly urged emigration; workingmen and others maintained that if the land laws, in Great Britan were properly reformed, employment might be found for a much larger population; and a lady asked what was to become of the woman if the young men were encouraged to emigrate.

A St. Pteersburg special to the London Times says:—The Czar's manifesto indicates clearly the direction his internal policy will take, and justifies the scepticism which has prevailed in regard to predicted reforms. In a constisutional sense the change of form lately introduced in the routine of the Commission of Ministers is an important step, favourable to the diminution of intrigue, and capable of uniting Ministers otherwise working independently and irresponsibly, but it does not establish anything for a moment comparable with a Cabinet, as understood in England. The attention of the Government is turned to economical reform, and to the pressing necessities of an empire chiefly composed of peasant farmers, a majority of whom are reduced to a state of poverty and misery requiring immediate relief. All talk of constitutional reform is absurd and misleading.

"PICTURESQUE CANADA."

The engraving being done for the new work with the above title, in preparation by the Art Publishing Company, of Toronto, is of the finest description ever presented to the public either in Europe or America. It is an established fact that wood engravings produce a softer effect than those done on steel, which is best suited to peculiarly strong contrasts of light and shade. But the delicacy of lining in the wood engravings for "Picturesque Canada," of which we have a number in our possession, is quite equal to that of the most popular steel plates, and the preservation of tone throughout, is even better. Each subject, too, is characteristic of something Canadian, and thoroughly artistic in composition and finish of drawing. Besides these perfect wood engravings, steel plates are to be issued in connection with the work, delineating suitable subjects for that class of engraving. The pictures so far turned out are the best proof of excellence; and Mr. L. R. O'Brien, President of the Academy of Art, has reason to be proud of such work issued under his superintendence. None of the literary sketches for the work have yet been printed, though some of the manuscript is ready. With the responsibility attaching to the name of Principal Grant, of Queen's College, and the reputation of that gentleman in literary circles, there is a guarantee that the letter-press will also be of first-class character. As a historical and descriptive work, "Picturesque Canada" must take rank as a national enterprise; as it will be written by Canadians for Canadians. We select from a number of letters, the following, which bear testimony of its design and deserts:—

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, OTTAWA, 13th April, 1880.

SIR,—I have much pleasure in informing you that His Excellency will take six copies of the illustrated work on Canada which the Art Publishing Company purpose printing out. I am, sir, your obed't serv't,

F. DEWINTON,
Major, R. A., Gov-Gen's Sec'y.

To Manager Art Pub. Co,

Having had special opportunities to become acquainted with the plan of the proposed work entitled "Picturesque Canada," knowing some of the principal men to whom it is proposed to entrust the carrying out of the enterprise, as well in the illustrations as also in the accompanying letterpress, I have great pleasure in complying with the request of the publishers and testifying to the fact that it is a bona fide undertaking, and one that is eminently deserving of public support. The well-known reputation of the artists engaged to furnish the designs, and the high standing in Canadian literary circles of the gentlemen who have been invited to describe the scenery, and to narrate the events of our past history, introductory to this endeavor to depict the glories of the Dominion in its physical aspect, afford an ample gurantee that the promise of the prospectus will be fulfilled.

It is, moreover, a matter of congratulation that at a time when Canada is striving to develope her vast internal resources and to stimulate her manufacturing industries, a corresponding effort should be made to foster and elevate artistic taste. Hitherto, there has been no attempt amongst us to invite the genius of the artist, the skill of the engraver, the literary talents of the writer in unison with the energy and activity of a reputable and successful Publishing Company in the production of a work which, if sustained by the public, will assuredly reflect credit upon all concerned therein. It is, therefore, to be hoped that the appeal of the publishers to the Canadian public for encouragement in their great undertaking will be cordially responded to, as it is only by such a response that so costly a design can be successfully completed in accordance with the plan and intentions of its projectors.

L. R. O'Brien, Esq., 27 Grenville Street, Toronto.

MY DEAR MR. O'BRIEN,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of 11th inst., and upon your recommendation I was most happy to subscribe to the proposed book of illustration of Canada; I am convinced that the work cannot fail to prove a success if you take an interest in the matter and extend to it a helping hand.

This national work would be most interesting as well as valuable to all amateurs, and, as such, I wish it all the success it is worthy of. Very truly yours,

G. BABY,
Minister of Inland Revenue.

Ottawa, April 26, 1880.

To Managers Art Publishing Company,

DEAR SIRS,—Your projected work, "Picturesque Canada," is an undertaking deserving the most hearty support of the Canadian public. The scenery of this country affords ample material for the pencil of the artist, and there are many points of historic interest which the pen of the historian should not permit our posterity to forget. The names associated with this work are a good guarantee of its merit, and I only trust that their efforts to cultivate an artistic taste and spread abroad the natural beauty of Canada will receive the support of an appreciative public and yield the reward to which such enterprise is entitled. Yours very truly,

GEO. W. ROSS, M.P.,
Inspector Pub. Schools.

Ottawa, April 24th, 1880.

To the Art Publishing Company, Toronto.

GENTLEMEN,—In regard to "Picturesque Canada," being personally acquainted with the members of your firm, and also with several of the gentlemen to whom the different departments of the work has been entrusted, I feel quite sanguine of the ultimate success of this great national enterprise. I am persuaded that it will be carried out in such a manner as will reflect great credit upon the publishers and artists engaged, and give general satisfaction to all subscribers. Please enter my name on your subscription list. Yours truly,

JAMES TROW, M. P.

ALBERT COLLEGE AND UNIVERSITY,

To the Managers of the Art Publishing Co.

GENTLEMEN,—I have a a very high estimate of the splendid publication entitled "Picturesque Canada." I could earnestly wish it were on the centre-table of every Canadian family. The work will be an honor to our country, and ought to be universally encouraged.

J. R. JAQUES.

STUDIO, 60 York St., TORONTO,
Saturday p. m.

MY DEAR MOFFETT,—I send you to-day some proofs of engravings for "Picturesque Canada" which have just come to me from the engravers. I hope they will please the critical eye of the public as much as they do mine: I think that they compare in point of execution with anything that has ever been done in wood engraving. We have just secured two more excellent engravers, who have been induced to reside in Canada by the assurance of continued work which this book gives. Principal Grant is here now, and we are planning out the routes which the different artists and writers are to take this summer. You will be glad to hear that the building which is to contain the two large printing presses is almost finished, and we hope to have the printers at work within a month. Mr. Smith, our superintendent of engraving, saw the presses in Hoe's factory the other day, and described them as being most complete, with the latest improvements. Having them here will enable us, outside of the book, to do a class of fine printing that could not hitherto be attempted in Canada. I am glad to hear such good accounts of the canvass from you and others. Our Company's enterprise and pluck in carrying out this work, which marks an era in Canadian art and literature, deserve to be rewarded, and it is gratifying to find such assurance of unqualified success.

Faithfully yours,
L. R. O'BRIEN,
Sup't of Art Department.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 19, 1881.

Position of the Liberal Party.

The severe lesson administered to the Canadian Liberal Party at the last general election has not been yet put properly into practice. Indeed, many seem to be still passively wondering why they were defeated, instead of actively setting to work to remove the inherent causes of party weakness, which led to unlooked-for disaster. The principles they advocated, and the legislation they contended for are such as in the end must prove victorious; for they can endure the light of examination and the tests of experience. Victory was not accorded them in 1878 simply because of the failure to lay them fully and fairly before the minds of the electorate for examination and for judgment, founded on the experience of nations and centuries. Through a lack of understanding of the permanent principles they were called upon to support, the electorate, including very many acknowledged adherents of the Liberal party, were captivated, deceived and led away by a mere specious promise. This fact becomes more apparent from day to day, as events unfold themselves in connection with the political history of the Dominion. The Liberal Ministry which appealed to the people in 1878 was composed of men of honor and integrity; men of patriotic hearts and clean hands; men whose administrative record was unstained by criminal act of any sort. Why then were they rejected for others whose former record had been venal, and subversive of the rights of popular government? Principally because those on whose suffrages they relied for countenance did not comprehend their motives or perceive the good and wise objects they were striving ultimately to obtain. They did not take the public sufficiently into their confidence; and for this alone were they punished. Herein lay failure; hence arose defeat.

Now, is it not high time the lesson so dearly learned be put in practice? Popular leaders must understand the people; and it is a mutual necessity that the people shall understand them. Their aspirations must then be open; their aims plain. It is all very well to say that too pronounced statement of intention incites opposition and begets means of defeat. Opposition is to be looked for under our wise system of party government; and as it is assured, it should be met, openly, courageously and continually. As a matter of policy, it is best to court opposition early and always, rather than to shun it until the opening of a general electoral campaign. By distribution of effort over a whole parliamentary term, detachment after detachment of adverse tactics is defeated in detail; the people have a better chance to grasp and weigh the strength or weakness of this or that policy; and the electoral mind is educated concerning the political questions upon which parties differ. Thus when a vote is to be taken those who exercise the franchise can do so with intelligent appreciation of the causes which lead them to mark their ballots for this or that candidate. It should be the aim, therefore, of the Liberal leaders to constantly draw popular attention to, and invite popular countenance in their principles and the policy plainly based thereon. Herein lies their strength; and failure in this particular is failure to the people whom they strive to serve and to the country for whose welfare they contend.

The present popular leader of the Liberal party in the House of Commons has ventured upon the right path, in enunciating his opinions and formulating his policy, not only in the House, but at popular gatherings in the different parts of the Dominion during the Parliamentary vacations. By this course he will be better understood, better appreciated, and better supported by the people. It only remains for those who follow his leadership, whether in Parliament or out of it, to earnestly second his efforts in the plain dissemination of Liberal doctrines, with tongue and pen; unitedly confident that they are paving the way for the return of a Liberal administration in 1883. Such persistent effort will beget a wider confidence and a broader union of Liberal sentiment in the constituencies throughout the Dominion; so that even those who now give but a half-hearted countenance to the Hon. Mr. Blake shall be impelled to depart from passive indifference to active concern in behalf of the Liberal party, or step "down and out" for men who will more heartily and worthily fill their places, and be accepted by Liberals generally, as fervent friends—not as dark-browed dictators and chronic critics.

Details of Municipal Expenditure.

The importance of having all municipal accounts thoroughly overhauled by independent auditors and published in detail for the information of ratepayers is shown by a recent case in the adjoining County of Victoria. The Emily Township Council two years ago distributed $500 of township money among its members, to be expended on roads, each Councillor presenting a personal report at a sitting of the Board in December. It now turns out that one of the Council, Mr. Thos. Stephenson, had not used the money entrusted to him in the manner then reported. The Township sued Mr. Stephenson for money believed to have been retained by him, and defendent acknowledged that he had paid for a certain work with money obtained from the County, retaining in his possession a like sum voted by the township for the same work. It also transpired at the trial that Stephenson had engaged a debtor to himself to do certain work, giving him a receipt for the personal claim, and pocketing the municipal money. Stephenson also claims that he reimbursed himself in 1879 for money he had paid out of his own pocket the year before for repairs on Cowan's Bridge, which generous action he covered up by making a different report of expenditure. It is more than probable that Mr. Stephenson is not singular in his manner of handling township moneys loosely entrusted to the care of Councillors. There is nothing to hinder a Township Councillor from making his pickings and turning a profitable penny, in the Stephenson style, so long as no publication is made whereby his report of his expenditures may be tested by the knowledge of those to whom he asserts payments have been made. The only safeguard is contained in the annual issue to the ratepayers of a complete detailed statement of township financial matters. Councillors who are perfectly straightforward in their dealings will be glad of the issue of such a statement, as a guarantee of the faithful discharge of their duties. Only those who fear exposure will be likely to object to it, while by it the general public will gain the information to which they are entitled.

Mechanics' Institutes.

The new regulations proposed for the future guidance of Mechanics' Institutes are intended to encourage them in the direction in which they have generally failed to promote the purposes for which they were originated. It is a notorious fact that the name "Mechanics' Institute" applied to them is a glaring misnomer so far as their practical working is concerned; for the membership of the Institutes contains only a very small percentage of mechanics. By many persons the blame is laid on the mechanics themselves, while others attribute the result to the fees being too high. But the causes are rather social than financial; and do not arise so much from indifference on the part of the mechanics as from indelicacy on the part of others. Mechanics as a class are highly intelligent and practical. None know better than they do the benefits to be derived by themselves and their children from a good library, access to the current literature of the day, and instruction in elementary and technical subjects. They can, and do, appreciate the purposes of the Institutes named from them. But they are also a decidedly independent and democratic class; self-reliant; and possessed of a certain proper pride in their usefulness and indispensability. They hate beyond all other things to be patronized. What wonder is it, therefore, that mechanics, and their wives and children, shrink from connection with an institution, attendance at the rooms of which would, they feel, subject them to wounded feelings, in that they are tolerated rather than welcomed. This may be a mistaken feeling; but that it exists is amply proven by the fact that mechanics hold aloof from the so-called Mechanics' Institutes, and choose rather to spend very considerable sums in organizing Trades' Unions, and furnishing libraries and reading-rooms of their own.

It is certainly not lack of appreciation of the advantages offered, nor objection to the small expense, which keeps mechanics out of the Institutes primarily intended for their use; but rather the lack of appreciation extended to them and the small measure of true fellowship with which they are met by those who lament and wonder at their absence. Is not this a proper question for discussion by the directors and members of every Institute, and for the consideration of the Minister of Education and his colleagues in dealing with the necessity for new regulations? A full opening up of the subject might benefit more than the mechanics, and teach lessons not generally learned at evening classes.

Editorial Notes.

The New York Herald, in advocating the free navigation of the Erie Canal, refers to the competition springing up on all sides for the business of the west, and declares that "Canada has resolved to spare no effort to divert a portion of it through her magnificent canal system." True.

Hon. Samuel H. Blake has resigned the Vice-Chancellorship of Ontario, in order that he may devote more time to philanthropic objects. He long ago remarked that when his position interfered with his free action in regard to temperance and evangelistic work, he would resign his position. He has now done so.

A Bill is procreding through the British House of Commons for the protection of newspapers from wanton actions for libel—a subject to the importance of which The Examiner directed attention several weeks ago. It is probable the action of the Imperial Parliament will be followed by similar, and much-needed, action in Canada.

We are glad, for the sake of Port Hope, that the News of that town is attempting to arrest the Chief Constable in his contemplated robbery of further notoriety. The Examiner last week sounded a friendly note of warning to Port Hope. Those who choose to hear in that blast only a sectional threat may do so. That we cannot help. It is only another display of the pettishness which seems to pervade Port Hope through out. There was no hidden meaning in our words; therefore the reader between the lines may return to the actual statements and ruminate on them till their plain meaning strikes the too-suspicious brain.

The Toronto World is displaying great enterprise as a one-cent morning paper, in opposition to the combined increase by the Globe and Mail of their subscription price. There is a vast difference between seven and three dollars per year; and the World at the latter price supplies a complete digest of the news each morning. It is a thoroughly Liberal journal, and as such recommends itself strongly to the support of every man of that political persuasion. It is newsy, neat, cheap and cheerful; yet thoroughly decided in tone and tendency. The publishers, Messrs. Horton & Maclean, deserve success in their enterprising fight against a big newspaper monopoly.

It was not to be expected that our views, presented last week, on the utter unreliability of prospective benefits to be derived by municipalities from institutions bonused, would meet with unanimous acceptance. But a case in point which strikes directly home, is to be found in the following from the Port Hope News, in reference to the past history of the Midland Railway:—

"Port Hope contributed $760,150 towards the railway, $40,000 of which went to the extension from Millbrook to Peterborough. Peterborough took $120,000 in stock, not on the main line, but to secure the construction of the branch from Millbrook to Peterborough. When it was supposed that the interests of the road demanded it, the people of Port Hope generously, but unwisely, consented to cancel its stock, thus relinquishing all claim on the line. Peterborough declined to relieve the exigencies of the road, demanding its "pound of flesh." The consequence was that a settlement was arrived at, whereby the railway was compelled to pay Peterborough $78,800, to be reduced in annual instalments of $1,200, and also to pay six per cent. interest on the unpaid principal until the whole is wiped out. Port Hope, on the other hand, receives nothing from the railway. * * * Port Hope was weighed down for many years with burdensome taxation in carying the debt involved in aiding the railway; Port Hope sacrificed its own interests in its unwise zeal to assist the Midland Railway, the benefits from which are now reaped more by Peterborough and the back country than by Port Hope. To-day Port Hope is paying a large sum annually to clear off its indebtedness incurred in this manner, while Peterborough grandly puts forth its hand and draws a sum far more than sufficient to pay its M. L. F. obligations."

The amount to be granted in prizes was fixed at $250. The sum of $400 was appropriated for securing a competent butter and cheese inspector to travel through the district and give instructions.

FARMERS AND MECHANICS,—If you wish to avoid great danger and trouble, besides a no small bill of expense, at this season of the year, you should take prompt steps to keep disease from your household. The system should be cleansed, blood purified, stomach and bowels regulated, to prevent and cure diseases arising from Spring malaria. We know of nothing that will so perfectly and surely do this as Electric Bitters, and at the trifling cost of fifty cents a bottle.—Exch.—Sold by all druggists.

William John Ferguson, a young farmer of Emily, was arraigned in the Lindsay police court on Tuesday of last week, charged with seducing Elizabeth Ann Sutherland, a young girl of Omemee, and afterwards attempting to procure abortion by purchasing and giving to her a noxious drug. The magistrate committed the prisoner for trial, but accepted bail. Ferguson's defence is that the girl is of notoriously bad character, and that this action is an attempt to blackmail, he having refused to marry the girl.

DELICATE WOMEN.—Case of female weakness, delicate and enfeebled constitutions, and those suffering with Stomach, Liver and kidney complaints, will find Electric Bitters a speedy and certain cure. The sick and prostrated should rejoice that such a reliable remedy is placed within reach. Health and happiness will surely follow where Electric Bitters are used. For sale by all druggists; price only fifty cents.

SPREAD THE GOOD NEWS.—As a family medicine and tonic, there is no remedy at present giving such universal satisfaction, and effecting so many astonishing cures, as Electric Bitters. Our druggists report a lively demand for them, at times being unable to supply the many calls. All Bilious Attacks, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Diabetes and Gravel, readily yield to their curative qualities. Sold by all druggists, at fifty cents per bottle.

The draft constitution for the proposed Chief Constables, Association, provides that all chief constables may be elected members of the Association; that the entrance fee shall be $2; that the annual subscription shall be $1; that all towns shall be asked to contribute at least $5, villages at least $2, and cities at least $10 annually to the expenses of the association. The inducements are the distribution of photographs of persons under police surveillance, and the interchange of other useful information among the constabulary of the country.

DYSPEPSIA.—Strengthen your digestion tone the stomach for utilizing and assimilating every atom of food you take; the body needs it for strength and vigor. Zopesa cleans the entire system, stimulates the liver, keeps you regulated and able to eat ten-penny nails. At Consecon, on Saturday night, Dominion Government testimonials were presented to the men who risked their lives in trying to save the lives of the crews of the schooners Belle Sheridan and Garibaldi, which went ashore on Weller's Beach. The following received them:—W. A. Young, $50; J. M. W. Brickman, $50; J. A. Huyck, $25; Stephen Clark, $25; Frank Bonter, $25; M. Chase, $25; W. B. Lacie, $25; Capt. Maitland, $25; R. L. Hayes, $25; A. Simpson, $25; Capt. Weaver, $25; Wm. Clark, a magnificent opera glass. Herman Weeks, who went out with the rest, was overlooked, but Mr. McCuaig is going to try and remedy this.

(From our own Correspondent.)

THE FALL WHEAT.—Some of the fall wheat around here was winter-killed, but the greater part of it looks well, especially one field belonging to Timothy O'Grady.

OUR MILK-TRAIN is again running, with Mr. Scott as engineer; and once more the small school boy waits and listens for the rattle of the milk-cans, hoping the brakesman will be in good humor this morning, and give him a lift to school.

THE RAIN WAS WELCOME. By it the dry ground was moistened, the almost unconscious seed restored to life, and the farmers made glad.

ATHLETES will surely have a chance to exhibit on the 24th in this part of the country as both Norwood and Hastings intend having sports on that day.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTES.

New regulations have been issued from the Education Department of Ontario for the future guidance of Mechanics' Institutes, for the consideration of Directors before being submitted to the Lieut.-Governor in Council for final ratification. They suggest that of the $400 granted to each Institute $200 go for a library, $100 for a reading-room, and $100 for evening classes. This change is proposed in view of the fact that only 24 out of the 125 Institutes in the Province have established reading-rooms and classes. Each Institute is to be credited with money actually paid on account of its reading-room, exclusive of salaries or expense of management. For every pupil in classes of from five to ten $1, for each additional pupil from ten to twenty, $2, and from each additional pupil from twenty to forty, $1, will be paid beyond the regular grant, for instruction in certain specified subjects of a technical nature. The pupil's fee shall not exceed 50 cents for elementary, or $1, for technical instruction; and out of the money available for evening classes may be paid expenses for popular or scientific lectures. The School Inspector will visit the Institute, verify the annual report, previously sent to the Education Department by the Directors, and audit the books, receiving pay according to the number of members and the work actually performed. No Director or officer will in future be allowed to sell books to the Institute library. The affidavit formerely used is superceded by a declaration under the Act for the suppression of voluntary and extra-judicial oaths; and simple forms are to be provided whereby the financial and general working of each Institute may be easily discovered.

THE CONTEMPLATED OUTRAGE.

(Toronto Globe.)

The large millers, who ought to be able to grind wheat much more cheaply than American millers do it, since in Canada labour and material are cheaper than in the States, are to be protetced at any cost. They must have given over to them, first, a monopoly of the supply of the American flour; then another monopoly, accruing from the former one, of the entire export business of Canadian flour; then the privilege of controlling the local grain markets; and finally, the monopoly of the entire home market for flour, not only from American but Canadian wheat. All these gifts are to be made to firms which became rich while competing against American millers on even terms; because the persons to be benefitted support the Government, and as the price of their future support. It is nonsense to assert that the grinders in bond are in need of any protection at all. They themselves asked for the tax on wheat. They have it. Let them be satisfied. But they will not be satisfied, we predict until the record of their besotted folly in 1878 has been obliterated, and the N. P. along with it.

A NON-COMMUNATIVE FEMALE.

MARK TWAIN.

I got into a car and took a seat in juxtaposition to a female. That female's face was a perfect insurance company—it insured her against ever getting married to anybody but to a blind man. Her mouth looked like a crack in a dried lemon, and there was no more expression in her face than there is in a cup of cold custard. She appeared as though she had been through one famine, and had got about two-thirds through another. She was old enough to be great-grand mother to Mary that had the little lamb. She was chewing prize pop-corn, and carried a yellow rose, with a bandbox and a cotton umbrella nestled sweetly by her side. I couldn't guess whether she was on a mission of charity, or going west to start a saw-mill. I was full of curiosity to hear her speak, so I said:—

"The exigencies of these times require great circumspection in a person who is travelling."

Says she: "What?"

Says I: "The orb of day shines resplendent in the vault above."

She hitched around, uneasy like; then she raised her umbrella and said: "I don't want any of your sass—get out!" And I got.

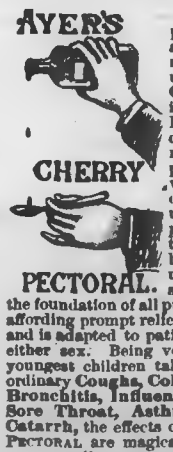
THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.



In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,350,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

Peterborough Examiner

PETEBBOROUGH, MAY 19, 1881.

The Sale of the Grand Junction Railway.

The rumour started last week, that the Grand Junction Railway had been purchased by the Grand Trunk Company was received with some degree of incredulity. It was argued that while the Ontario and Quebec Company, in opposition to the Toronto and Ottawa line, was coquetting with the Grand Junction, the policy of the Grand Trunk would have been to let the rival projutors thus continue to interfere with each others prospects and progress. However, some other consideration seems to have prevailed, and we are now able to assure our readers that the arrangements for the rumoured transfer have been completed. The Grand Junction line will be operated by its new owners in harmony with the Midland road, and there will, consequently, be no competition in freight rates. The new circumstances which have thus arisen make the building of the missing link," from Peterborough to Omemee, more probable than ever; and it is more than likely that the President of the Midland Road, resident as he is in Peterborough, will be fully alive to the importance of immediately securing this very desirable connection. As grain is carried over the Grand Trunk Railway from Port Hope to Montreal very nearly as cheaply as from Belleville, it is to be hoped that the amicable arrangements between that Company and the Midland will be a benefit not only to Peterborough and Omemee, but to towns and villages to the northward, particularly to Midland, as offering two nearly equally advantageous connections at the front.

U. S. Senator Conkling, who was dubbed by a political opponent a "strutting turkey-cock," has for years held that the power of appointment of officers in the Senate should lie with the representative, or be subject to their nomination, without question. President Hayes after first objecting to the doctrine, yielded to the practice, under pressure; but President Garfield being made of sterner stuff, has fought out the principle through a long dead-lock in the Senate. He has been so far victorious as to have brought about the appointment of an administration nominee in spite of the efforts of the State-power party. This has led to the sudden resignation of Senators Conkling and Platt; either with a view of showing their necessity in preserving the power of the Republican party, or to secure an endorsation for themselves by the State Legislature. Their action has caused great excitement at Washington, and throughout the United States generally, and the final result of the long continued contest is looked to with considerable anxiety by Republicans generally, while the Democrats rejoice at the prospects of an irreconcilable breach in the ranks of their political opponents.

Editorial Notes.

THE INITIAL number of the Dominion Oddfellow, published at Napanee by Templeton & Beeman, gives promise that the journal will speedily become indispensible to Oddfellows throughout Canada.

IT IS STATED that the transfer of the G. J. Railway to the Grand Trunk will come into effect on the beginning of next month. Also, that the road has been bonded at $900,000 and the bonds purchased by the Grand Trunk at 92½ cents.

IN EAST DURHAM, as expected, there is a plentiful crop of candidates for the seat occupied by the late John Rosevear in the Ontario Legislature. The Liberal voters of the constituency should take as their motto, "All the ballots for one man." Otherwise there is no chance whatever of East Durham sending to Toronto a supporter of the Mowat Administration.

THE DEPARTURE of Sir John Macdonald for England, on account of ill-health, will necessitate some re-arrangement of the Dominion Cabinet, and various rumours are afloat as to what the changes will be. In the present temper of the country it is not likely that any new members will be taken into the Government, but that a shuffle of the portfolios will be made in some way so as to avoid an election. Sir Leonard Tilley seems to have the first chance of the leadership in Sir John's absence, and hence in the future.

Mr. Thomas Paxton's resignation of the representation of North Ontario in the Provincial Legislature has been accepted by the Government and a writ for an election to fill the vacancy is issued. The nomination takes place on the 28th instant, and polling, if necessary, on the 4th of June. The prospects of the return of the Liberal candidate, Mr. Bigelow, are of the most encouraging kind. But though the opposition to his election is plainly weak, it is better to despise it after subjecting it to a crushing defeat. Poll every Liberal vote for Bigelow.

THE ACTION of the people of Belleville in doing something within themselves toward the establishment of manufactories very soon produced its natural result, in bringing to the place a man who desires to start a cotton-spinning business, and who does not ask a bonus. The moment local capital begins to seek investment outside capitalists feel confident that there is some genuine advantage in the place, and come forward. Local business effort is the best advertisement for any town. Business men go where there is business; beggars are encouraged by bonuses.

THE FRENCH have chosen to hold the Bey of Tunis responsible for the action of the Kroumir tribe in their raids upon Algerian territory, and having punished these troublesome folk by force of arms, marched against the Bey and compelled him to enter into a treaty whereby a war indemnity is to be paid and Tunis practically become a French protectorate. Tunis being an appenage of Turkey, the Porte complains that its rights have been disregarded, while other European powers also see in the French occupation of Tunis a departure from existing conditions, which they contend should not be taken independently by any one power. Italy is particularly interested, and so great is the excitement in that country that the ministry has been forced to resign by reason of the popular uproar against them because they failed to interefere against the French campaign in Tunis. A proposal to bring the matter before a European Conference was baulked by the refusal of Germany, which country appears desirous that France shall entangle herself in difficulties France disclaims any intention to annex or conquer Tunis, but declares that she is only desirous of securing the peace of the Algerian frontier and protecting French influence in Tunis against intrigue. The French have naturally been roused to a high pitch of enthusiasm, which may lead them to object to the remonstrances and counsels of the powers and embroil Europe in a fresh war.

WHEAT AND THE N.P.

Referring to the late letter of Mr. Clarton, from which the EXAMINER published extracts last week, the Toronto Globe says:—"Of course, Mr. Clarton recognizes that the N. P. cannot exist without the wheat tax—or rather it cannot exist unless it embodies a wheat tax, which will actually raise the price of wheat. As he himself points out, our farmers are much too intelligent to stand high taxation in the interests of the manufacturer, unless the farmers' own interests are substantially protected. Of course, also, Mr. Clarton recognises that a duty on wheat cannot exist without damaging or killing the business of flouring for export, unless the great millers are allowed to grind in bond and export an "equivalent." It is equally clear that this cannot be allowed without inflicting horrible injustice on everybody else beside the great millers concerned in handling grain. As a continuation of a policy which involves the destruction of a great Canadian industry is out of the question, it follows that the wheat tax is doomed. The Government recognizes this in practically abolishing the tax in the interest of the grinders in bond. It follows then inevitably that the N. P. must go also, and Mr. Clarton and other original defenders of the wheat tax cannot avoid seeing the thing in the same light

ENNISMORE.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT:—While Martain McCauliff, Esq., of Emily, and wife were driving to Ennismore church on Sunday last, their spirited team of horses got frightened on the top of Crough's Hill, and ran away, proceeding at a rapid pace to the Cross, where, in turning, the buggy was upset, throwing Mr. and Mrs. McCauliff amongst some stones near the side-walk. Mr. McCauliff received some severe cuts about the head, and Mrs. McCauliff had one of her thighs broken, besides sustaining some severe bruises. They are now under the care of Dr. Boucher, of Peterborough, and it is to be hoped that, although advanced in years, they will soon recover from their injuries. The horses were caught a little further down. Both springs of the buggy were broken, but apparently no other damage was done.

THE WEATHER.—Thursday, the 12th, was the hottest day of the season so far. the thermometer standing at 91° in the shade, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

The Ontario Government have had for some time under consideration plans for the improvement of Upper Canada College, and action to that end will at once be taken. It is intended that the institution shall be brought within the scope of the Act providing for higher education, and will be inspected in the same way as Collegiate Institutes and Grammar Schools. Reductions of salary will be made in two instances, and changes will take place among the staff of teachers, three of whom will retire, receiving a gratuity, their places to be filled before the close of the midsummer holidays.

THE FISHERY INSPECTOR.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—There appeared in your last issue a communication signed "A Lover of the Law," North Monaghan, which was calculated to give rise to erroneous impressions in regard to illegal fishing in the River. The fish-lights this person saw were carried by frog-catchers, who in plying their vocation use a light to attract the frogs. These men get permission from me to carry these lights, and never upon any occassion carry a spear. But all the reports of spearing cannot be accounted for in this way; for some of them are circulated too early in the Spring, the frog-catchers not commencing operations until about May 5th. Many persons consider it highly commendable to deceive the Inspector. Fortunately he does not always believe their stories. A man told me this spring that in one creek at 9 to 12 o'clock P. M. each evening of the 20th and 21st April he saw two fishlights. This fellow while telling me this did not know I was camped directly opposite the the mouth of the creek upon an island, and that several times each night I swept the Lake with a night-glass and saw no lights. Another person, saw, on one night, and in the creek, thirteen fish-lights. This he swore to in a very impressive and forcible manner. Thirteen boats could not enter the creek, not to mention the fact that half the number could not move in it; for it is too small. Hearing such reports and knowing how truthful they are, a Fishery Inspector naturally places implicit confidence in all he hears on the subject and goes anywhere they desire to send him.

Although I am not all over my district at once, and therefore am unable to hand to every anxious "Lover of the Law" a programme of my next week's proceedings, still I contrive to call around rather unexpectly as several new Respecters of the Law know to their cost. In conclusion I desire to say that I do not pay any attention to anonymous reports; still any complaints made to me in writing over a bona fide signature will be attended to.

Yours, etc.,
CHAS. GILCHRIST.

Peterborough Mechanics' Institute.

ITS RISE, PROGRESS, AND PRESENT POSITION.

On the 5th of June, 1868, a meeting was held in the Council Chamber for the purpose of forming a Mechanics' Institute, R. Romaine in the chair, and D. W. Dumble acting as Secretary. The following officers were elected:—Wm. Helm, President; Wm. Hamilton, 1st Vice-President; Robt. Grant, 2nd Vice-President; R. Romaine, Treasurer. The first Board of Directors were:—J. Carnegie, W. English, Wm. Kennedy, D. S. Eastwood, D. W. Dumble, R. Renfrew, Jas. White, Andrew Douglas, R. Rutherford, R. Romaine, Peter Hamilton and Donald Fraser. The fee for the year was placed at $2, and committees were appointed to solicit subscriptions to the Institute and ask a grant to its funds from the Town Council.

The declaration of formation of the Peterborough Mechanics' Institute states:—"It is formed for the purpose of diffusing scientific and literary knowledge,—by a library of reference and circulation; by the formation of a museum of specimens in zoology, geology and other subjects of nature, science and manufactures; by lectures; by philosophical apparatus; by conversations; and by any other method the Committee may judge necessary."

The declaration, of which the above quotation is part, was duly registered, and the new Institute became a properly recognized body. The following are the names of members registered:—Robt. Romaine, J. Carnegie, jr., Wm. Helm, Jas. English, Wm. N. Kennedy, William English, Jas. Whyte, Grant & York, D. W. Dumble, A. Comstock, R. Renfrew, D. Williams, Jas. Rose, T. C. Tucker, T. Lannin, Wm. McCullough, F. Huebsch, John English, Geo. Henderson, Donald Fraser, Jas. Fraser, Wm. J. Martin, J. B. Dixon, H. Calcutt, J. Stevenson, W. Beck, R. Kincaid, M.D., Wm. Hamilton, J. Ludgate, Nicholls & Hall, J. W. Gilmour, John Bertram.

On the 12th of June a constitution was adopted. Mr. J. I. Davidson was appointed the first Secretary.

Toward the end of July a reading-room was opened, and by the middle of August it was pretty well supplied with periodicals. On the 17th of the latter month a meeting convened at the Firemen's Hall adjourned to the rooms of the Institute, where Sproule's studio now is, and a set of by-laws were then adopted, which original by-laws were amended last year. Mrs. Thompson was engaged as care-taker of the rooms, which were complained of, as early as September of the same year, as being too small. Evening classes were promptly started in the winter, and forty scholars received instruction in writing, arithmetic, book-keeping and mechanical drawing. In October a Public Exhibition was given in the Good Templars' Hall, which was freely loaned for the purpose. About the beginning of the year 1869 a library was opened with 126 purchased volumes and 225 volumes from the Union School library, given on condition that the scholars should have free use of the Institute Library.

The first Institute year closed with a financial deficit of $88.26. The subscriptions from 139 members aggregated $283.75; the Government gave $190; the town $50; and there were received from other sources sums amounting to $139.13; making the total income $662.88; but the expenses amounted to $741.17.

During the second year the Directors were not only able to clear off the deficiency, but to supplement the Legislative grant, and make large additions to the library and reading appliances. The attendance at the reading-room showed an encouraging increase. The evening classes were not successful; but the lectures were well attended. The year's receipts were $606.84; the expenditure $11.41 less.

The third year showed a still increasing membership and increased use of the reading-room. Additions were again made to the library. Evening classes were not attempted; but lectures were provided, and met with popular appreciation, as shown in a larger attendance than at those of the former year. The report of this year expressed regret that mechanics had not taken the interest in the Institute that had been expected of them. The receipts, $644.97, were all expended except $4.27.

The fourth year brought a larger roll, the fees being lowered so as to bring membership within the reach of all. Books and magazines were added, and the library and reading-room flourished; but there was a falling off in the attendance at lectures. The full grant of $400 was got from the Legislature and $100 from the town, the total receipts being $666.05. The expenditure was less by $33.97.

The fifth year brought increase of members, additions to the library and a well-supplied reading-room; but lectures and classes failed. Receipts, $1,030.07; expenses $151.66 less.

The sixth year was marked by a slight increase in membership, an increase in book circulation, a well-sustained reading-room, and a resumption of evening classes, forty-two pupils being taught. Receipts, $1,234.61; expenses, $125.81 less.

The seventh year's membership roll was larger than before; the book-circulation was greater; and the reading-room was well patronized. A number of books were added to the library, and others were rebound. Forty pupils were instructed in short-hand, arithmetic, mathematics and mechanical drawing. Lectures were not successful. Receipts, $1,023.86; expenditure, $29.67 less.

The eight year brought a report of decreased membership. The names of 105 persons were struck off the roll for non-payment of subscriptions, probably because they had never been called on. An addition of 67 new names made the nett decline 38. The circulation of books still increased, and a number of volumes were added to the library. The reading-room continued to be a favorite resort. The evening classes did good work, as shown by examinations at the end of the course. The funds were augmented by the receipt of $500 from the Wm. Hall estate, the total receipts being $1,412.40, and the expenditure $73.77 less. It was decided to again increase the yearly subscription to $2, principally because of the necessity for more frequent attendance of the librarian.

The ninth year witnessed the death of the Secretary, Mr. Wm. Johnston. The membership showed an increase of but one over that of the previous year; but the circulation of books from the library continued to grow. Both the library and reading-room were well kept up, and a desire began to show itself for larger rooms. Three classes were but meagerly attended. Receipts, $957.13; expenses, $146.13 less.

The tenth year brought another death among the officers; that of George Barlee, Treasurer. There was a slight increase of membership. The library and reading-room continued to flourish; and the evening classes were better attended than during the former year, but yet not to the extent anticipated. The receipts amounted to $1,082.24; the expenses were $237.67 less.

The eleventh year showed a decreased membership. The reading-room remained popular and was well supplied. The library was further increased; but no classes were attempted. Receipts, $1,095.22; expenses, $233.05 less.

The twelfth year again brought a small increase in the membership. Further supplies were needed for the reading-room, and the library was liberally supplemented, the circulation of books continuing to increase. There were no classes, and no lectures. The year's receipts were $1,108.65, and the expenses fell below that amount by $97.07. This balance and other assets were estimated at $4,317.07, while the liabilities were only $50. Two members made the offer of cabinets of minerals wherewith to begin a museum, an offer that was gladly accepted, particularly as the Institute had now acquired the increased accommodation so long needed. This was attained by removal from the old rooms to the present quarters, in Nichol's Block, Water Street, the building formerly occupied by the Ontario Bank. Here there are, on the second floor, a spacious library, reading and recreation rooms, and an apartment devoted to the museum, at present closed, for repairs to cases, &c. On the next flat are class and lecture rooms; also the Board-room. The reading and recreation rooms are kept open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.—the one being supplied liberally with daily, weekly and monthly publications of a desirable class, the other with chess and draught-boards for the use of members of the Institute. The library has been more used during the past year than ever before. It is open every legal day from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.; from 3 to 6, and from 7.30 to 10 p.m. It contains nearly 4,000 volumes, the greater part being standard works, followed by books of fiction, history, biography, voyages and travels, philosophy, science, and art, natural history, essays, &c., including a well-selected reference library. The books are greatly read by members, including many of the ladies of the town.

The membership subscription is $2, of which 50 cents is said to be an entrance fee and $1.50 the annual due. Apprentices and youths generally are admitted to the privileges of the library, reading room, &c., for $1 per year; and family tickets are issued at a reduction according to a sliding scale arranged by the Directors.

During the past year the Institute has lost a very useful officer by the death of Geo. E. Shaw, President.

The Thirteenth Annual Meeting was held in the Reading Room of the Institute on Monday evening last, the President, Mr. F. J. Lewis in the chair. About thirty members were in attendance. The minutes of the last meeting of the Board of Directors having been read and adopted the President submitted the which on motion was adopted. It spoke of the growing popularity of the Institute—the number of members for the past year being 280, as against 241 in the year previous; suggested a ladies' room for the exclusive use of ladies; and approved of a billiard room. The reading room has been largely patronized by the members, as also is the library, to which has been added nearly 300 volumes during the year, and 8,484 volumes were issued to members. Classes in book-keeping and mechanical drawing were formed during the winter, and $20 in prizes distributed at the close of the term. The museum has not progressed as much as could have been wished. The Peterborough Loan and Investment Company has allowed the use of their Board Room, and cases have been procured and a few specimens placed in them.

DIRECTORS' REPORT,

THE LIBRARY COMMITTEE

reported that during the past twelve months two hundred and eighty-seven volumes have been added to the Library, costing $414.05. The number of volumes in the Library is 3,641; last year the number was 3,354. The number of volumes issued this year was 8,484; last year the number was 5,173. The amount expanded on the Reading Room has been $64.53; on evening classes, $135.38; five per cent. on Government grant, $20. An attempt was made, during the past year to obtain a sufficient guarantee in the shape of advertisements, from the merchants and storekeepers, to enable the Committee to have the catalogue of the Library printed for circulation among the members and the public at large, but the attempt proved unsuccessful.

THE LECTURE AND CLASS COMMITTEE

next presented their report, which was adopted. It stated that during the fall and winter classes were conducted in book-keeping and mechanical drawing, the former being taught by Mr. Bryson, and the latter by Mr. McLean. The attendance was very good, and the examiners reported a fair degree of proficiency in those pupils who underwent the concluding examinations. To the three pupils who stood highest in each of these examinations prizes in money were given in the following order:—In book-keeping, 1st, F. Clarke; 2nd, J. Cobb; 3rd, B. Gress. In drawing, 1st, F. Hilliard; 2nd, W. Redpath; 3rd, S. Patterson. These prizes were given publicly by the President of the Institute, Mr. Lewis, and the occasion was utilised by Mr. Trout in a lecture on the principle of mechanical drawing. Only two public lectures were given under the auspices of the Institute, those by Mr. Forbes and Prof. Proctor. The public support given warrants the Institute in renewing the endeavor to provide other lectures of a similar character.

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT

was then submitted, signed by the Auditors, Geo. Gladman and R. W. Orr, and it was adopted. It showed that the receipts during the year were $1,175.67; and the expenditure $97.05 less; assets, $4,317.05; liabilities, $40.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS.

Mr. Lewis having withdrawn his nomination for the Presidency, the only other nominee, Mr. A. P. Poussette, was declared elected. The other officers had formerly been elected by acclamation, as follows:—First Vice-President, W. H. Trout; 2nd Vice-President, Wm. English; Secretary-Treasurer, R. W. Orr. Ballots were cast for the election of Directors, Messrs. Henry and Bell being appointed scrutineers. There were twenty-nine nominees, of whom eleven were mechanics. The Board of twelve must contain at least six mechanics, and only those who were members during the past year had the right to vote. The balloting resulted in the election of the following gentlemen:—Mechanics—R. Robertson, pattern-maker; E. Courtney, cabinet-maker; James English, engineer; Peter Hamilton, founder; Geo. Munro, machinist; Wm. McLean, pattern-maker. Non-mechanics—A. H. Macdougall, Rev. V. Clementi, John Corkery, B. Karl, F. J. Lewis, J. F. Jeffers.

THE PROPOSED NEW REGULATIONS.

During the time that the scrutineers were investigating the ballots the President submitted a communication from the Secretary of the Association of Mechanics' Institutes, enclosing the proposed new Government regulations, and suggestions for the consideration of Institutes prior to the submission of the regulations to the Lieut.-Governor in Council, for approval.

[The leading features of the proposed changes will be found in another part of this issue.—ED.]

Mr. Clementi did not favor the separation of $100 of the Government grant for classes. Some Institutes have no classes, and so would not get the $100. He thought the Institutes should have the right to distribute the money as they saw fit. He was a great advocate of evening classes; but did not like to be coerced.

Another member drew attention to the extra grants to classes for their encouragement.

Another asked if an officer was to be appointed to see how the money was to be spent, and upon the explanation by the President that the School Inspector was proposed for such duty, he remarked that he thought that there was something like that, the Inspector was thus to get more salary.

Mr. Clementi, in view of the wide scope of the suggestions submitted, and the difficulty of dealing with them at a large meeting, would withdraw the resolution he intended to move, and propose that the subject be submitted to the new Board of Directors.

Mr. Toker remarked that the tendency of the extra grants to classes according to number was to give larger grants to Institutes in cities, and smaller to those in towns and villages.

Mr. Clementi, and others, also took exception to the proposed submission to the Education Department of a list of the works of fiction to be purchased by the Institutes, to which the selection of such works might be left, as they were now limited by Government. In any case it was a small matter, as 20% of the $100 proposed for the library would only amount to $40, with the local equivalent.

It was finally resolved to leave the consideration of the matter in the hands of the Directors.

PRESENTATION.

A new book, entitled "Red River," by J. J. Hargrave, was handed to the President, a gift to the Institute from the author, through Mr. H. Calcutt. The Secretary was instructed to convey to Mr. Hargrave the thanks of the Institute.

THE PRESIDENCY.

The retiring President having vacated the chair, it was taken by the President elect, and to the former a vote of thanks was tendered for the able manner in which he had discharged the duties of the position during his occupancy thereof.

Mr. Lewis was grateful for the expression of approbation. He was always glad to do what he could for the Institute, which he congratulated on the accession of Mr. Poussette.

The meeting then adjourned.

A SENSE OF WEARINESS is often felt by persons who cannot locate any particular disease. If they work it becomes labor; if they walk they soon tire; mental efforts become a burden, and even joys are dimmed by the shadow of this weakness which is cast over their lives. Recourse is had sometimes to stimulants of a dangerous character. The advice of physicians to refrain from active labor produces no happy results. Why? The system is debilitated and needs to be built up properly. Peruvian Syrup will do this very thing. Like the electric current, that permeates the entire system and harmonizing with the corporeal functions, it raises up the enfeebled, brings the color to the cheek again, and hope to the despondent. It does its work promptly and well.

RUPTURES, SPRINGLESS TRUSSES AND SUPPORTERS.—Prof. Hotchkin, of Albion, Orleans County, N. Y., will again visit Peterborough and stop at the Huffman House, June 13 and 14. Prof. H. having had thirty years experience, defies the Hernia he cannot hold. Go and see him. 19-td.

PREPARED FOR SPRING.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, and all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopessa, from Brazil, acts as a gentle purgative. It is just introduced into this country. The remarkable results of a few doses are most suprising. Ask J. D. Tully or T. Ruston for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopessa, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion. Constipation and Biliousness ever introduced in this country. 44-17

THE OLIVE TREE.

BY BARING GOULD.

Said an ancient hermit, kneeling
Half in prayer upon his knee,
"Oh! I need for midnight watching
I desire an olive tree."

Then he took a tender sapling,
Planted it before his cave,
Spread his trembling hands above it,
And his benison he gave.

But he thought, the rain it needeth,
That the root may drink and swell,
"God! I pray Thee send thy showers!"
So a gentle shower fell.

"Lord! I ask for beams of summer, Cherishing this little child."
Then the dripping clouds divided,
And the sun looked down and smiled.

"Send it frost to brace its tissues,
O my God!" the hermit cried.
Then the plant was bright and hoary,
But at even-song it died.

Went the hermit to a brother
Sitting in his rocky cell:
"Thou an olive-tree possessest;
How is this, my brother, tell?

"I have planted one, and prayed,
Now for sunshine, now for rain;
God hath granted each petition,
Yet my olive-tree hath slain!"

Said the other, "I entrusted
To its God my little tree;
He who made knew what it needed
Better than a man like me.

"Laid I on Him no condition,
Fixed not ways and means; so I
Wonder not my olive thriveth,
Whilst thy olive-tree did die."

Farm, Garden and Household.

Farm Hints.

The soil considered best for potatoes is a rich sandy loam, which is neither too wet nor too dry. A cool, moist soil has been found to produce large potatoes; but there is less risk from excessive moisture in a lighter soil; maturity is reached earlier and the quality is better in a warm light soil than in one which is heavier. A calcareous formation generally yields a sure crop; wet land produces a wet unpalatable crop of little value; old sod well turned under in the fall, or clover sod, is excellent, but in any case it should be well rotted, and the land well and deeply worked before the potatoes are planted; when the land is not rich, a top-dressing of some sort should be applied; if stable manure it should be well rotted. At the time of planting, bone dust, ashes, marl and like fertilisers can be used to great advantage, as they are of a dry and absorbent nature. On wet soils they are especially beneficial; on a warm, light, dry soil much compost may be advantageously used; decayed leaves are also highly recommended. In seasons when this crop has been affected by disease, fields where ashes have been used have suffered much less from the rot.

One very essential point, in fact the essential one, in drainage, is to give the drains a continuous fall. If any point is dug out too low, the water will stand there, and deposit mud until the passage becomes obstructed. It is easy enough to attain the continuous fall if there is water flowing in the ditch at the time of digging, as the water will stand at any point below the proper grade; but in case the ditch is dry and the bottom of uneven character as to hardness, it will need close watching to prevent the digger from going too deep in spots where the bottom is soft. The level is the only safe guide in such places. The cost of the drainage of many a wet hole would be returned in one to three years of good crops, and the land thus reclaimed is usually the very best, being able to withstand drought better than high land, and containing abundance of vegetable mould.

The root-growing farmers have the best farms, and as a general thing are more properous than those who don't raise roots. In winter roots as food are very valuable. The change from dry fodder and grain to a succulent food is very serviceable. They aid digestion, they sharpen the appetite, and aid in keeping up the general health and condition of animals To young stock, roots as part of their regular food are of great advantage. For milch cows roots increase the flow of milk, and some varieties improve its quality.

The manure made by the feeding of roots is considered ample remuneration for the food consumed, even where there is no other profit. The roots most generally used for stock feeding are swedes and mangolds. To these are to be added ruta-bagas, parsnips and carrots, each variety having its peculiar value. The parsnip is largely grown in the Channel Islands for feeding cows. It causes them to yield a great flow of milk in good quality. Parsnips yield under favorable circumstances from 500 to [illegible] bushels. The seed is sown in drills 15 inches apart, and the plants thinned to about 9 inches in the row. Carrots are in many respects perferable for stock-feeding to other roots. They contain a greater percentage of flesh, fat and milk-forming principles. They are especially adapted for feeding milch cows. They impart to the milk a desirable color, and do not give an unpleasant flavor to it. They are also greatly relished by young stock, as they are very rich in sugar. As food for horses they are much superior to any other roots. They are very productive.

Some argue that what it costs to raise one steer to sell for $100 would keep four milch cows a year, and their joint produce of butter would be worth $160, or a profit of $60 above beef.

Garden Intelligence.

Tansy tea, poured over cabbage plants after they begin to head, is said to have been found during two seasons a sure defense against the green worm.

Lime slacked to a fine powder and freely dusted over the leaves, is considered the best remedy for the codling moth. To destroy this obnoxious insect the lime power should be plentifully thrown on the apple tree in the spring immediately after the petals fall from the blossoms. At this time the eye of the apple, in which the moth deposits its eggs, opens upwards, the lime falls in the opening and destroys the young moth or egg before it hatches.

Many keep carnations in house or pot until such time as hardy plants are set out, or later in the season; thereby not only having the trouble of taking care of them, but depriving them of a longer season well adapted to their growth. They are best placed out in beds of six rows, nine inches apart, and the same distance between the plants, with an eighteen inch alley between the beds. The carnation is very impatient of a wet soil, and care should be taken that the land be made dry by draining or otherwise. As the carnations grow they throw up flower shoots, which should be cut off all through the season until about the 1st or 15th September. If the plants are wanted for winter flowering, the cutting back of the flower shoots induces a dwarf and stocky growth, which is very desirable in the carnation. If only a few are required to mix in with a general collection of plants, it is more convenient to grow them in pots, so that they may be moved about as may be necessary.

WHAT KILLS FRUIT TREES.—Sometime ago Joseph Hooper, in an address before the Pennsylvania Fruit Growers' Association, made the following excellent remarks on planting fruit trees: Deep planting is one error—to plant a tree rather shallower than it formely stood is really the right way, whilst many plant a tree as they would a post. Roots are of two kinds—the young and tender rootlets, composed entirely of cells, the feeders of the tree, always found near the surface getting air and moisture; and roots of over one year old, which serve only as supporters of the tree and as conductors of its food. Hence the injury that ensues when the delicate rootlets are so deeply buried in earth. Placing fresh or green manure in contact with the young roots is, he tells us, another great error. The place to put manure is on the surface, where the elements disintegrete, dissolve and carry it downward. Numerous forms of fungi are generated and reproduced by the application of such manures directly to the roots, and they immediately attack the tree. It is very well to enrich the soil at transplanting, but the manure, if to be in contact with or very near the roots, should be thoroughly decomposed.

The works on gardening of the last generation said nothing about guano and other fertilisers, and these were unknown to them. They very generally advised the use of "ash compost," made of equal parts of sifted, unleached wood ashes and gypsum or land plaster. Old-fashioned as this may be, it is a capital thing to have on hand. It, of course, should be kept under cover and perfectly dry. When squashes, melons, or any others of the family first break ground, give them a dusting of this mixture of ash-compost. This will protect the young plants from the "stripped bug," and its use may be continued with advantage until the vines get so strong as not to care for this enemy. As a top-dressing to almost any garden crop, it will be found beneficial.

There is scarcely any operation in gardening where there is so much opportunity for the exercise of skill and good judgment as in transplanting. The skilful gardener will move his plants so that they will hardly receive any check in their growth, while the careless removal of plants or the choice of too dry weather, with subsequent neglect, occasions the loss of many thousands of plants every year, and much disappointment. In order to bear transplanting well the plant should be in thrifty, growing condition, but by no means "drawn" or "long-legged," as gardeners are wont to call such plants as have suffered from crowding or too rapid forcing under glass; they should be grown in sandy loam, which favours fibrous growth of roots, and should be well watered a few hours before moving, so as to have the roots moist when moving. Then care should be given to have the loam in which the plants are planted moist enough and warm enough to favour rapid growth; and, if possible, they should be shaded from sun and wind for a few days after transplanting, if the sun is hot.—New England Farmer.

Household Information.

Add a little wood ashes to the flower pots of favorites, and see how quickly it will nourish and improve the growth.

If a little vinegar or some cider is mixed with stove-polish, it will not take much rubbing to make the stove bright, and the blacking is not likely to fly off in fine dust.

Insects if found on the plants in the house, should be destroyed at once by means of tobacco-water or soap-suds. An old tooth-brush may be used on hard-wooded plants. Crush the mealy-bug by the use of a small pointed stick of soft wood, or give it a drop of alcohol from a small brush.

Any old barrel, that would otherwise be thrown away, may be put to good use in making a comfortable place for a hen and chickens. Brace the barrel on the two sides with bricks or stones to keep it from rolling; raise the rear enough to bring the lower edge of the open end close to the ground; drive a few stakes in front and the coop is complete.

FIRM BUTTER WITHOUT ICE.—In families where the diary is small a good plan to have the butter cool without ice is by the process of evaporation, as practiced in India and other warm countries. A cheap plan is to get a very large-sized, porous earthern flower-pot, with a large saucer. Half fill the saucer with water, set it in a trivet or light stand—such as is used for holding hot irons will do; upon this set your butter; over the whole invert the flower pot, letting the top rim of it rest in and be covered by the water; then close the hole in the bottom of the flower-pot with a cork, then dash water over the flower-pot, and repeat the process several times a day, or whenever it looks dry.

The French, who use candles to a greater extent than other nations, have a way of effacing candle-greease which is worth knowing. Instead of applying a hot iron they use a few drops of spirits of wine, rubbing the spots with the hand. The grease becomes powder and leaves no trace.

To destroy moths, get two or three pounds of powdered borax; if necessary untack the carpets around the outer edges, and with a feather or brush, try to shove as much as possible under the surbase; let the borax remain there, it will not injure the carpet. Some make a line of borax all around the surbase and on the carpet.

EATING LEMON.—A good deal has been said through the papers lately about the healthfulness of lemons. The latest advice how to use them runs as follows: "Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know how it is more than doubled by taking another at night, also. The way to get the better of a bilious system without blue pills or quinine, is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as the appetite craves, in as much ice-water as makes it pleasant to drink, without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning, on rising, or at least half an hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. This will cure the system of humors and bile, with mild efficacy, without any of the weakening effects of calomel or mineral water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating the lemons clear; the powerful acid of the juce, which is almost corrisive, infallably produces inflammation after awhile, but properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its full medical work without harm, and when the stomach is clear of food has abundant opportunity to work on the system."

The pangs endured by the early Christian martyrs were no doubt excruciating, but not so prolonged or scarcely more dreadful than those experienced by the sufferers from inflammatory rheumatism—a disease which is easily curable at the outset with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil—a sovereign remedy for pain-a reliable curative of kidney, liver and other complaints, and a medicine of the purest as well as the most salutary kind.

WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 6-1y.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quining Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence., and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Nyman." Sold by all druggists

During the past ten years the Great Shoshonees Remedy has faithfully redeemed every promise and guarantee made to the public. Alarming and apparently hopeless cases of Lung Diseases, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Afflictions of the Kidney and Chronic Complaints of every description, including Scrofula and Skin Diseases of lifelong duration, have been permanently removed and eradicated. Those who volunteered their testimony to the efficacy of the Remedy, are not bogus people in unheard-of localities of foreign countries, but respectable citizens of this country, easy of access and open to question, upon whose verbal recommendations we are willing to rest the reputation of the Great Shoshonees Remedy If you are afflicted, do not delay until medicine may be powerless to aid you. No injurious effects can possibly follow the use of these Indian Remedies, as they contain no minerals, by which the fate of the invalid is so often sealed under the form of some temporary sedative or stimulant. These Indian Remedies are widely known and still possess the public confidence, after the lapse of sufficient time to test their efficacy.

The Shoshonees Vegetable Sugar Coated Pills have won for themselves the most favorable reputation of any pill before the public. Their efficacy has been fully proved as a remedy for billiousness, Sick Headache and inactivities of the stomach. THE ONE DOLLAR BILL.

How it did rain that April night. Name of your undecided showers, with hesitating intervals, as it were, between; none of your mild, persisting patterings on the roof, but a regular tempest, a wild deluge, a rush of arrowy drops, a thunder of opening floods.

Squire Partlet heard the angry rattling against the casements, and drew his snug easy-chair a little to the fire—a great open mass of glittering anthracite—and gazed with a sort of sleepy, reflective satisfaction at the crimson moreen curtains, and the gray cat fast asleep on the hearth, and the canary bird, rolled into a drowsy ball of yellow down on its perch.

"This is snug," quoth the squire. "I am glad I had the leaky spot fixed in the barn roof last week. I don't object to stormy nights once and a while, when a fellow's under cover, and there's nothing in particular to be done, Mary!"

"Yes," Mrs. Partlet answered. She was flitting about between kitchen and sitting-room, with a blue checked apron tied round her waist. "I'm nearly ready to come in now, Josiah. Now I wonder," aside once, "if that was really a knock at the door, or just a little rush of the wind and rain?"

She went to the door nevertheless: and a minute or two afterwards she went to her husband's chair.

"Joe, dear, it's Luke Ruddilove," she said, apprehensively. The squire never looked up from his paper.

"Tell him he made a mistake. The tavern is on the corner beyond."

"But he wants to know if you will lend him a dollar," said Mrs. Partlet.

"And couldn't you have told him 'no' without the preliminary ceremony of coming in here to ask me? Is it likely that I should lend a dollar, or even a cent, to Ruddilove? Why I had a great deal better throw it among yonder red coals! no—of course not!"

Mrs. Partlet hesitated.

"He looks so pinched and cold and wretched, Josiah. He says there is nobody in the world to let him have a cent."

"All the better for him, if he did but know it," sharply enunciated the squire. "If it had come to that pinch a half a dozen years ago, perhaps he wouldn't have been the miserable man he is now."

"We used to go to school together," said Mrs. Partlet, gently. "He was the smartest boy in the class."

"That's probable enough," said the squire, "but that doesn't alter the fact that he is a poor, drunken wretch now. Send him about his business, Polly, and if his time is of any consequence, just let him know that he had better not waste it coming here after dollars."

And the squire leaned back in his chair in a positive fashion, as if the whole matter was definitely decided.

Mrs. Partlet went back to the kitchen, where poor Luke Ruddilove was spreading his thin fingers over the blaze of the fire, his tattered garments steaming with vapor.

"He won't let you have it, Luke," said she; "I thought he wouldn't."

"Then I've got to starve like any other dog!" said Luke Ruddilove, turning away moodily. "And, after all, I don't suppose it makes much difference whether I shuffle out of this world to-day or to-morrow."

"O, Luke, not for your wife?"

"She'd be better without me," said Luke, down-heartedly.

"But she ought not to be."

"'Ought' and 'is' are two different things, Mrs. Partlet. Good night! I ain't going to the tavern, though. I'll wager something the squire thought I was."

"And isn't it natural enough that he should think so, Luke?"

"Yes—yes, Mary, I don't say but what it is," murmured Luke Ruddilove, in the same dejected tone he had used throughout the interview.

"Stay!" Mrs. Partlet called to him, as his hand lay on the door latch, in a low voice. "Here is a dollar Mr. Partlet gave me to buy a new piece of oil-cloth to put in front of the dining-room stove, but I'll try and make the old one do a while longer. And Luke, for the sake of old times, for the sake of your poor wife, will you do better?"

Luke Ruddilove looked vacantly, first at the fresh, new bank-bill in his hand, and then at the blooming young matron who placed it there.

"Thank you, Mary," he said, and crept out of the warm, bright kitchen, into the storm and darkness that reigned outside. Mrs. Partlet stood looking into the kitchen fire.

"I dare say I have done a very foolish thing," she pondered. "But, indeed I could not help it. Of course he will spend it at the public house, and I shall do without my oil-cloth; that will be the end of it all."

And there was a conscious flush on her cheek, as if she had done something wrong, when she rejoined the squire in the sitting-room.

"Well," said Squire Partlet, "has that never-do-well gone at last?"

"Yes."

"To Stoke's tavern, I suppose?"

"I hope not, Josiah."

"I'm afraid it's past hoping for," said the squire, shrugging his shoulders.

"And now for a pleasant evening. How it does rain, to be sure."

And Mrs. Partlet kept the secret of the dollar bill within her own heart.

It was six months afterwards that the squire came into the room where his wife was preserving some great, rosy red apples into jelly.

"Well, well,' quoth the judge, "wonders will never cease. The Ruddiloves have gone away."

"Gone where?"

"I don't know; out west somewhere with a colony. And they say that Luke hasn't touched a drop in six months."

"I am glad of that," said Mrs. Partlet.

"It wont last long," said the squire,"

"Why not?"

"Oh, I don't know. I haven't any faith in these sudden reforms."

Mrs. Partlet was silent. She thought thankfully that after all Luke had not spent the dollar bill for liquor.

Six months—six years—the time sped along in days and weeks, almost before busy little Mrs. Partlet knew that it was gone. The Ruddiloves had got back to Sequoeset.

"They say,' said Mrs. Buckingham, "that he's bought that 'ere lot down opposite the court house, and is going to build such a house as never was."

"He must have prospered greatly," said the gentle Mrs. Partlet.

"And his wife wears a silk gown that will stand alone with its own richness,' said Mrs. Buckingham. "I can remember the time when Luke Ruddilove was nothing but a poor drunken creature."

"All the more credit to him now," said Mrs. Partlet, emphatically.

"It's all to be of stun," said Mrs. Buckingham, "with mantles and inlaid floors. And he's put a lot of papers and things under the corner one."

"The corner of what?" said Mrs. Partlet, laughing, "floor or mantle."

"Stun, to be sure," said Mrs. Buckingham, "like they do in public buildings, you know."

"That is natural enough."

"Well, it's kind o' queer; but Luke Ruddilove never was't like anybody else. Folks think it's dreadful queer he should put a one-dollar bill in with the other things."

Mrs. Partlet felt her cheeks flush scarlet; she glanced up to where the squire was checking off a list of legal items in the bill he was making out against some client, but he never looked round, and Mrs. Buckingham went on with her never-ceasing flow of chit-chat, and so the color died away in her cheek.

After all the money had been her own to give, and the old oil-cloth in front of the dining-room stove had answered very well.

She met Luke Ruddilove that afternoon for the first time since his return to Sequoeset—Luke himself, yet not himself; the demon of intemperance crushed out of his nature, and his better, nobler element, triumphing at last. He looked her brightly in the face, as he held out his hand.

"Mary!"

"I am glad to see you back here again, Luke," she said tremulously.

"And well you may be," he rejoined. "Do you remember the night you gave me the dollar, and begged me not to go to the tavern?"

"Yes."

"That night was the pivot on which my whole destiny turned. You were kind to me when every one else spoke coldly; you trusted me when all other faces were averted. I vowed a vow to myself to prove worthy of your confidence, and I kept it; I did not spend the money; I treasured it up, and heaven has added mightily to my little store. I put the dollar bill under the corner-stone of my new building, for it has risen from it, and it alone. I won't offer it to you back," he added, smilingly, "the luck might go from me with it; but God will help me to keep faithful. I tell you what I will do, Mary; I will give money and words of encouragement to some other poor wretch, as you gave to me."

"Why do you let the waiter blow the foam off your beer?" asked a friend of Poote. "Because," said Poote modestly, "I don't like to blow my own horn."

"How old are you?" asked a conductor of a little girl trying to ride on half fare. "I'm twelve when I'm home, but pa says I'm only nine on the cars."

Sheridan, the first time he met Tom, his son, after the marriage of the latter, seriously angry with him, told him he had made his will, and cut him off with a shilling. Tom said he was indeed, very sorry, and immediately added: "You don't happen to have the shilling about you now, sir, do you?" Old S., burst out laughing, and they became friends again.

A Major loved a maiden so,
His warlike heart was soft as Do.
He oft would kneel to her and say:
"Thou art of life my only Re.
Ah! if but kinder thou would'st be,
And sometimes sweetly smile on Mi.
Thou art my life, my guiding star,
I love thee near, I love the Fa.
My passion I can not control,
Thou art the idol of my Sol."
The maiden smiled and said "ask Pa.
How can you go on thus? Oh, La!"
So "Major" rose from bended knee.
And went her father for to Si.
They married soon, and after that,
They settled down upon "A Flat."
And any one can plainly see
This throws "A Minor" in the key.
If Major lives, he'll scarcely fail
To have them all along the "Scale."

The Bobcaygeon Independent says:—It is highly gratifying to find that the traffic on the Midland Railway continues to increase. The increase in the first four months of 1881 amounts to $6,000 over the same period in 1880, and the jump made in 1880 was something wonderful. The Company is now in a most satisfactory position, and is enabled to pay the interest on all its bonds. Its credit is not surpassed by any company in the Dominion. Of course much of this prosperity is due to the improved condition of the country, but with its finances superintended by Mr. Cox, the President, and its traffic managed by Mr. White, it cannot fail to make the best of every contingency or event that may arise. The Midland for some time past has practically moved its head-quarters from Port Hope to Peterborough, both Mr. Cox and Mr. White having their offices in the latter town. It is now proposed to remove the Secretary's office to Peterborough, and the Port Hope people are raising a terrible wail of agony in consequence. They are going to contest the right of the Company to move its offices from Port Hope. Poor people! Really the innocent simplicity of some persons is amusing.

The proprietor of Burdock Blood Bitters challenges the world to produce the record of a medicine that has achieved a more wonderful success, or better credentials in so short a period as has this great Blood Purifier and System Renovator. Its cures are the marvels of the age. Sample Bottles 10 Cents. 19-2t

Toronto Tribune: Instead of being the cold-blooded and arrogant giant he (Mr. Blake) is depicted, he is really a warm-hearted and impulsive man, full of kindness and sympathy, ready to assist others, and able to offer his aid without any appearance of patronizing condescension. Natural diffidence and the life-long habit of intense application, have imparted an exterior which leaves him open to misunderstanding, and this has been made the most of by his opponents; but all his friends will rejoice to learn that since his accession to the leadership and his devotion to the duties of the position, he has greatly improved, and become like what is recognized by his intimate acquaintances as his real self.

"Women Never Think."—If the crabbed old bachelor who uttered this sentiment could but witness the intense thought, deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best medicines to keep their families well, and would note their sagacity and wisdom in selecting Hop Bitters as the best, and demonstrating it by keeping their families in perpetual health, at a mere nominal expense, he would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.—Picayune. 20-2t

Toronto Globe:—The road from Toronto to Ottawa should, as an active competitor for through traffic, be built on the shortest practicable line between the two points. Under the terms of the charter, a new line in place of the Grand Junction must be built. Why not build it now? The extra work need not cause a delay of a day in the opening of a through line, while the investigating public, or at least such part of it as knows anything, would not look with less disfavour on the scheme because the projected line was independent throughout from the start.

"I don't want that Stuff," is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At the first attack thereafter, it was administered to her with such good results that she continued its use until cured, and was so enthusiastic in its praise, that she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That "stuff" is Hop Bitters.—Standard. 20-2t

The supply of ministers in the Methodist Church is equal to the demand, and the Guardian wishes to see the brakes put on. The salaries of ministers have been reduced by overcrowding, and some useful men have been forced into superannuation before their time. The Guardian accordingly suggests that more discrimination should be exercised in the recommendation of young men for the ministry, and that a higher educational test should be insisted on.

Thomas Robinson, Farnham Centre, P. Q., writes:—"I have been afflicted with Rheumatism for the last ten years, and have tried many remedies without any relief. I got a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and found it gave me instant relief, and since then have had no attack. I would recommend it to all."

TEAS! TEAS!
CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

First:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

Second:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

Third:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

A Great Cause of Human Misery
Is the Loss of
MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.
Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

MUSIC. Now that spring has arrived and the air is laden with the songs of birds and the delicious and balmy odour of spring, it is but proper that the Band should be called on for some music, in order to perfect the general pleasure and the harmony of nature. It is to be hoped that the Court House Green will be again secured this year. It would be advisable to start the evening concerts early, that those who are temporarily unprovided with escorts may not be deprived of thir share in the treat.

ENTERTAINMENT.—As was announced, Friendship Temple gave an entertainment in the Good Templars Hall on Tuesday evening last. It was fairly attended, considering that the evening was very wet. Mr. D. Pentland occupied the chair, and the following took part in the entertainment:—Miss Heather, Miss Jessie Logan, Mr. D. Galletly, Miss Stratton, Mr. S. Allen, Miss Martin, Mr. G. Sproule, Rev. E. J. Stobo, Miss Evans, Mr. A. Clegg, with Miss Lech as accompanist; and judging from the warm applause that greeted them they pleased the audience.

PRESENTATION.—On Saturday evening Mr. John Simpson, who has had charge of the fulling department at the Auburn Mills, was, on the occasion of his leaving for Lakefield, presented with a purse containing a sum of money, accompanied by an address, signed on behalf of the millhands by the foremen of the departments:—Wm. Evans, carder; Jno. Smith, dresser; P. Welsh, spinner; W. Morrison, designer; W. Somerville, weaver; and D. McIntosh, dyer. Mr. Simpson in replying expressed his gratification at the mark of friendship from those with whom he has been associated.

WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS.—On Saturday the horse of Mr. Wm. Howden, while standing on the street opposite the EXAMINER office, was frightened by a bit of paper blown by the wind. Starting suddenly, he overturned the two-wheeled vehicle to which he was attached; this started the horse of Mr. Sheffield standing next, and untied, which attempted to run away; the wheels of Mr. Sheffield's phaeton caught in those of another carriage and both were overturned. Thus the three vehicles were united in a general upset. The frightened horses were promptly caught, so that little damage was done.

THE LATE DR. DEAN.—The sudden death of Dr. Dean, of Keene, was doubtless caused by heart disease, from which he had suffered for years. On the afternoon preceding his death he was attacked by a very severe pain in his chest while on his way up the river in his yacht. This was between four and five o'clock. Dr. Miller was sent for at nine o'clock, and agreed with the patient that the case was extremely serious. Dr. Dean was then unable to take medicine, as he was vomiting, and he soon became pulseless. He died at half-past nine. Further medical aid was sent for, but did not arrive till after the death of the patient. He was a general favourite, with his brethren of the profession, as with the public generally, and will be much missed, in Keene and elsewhere.

MEDAL.—The medal to be given as first prize to the winner of the mile dash on on the 24th May has arrived from Montreal. The design is very pretty and artistic, and received the personal attention of Mr. Stevenson, of that place, who kindly presented the medal to the Peterborough Snow Shoe Club last winter. The lower, portion, which is of gold, has the figure of a runner engraved on it. Above this are two miniature bats of silver crossed, over-tipped by a monogram of the Peterborough Boating and Cricket Clubs. Above this again is a representation in silver of a single sculling boat, with oars annexed. The whole is valued at between $15 and $20. It is to be hoped that no one from the neighboring towns will have the honor of carrying it off, but that some one from Peterborough will be the lucky winner. It is on exhibition in Mr. McClelland's window.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY EXCURSION.—The steamer Golden-Eye will on the 24th leave Peterborough at 7 o'clock a.m., calling at intermediate landings, carrying excursionists to the Grand Regatta at Idyl-Wild on that day. Return tickets 50 cents. Steamers will also run from Keene, Hastings and Bewdley; and palace scows will be attached for dancing. The races will comprise an amateur single-scull contest for the championship cup, a four-oared race for silver medals, a single canoe championship race, and a double canoe contest for a cup. A free gift competition will take place among the passengers on the Golden-Eye for a canoe to the gentleman and a sewing-machine to the lady drawing the highest number. There will be a hop in the pavilion; and excursionists will be allowed to fish on the holiday. After the regatta Mr. H. Calcutt will deliver a lecture on "The Great North-West." The railways will also run excursion trains at reduced rates for accommodation of visitors at Idyl-Wild.

IN CHANCERY!—There are well grounded fears in the minds of many ratepayers, who cannot be accused of any undue friendliness to the Midland Railway, that there is no use in the town running its head against a stone wall, in opposing the wishes of the President of the road in his desire to have the General Traffic Agent's, and the Secretary-Treasurer's offices at Peterborough. Presuming for the sake of argument that legally they should remain at Port Hope, the desire not to embarrass Mr. Cox and his co-Directors, has probably prevented the Council from moving in the matter, as has now been done by a ratepayer. What is sincerely to be hoped for is, that the town will not be made to play the part of the cat picking the chestnuts out of the fire, and the whole community be made to suffer as a consequence. There can be no question but that the Directors of the line will be annoyed at the step that has been taken, yet at the same time they should thoroughly understand that it is not the town which has taken the matter in hand, but a ratepayer, or a few ratepayers, who are only exercising the privilege the Legislature has conferred on them.—Port Hope News.

THE 24TH IN PETERBOROUGH.—Sports and games will form the main attraction to Peterborough on the Queen's Birthday. They will be held on the Agricultural Grounds, and will doubtless attract many visitors, as the Boating and Cricket Clubs, which are getting them up, are well known in Town and County for providing exceedingly good things in this line. Reduced Railway fares will enable many of the "County Cousins" to make a pleasant day of it in town. The 'Rangers' Band will furnish select music, and for its benefit a Promenade Concert will be given in the evening. The Grand Junction Railway will run a return train from town in the evening. The following is the programme of games with prizes:—

WOULDN'T OR COULDN'T?—On Friday last, a lad named George Rose, a pupil in the South Ward School, came across the word "permitted" during recitation. He spelled it all right; but failed to pronounce it properly. His teacher, Mr. M. R. Kidd, tried for fully half an hour to get him to speak the word properly; but, though he could utter the detached sounds satisfactorily, he always bungled the entire word. Thinking that this arose from stubbornness on the part of the lad, Mr. Kidd used the raw-hide upon him, but still the boy declared he could not pronounce the word. The lash was repeatedly applied to him; but did not assist his tongue in framing the proper sounds; but it did leave sundry marks on the boy's legs and body. The father of the lad preferred a charge of assault upon the boy, and Mr. Kidd on Tuesday morning appeared before the Police Magistrate to answer the complaint. Mr. Moore appeared for complainant and Mr. Dumble for defendent. Several witnesses were examined and facts disclosed substantially as given above. It was pretty clearly established that the boy has an impediment in his speech which rendered it impossible for him to properly pronounce the word "permitted." After hearing the arguments of counsel and summing up the circumstances, with the relations between teacher and pupil, the Magistrate adjudged that Mr. Kidd should pay a fine of $2 for the assault proven, and the costs of the case.

PERSONAL.

Sheriff Kempt, of Victoria County, has been seriously ill for some time.

Mr. W. Bruce Ferguson, Superintendent of the Midland Railway, was in town on Friday last.

Mr. Weatherston, General Superintendent of the Grand Junction Railway, was in Peterborough on Friday last.

Mr. T. B. Tait, Superintendent of the Victoria Railway, was in town over Sunday.

Mr. F. Tait left on Tuesday morning for Colorado, to take his position on the Rio Grande line.

Mr. D. A. McFarlane, of Otonabee, started last week on a trip to Dakota and Manitoba, for pleasure and to see the country.

Mr. F. A. Hilton, clerk in the law office of Poussette & Roger, in his successful examination for attorney stood third in a list of thirty-seven.

The sudden death is announced of Thos. J. Bayley, C. E. of Charlottotown, P. E. I., whose wife, a lady of Peterborough, is left with a little daughter.

The Rev. N. R. Willoughby has improved very much in health since returning to his home in Brampton. The reverend gentleman's many friends in this town and vicinity will be pleased to hear this.

Mr. H Calcutt, of this town has taken in hand the Silver Hights Brewery, near Winnipeg. Manitoba is likely to have good beer, at least. He will offer for sale next Monday, his steamers, Idyl-Wild, and mining lands in Galway.

R. Clegg and M. Jameson, both of this town, have been made, the first Grand Lecturer, and the second a District Deputy Grand Master, in connection with the True Blues. C. Robertson is Associate Treasurer of the Grand Lodge.

During the past week Joseph Lee, W. A. King and son, Mrs. Thos. Lee, W. H. Quinlan and E. Donnelly, left for Dakota; E. Tangney, his mother, brother and sister, for Iowa; and C. Scobell and H. Morgan, for Manitoba.

Mr. Francis Lemay, who was father of Mr. David Lemay of this town, and Mr. Francis Lemay of Lindsay, died on the 7th inst., in Montreal, aged ninety years. He was a Veteran of the war of 1812, and held the Chateauguay medal, commemorating a glorious victory for the Canadians under the gallant de Salaberry. In that fight Lemay received a bullet wound, in that most dangerous of all positions, the thigh. He was fond of recalling scenes in his military career with the Voltigeur corps and giving personal sketches of the officers of that fine regiment. He was granted a pension by the Canadian Government, and lived long in the enjoyment of reverence from a numerous posterity. His widow survives, with three sons, two daughters and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

The Emerson, Manitoba, International, noticing a call from Mr. Thos. Gladman, of this town, says:—"Mr. Gladman was born at Moose Factory, on James Bay, and educated at St. John's College, Winnipeg, his father having been in the Hudson Bay Co.'s service. Mr. G. has just been on a visit to Winnipeg, which he left forty years ago, and has not seen since till last week, and to say that he is astonished at the changes that have taken place in our flourishing capital as well as elsewhere throughout the Province, is putting it very mildly. One of the great changes that have taken place in the country during that time is illustrated by Mr. Gladman's departure from, and return to the country. When he left the country in 1841, the route east was via the Winnipeg river, Lake of the Woods and the water stretches to Fort William; thence along the north shore of Lake Superior to the "Soo;" the mode of transportation being a canoe, and the trip occupying three months. Last week Mr. G. returned by an all-rail route and in three days time.

The School Board, which has been disputing with the Village Council of Fenelon Falls concerning the amounts to be paid by the village and part of the township which jointly compose the section, has moved for a mandamus to compel the village to pay the amount claimed.

Says the Bobcaygeon Independent:—"There appear to be a strong inclination on the part of the Toronto Party dailies, to work up a big monopoly in the business. In competition with the Provincial weeklies, weekly rehashes of the dailies are published for about the cost of the paper consumed. Evening papers are now to be published, to compete with the Independent evening journals, and one of them has even gone into the comic business. But the effort will not be successful so long as they allow the Provincial Press to be conducted by clever and experienced journalists, and fill up their staffs with riff-raff recruits."

Toronto Telegram:—The women are being congratulated on the fact that by order of the Senate of the University of Toronto, in the Faculty of Arts, the examinations, together with the medals and prizes, the certificates of honour, scholarships and degrees, are open to them on the same conditions as to men, excepting that it is not imperative on them to attend lectures in any affiliated college. If any man will reflect upon the solitary situation in which women are placed, the ill-treatment to which they are sometimes exposed, and must endure in silence, without the power of complaining, he must feel convinced that the happiness of a woman will be materially increased in proportion as education has given to her the habit and means of drawing her resources from herself. Besides, why are we necessarily to doom a girl, whatever her taste or capacity may be, to one unwearied line of petty and frivolous occupation? If she be full of strong sense and elevated curiosity can their be any reason why she should be diluted and enfeebled down to a mere culler of simples and worker of antimacassars, or sent like a butterfly to hover over the idle flowers of the field?

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Town Council met, pursuant to former adjournment, on Monday evening. Present, the Mayor, in the chair, and Councillors Cahill, Chamberlain, Hartley, Kelly, McNaughton, Richardson, Rutherford, Taylor and Yelland.

The minutes of last meeting being read, were confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The following communications were disposed of as severally stated below:—

A statement from the proper officers of receipts and expenditures was referred to the Finance Committee.

A letter from the Police Magistrate, calling attention to the fact that no provision is made for payment of witnesses at the Police Court, and asking the Council to appropriate a small sum in the hands of the Police Clerk for the purpose, was referred to the Finance Committee.

From J. W. Fitzgerald, calling attention to the Smith Street Bridge.—Referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

From Jas. Stevenson stating that he had been called on to pay taxes for property in Charlotte Street, for payment of which he held the Collector's receipt.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

From Thomas Beavis, jr., stating that he had been assessed for statute labour, enclosed certificate showing that he had done it in Smith Township, and requesting that he be relieved.—On motion, the request was granted.

Petition from John P. Metheral and others, for repairs to street and sidewalk, and for a new sidewalk.—Referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

From Edmund Webb and others, to have sidewalk on Stewart Street continued.—Similarly referred.

A communication from Mr. H. Nichols, stating that the Midland Railway intended to make improvements about the station by planting trees, erecting a fountain, &c., and asking that the town furnish about forty trees, was received.

A petition from T. Fitzgerald and others, concerning the watering of Charlotte Street to Stewart Street, was referred to the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, with power to act.

A communication from N. D. Beck, asking sidewalk on the south side of Brock Street, formerly directed to be laid by the Council.—Granted.

A petition of John Lockhart and others, that a wooden sidewalk on Murray St., be planked, was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

A petition from D. J. Laudy and others, praying for the watering of Queen Street, was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee, with power to act.

A communication from Mr. Wm. Toole, was referred to the Industrial Committee, to be called together by the Mayor when he thinks advisable. The letter called attention to a new manufacturing industry which the writer thought would meet with approval, and give employment to a considerable number of skilled mechanics. The amount of assistance required from the town would be very moderate; and the applicant would be glad to furnish particulars [illegible] meeting, if notified.

A communication from J. W. Fitzgerald, concerning a park lot, was referred to the Joint Committee of the Town and County Councils.

A letter from Ed. Green called attention to the condition of Charlotte Street, near the river bank.—Refered to Street and Bridge Committee.

A petition from Jos. Hall and others, praying that the south side of McDonell Street be repaired with scrapings from other streets, was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

An application from Mr. McNamara, for re-payment of arrears charged against his property, enclosed an affidavit that the amount had been paid before.—Ordered that the money be refunded.

ACCOUNTS.

County, conveying prisoners to gaol, $59.12; referred to Finance Committee. J. R. Stratton, printing, $28.50; to be paid when certified. Dr. H. C. Burrit, consultation and assisting to amputate the leg of Ann Brennan, $15; ordered paid. Mr. Madden, 3 days street watering, $9; ordered paid. John Garvey, supplies ordered, $6.10; referred to Finance Committee. John Garvey, cleaning and repairing store, and damage to goods, $50; referred to the Chief Constable, to report to the Council.

REPORTS.

The Finance Committee recommended payment of two accounts from the Gas Co., for $10.80 and $15.30; that the Collector pay into the town treasury $4.43, and $12.39, amounts charged as arrears of taxes, but for which receipts have been produced; that the late treasurer be requested to pay $6.33, similiary charged and similarly accounted for by receipt from him; that $8.42, an error, be written off the tax-arrears roll; that $16.63 be refunded to Jas. Bradburn, and $2.33 to C. Halpin; and, stated that the accounts of the Collector as audited had been allowed by the Committee. On motion the report was received and adopted.

Coun. Hartley, from the Joint Committee of the Town and County Councils reported that the members from the Town had met those from the County; that it was decided the present flooring of the Lock's bridge should be taken up, cut across the centre and reversed, and a new portion be put in all the way across, and the bridge receive a new coat of tar, and that the iron bridge be replanked and painted; and the committee also recommend the planting of more trees in the Court House park. The report was, on motion, received and adopted.

A DEPRECIATED POUND.

Constable McGhee reported the pound in Ward No. 1 in need of repair. Part of it was washed away and complaints were made that there is no place to keep cattle.—Referred to Mr. Beavis with power to act.

WATER WORKS AGAIN.

Coun. Rutherford, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, stated the fire engine is so much out of repair that something must be done. The tubes are temporarily patched up, and it is probable new tubes will have to be sent for to the place where the engine was made. This condition of affairs placed the town in a very precarious condition. There was no time when material for waterworks could be got so cheaply as now. A new engine will cost $10,000, and with a little more waterworks could be had.

Coun. Yelland asked what had become of the small engines got some time ago. It appeared no one could be got willing to work them. Could they not be made available? They should be looked up and placed in working order

Coun. McNaughton declared they were used for watering flowers.

Coun. Cahill,—"Yes."

Coun. Rutherford said the small engines were got in 1877, he thought, and placed in several parts of the town. The large engine got out of repair and one of the small ones was brought down to the fire hall and remained there. A company had been formed to work it, but the Council refusing to give them a few dollars they disbanded. He didn't think the small engines amounted to anything. He would like to have some power from the Council to deal with necessary repairs to the steamer.

On motion Mr. Stevenson was heard in reference to fire protection. He expressed himself as thankful in thus being allowed to address the Council in reference to so important a matter. He would not like to be a member of the Council and be liable to the responsibility in view of the danger of seeing half the town burned down. He had taken an active part in getting the fire engine, as the best protection that could then be procured. But the engine might give out at any time, and town protection be made entirely dependent upon buckets. He had tried to advance an act last year providing for local taxation for water works, but had not received sufficient co-operation in his efforts. He had two offers in his desk at home to construct works from Dixon's mill for $14,000. If he laid them before the Council he would be accused of having some object in view. He had an object—the protection of his property. When anything of the kind came up it was opposed by a cabal of outsiders. The Council would see that this was a more important matter than the spending of money in repairing streets. If the town were burned down all would have to pay more taxes. If George Street were cleaned out, the bulk of the taxes now collected from it would be distributed over the whole town. Mr. Rutherford felt his responsibility as Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, and he thought the whole Council should feel equally anxious. When the offers to which he alluded were made iron was dearer than at present. It only costs Port Hope $450 for its fire department, and $250 for the right to use water, which Peterboro' would get for nothing, for a term of years at least. A thing he saw doing well elsewhere he was willing to go in for. Port Hope had efficient protection; Peterborough had not. If the engine collapses we are at the mercy of the flames. A late fire on George street might have been put out easily; but it did much damage because the hose could not be coupled. In one way this was not a mere matter of dollars and cents. But if property is destroyed where are the taxes to come from? He thought the Council, particularly interested in the welfare of the town, should move in this important matter of water works. Not only would there be a gain in feeling secure, but on insurances. No man would insure half so high if he had the security afforded by a good system of water works. Where he now had $400 he would have [illegible] insurance. In [illegible] town paid for the system. It might be said that this was unjust to those who did not get the water. But a pipe could not be carried to every man's door. He thought an act would be passed whereby local taxation would be available for such purposes. If pressed it might have been got last year. He believed for $12,000 good water works could be had for George street. There was not a man but, if he owned the whole of George street, would have water works at his own expense; and the Council was, in a sense, like the owner of the property and therefore bound to see to its proper protection.

Mr. Bradburn being present was called on to express his views. He entirely endorsed the observations of Mr. Stevenson.

Coun. Yelland while agreeing in the desirability of water works for the town, thought too much was being put upon the Council, which could only act in accordance with the expressed will of the people.

Coun. Richardson would go hand in hand with those who proposed water works if the cost was not put on those who would not be benefitted. If George street wanted water works and liked to pay for them the people of the outskirts would have no objection.

Coun. Hartley thought that rather than buy a new engine the town should have water works. He didn't think even the outsiders would have any objection to pay for works on George street. If part of the town was burned down the loss would lie upon the whole. By and by water works would be wanted all over the town.

Mr. Stevenson, being again permitted to speak, said he had gone to some expense to get up plans and lay them before the Council, with whom they yet remained. This was doing something. He had tenders yet in his desk. He was sure if the town asked for plans it could get them. The town was now in a good position, having $21,000 to its credit. It had got rid of its railway debts, and by 1891 the M. L. Fund debt would be called up, and half the debentures paid. A new fire-engine would cost little short of $12,000.

Coun. Chamberlain didn't think it fair that such a question should be brought up without giving notice, so that members might come prepared to enter fully into the subject. The town could not spend money better than in a good system of water works. He would move that the subject be left over till next meeting, by which time it could be considered.

No seconder being found for Coun. Chamberlain's resolution,

Coun. Rutherford rose and declared the people were sick and tired of petitioning the Council for water-works. The town must soon get a new fire-engine or water-works. To wait till the people asked what was necessary and proper to do would subject the Council to blame. He supposed if a few went round with a petition, two-thirds of the people on George street would sign it. Encouragement to industries was all very well, but here was something that came home to the Council. No town in the Province was better adapted to water-works than this. He believed they would pay for themselves in a few years. Those who wanted them were willing to tax themselves.

It was moved by Coun. Rutherford, seconded by Coun. Hartley, that a special committee of the Council and citizens be appointed to take into consideration the subject of some better protection from fire, consisting of Messrs. Cahill, Taylor, Chamberlain, Rutherford, Hartley, Cox, Stevenson, Bradburn, Clurton, Hazlitt, Dennistoun, Carnegie, Dumble, J. R. Stratton and Robertson.

Coun. Yelland held that it was the part of the Council to act on a petition of the ratepayers, and not to place itself in any initiative position with certain persons.

Coun. Cahill thought it was not fair to throw this matter entirely on the Council. If the town had water-works, it would have to keep a fire-engine. Instead of trying to throw this matter on the Council, those more interested should enter into it and bring forward some scheme. As to repairs to the fire-engine, that matter was in the hands of Coun. Rutherford, as Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee.

Coun. Chamberlain urged delay, by which nothing would be lost; but if the Council took steps in the matter, it would be hard to retreat.

Coun. McNaughton thought a good many of his colleagues had "water on the brain." At a former meeting to consider the question of water-works, only six ratepayers from George Street put in an appearance.

The motion was carried.

PUBLICATION OF AUDITORS' REPORT.

Coun. Chamberlain thought as it had been decided to enter upon this big undertaking, the ratepayers should know just how they stood financially. He would, therefore, move that the Auditors' report for last year be published in detail in the three papers, the cost not to exceed $30 for each paper.

This found no seconder.

HEALTH OFFICERS.

A by-law to repeal and amend former by-laws relating to the appointment of Health officers was read a first time, and the Council went into Committee on the second reading, Coun. Taylor in the chair. The change consisted in making the whole Health Committee of the Council Health officers with the present officers, Messrs. Beavis and McGhee, and adding the names of Messrs. Johnston and Cummings.

Coun. Chamberlain said men were paid to perform the duties of Health officers, and should be compelled to do them.

Coun. Yelland thought this matter now came up because constables McGhee and Beavis didn't pull together. The Council should know the reason. He would retain the present officers; make them do their duty, or discharge them altogether.

Coun. Hartley didn't see why there should be so many Health officers. Divided among so many nothing would be done.

The Mayor explained that the Statute provided that Health officers be appointed by by-law. This by-law merely added two more names.

Constable Johnston rose to remark that he had enough to do already.

Coun. McNaughton held that if men were appointed to do extra duties they could collect extra pay.

The Mayor further explained that the addition of members of the Council was merely to give the acting officers some Councillors to consult with. Notices had to be signed by two members of the Health Board.

Coun. McNaughton would retain McGhee and Beavis, and if they did not act together, discharge them.

Coun. Rutherford was astonished at objections. The arrangement was only for convenience. It was not expected that every member would go round inspecting the back-yards, &c.

Coun. Yelland held that there were now members enough; then why throw the work on others?

Coun. Chamberlain thought if all were put on the same footing as Health officers, all would be alike called on to act as such.

The Mayor read clauses from the statute showing that the whole Council comprised the Board of Health unless it delegated its power by by-law. It was a simple matter of convenience that a small number act instead of the whole Council.

Mr. Beavis obtaining leave to speak denied that he refused to sign notices; but he had refused to be a party to a complaint against certain persons with whom he had made arrangements for cleaning away filth.

Councillor Yelland said that in a case against Choate, brought up by McGhee, Beavis had been called as a witness and swore there was no nuisance. It appeared as if there was some personal feeling between these two men. If so, they should lay it aside and do their duty. If they do not, they should be discharged.

Mr. Beavis gave his version of the Choate case. He had been called to see the premises complained of by McGhee and found the persons accused were doing all they could to remedy matters; and being called as a witness he had so declared in evidence.

After some further discussion, in accordance with a motion supported by the votes of four other members and the chairman, the committee rose.

REPAIRS AND SPRING CLEANING.

On motion of Councillor Yelland, seconded by Councillor Cahill, the Clerk was instructed to get repairs made to the plastering and have the rooms in the Town Hall cleaned and whitewashed.

MORE STREET WORK.

Mr. Ford was heard concerning the condition of the sidewalk on London St., west of George. Referred to Street and Bridge Committee.

It was also ordered that Hunter street be gravelled from the Iron Bridge to Water street; Simcoe street where required, and that the sidewalk on Antrim street be repaired.

Coun. Rutherford would like to know when the Street and Bridge Committee was going to report to the Council.

Coun. Cahill said there were dozens of bad sidewalks in different parts of the town to be repaired. These things might as well be done first as last, and would keep the Committee busy.

ARREARS OF TAXES.

On motion of Coun. Cahill, seconded by Coun. Taylor, the Collector was instructed to make out, as soon as the roll is returned, a list of all persons against whom arrearages of taxes are returned, mail notices to them, and charge postage to the town.

On motion of Coun. Chamberlain, seconded by Coun. Yelland, the Collector was instructed to make out a list of persons whose taxes are unpaid at the present date, and present it to the Council at its next meeting.

A CHARITY PATIENT.

On motion of Coun. Yelland, seconded by Coun. Rutherford the Clerk was instructed to send the town physician to see and report upon the condition of the man, Noble, for whose care at the Protestant Home the Council pays.

TWENTY ONE DAYS.

On motion of Coun. Hartley, seconded by Coun. McNaughton, the Council adjourned for three weeks.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 26, 1881.

The Latest "Descent from the Bench."

The "descent from the Bench" of Hon. Vice-Chancellor Blake immediately after the elevation of another to the Chancellorship has, not unnaturally, given rise to the remark that his abandonment of the judicial position was the result of pique on his part, that he was not promoted to the vacancy. The Toronto World attempts to show that the honourable gentleman has some cause to feel slighted, inasmuch as the principle of Judiciary promotions has generally been recognized. This is all very well so far as it goes; but it does not go deep enough. If the man chosen for Chancellor be better fitted, or even as well able, to fill the position as the Vice-Chancellor over whom he is placed, the judicial mind in particular has no right to be disturbed. Then, too, the Vice-Chancellor may be considered as possessing in an eminent degree such knowledge and attributes as make it particularly desirable that he should be retained in the secondary chair. In such a case strict adherence to the promotion system would be both injudicious and inappropriate; and to suggest that the unpromoted one should resign under such circumstances is to accuse him of lack of that fitness for the Judiciary he was supposed to have possessed. We prefer to believe Mr. Blake's own words, uttered long before his retirement, that such would be his action when he felt the ermine weigh upon him so heavily as to interfere with his free progress as a social and moral reformer and Christian worker. Such being his views, his resignation was inevitable, had there been no necessity for the appointment of a Chancellor. Hon. Samuel H. Blake has amply proved himself a searcher for a living man's work, in the most advanced acceptation of the term. His aims were undoubtedly hindered and his usefulness marred by his position on the Bench, by the restraints it imposed upon him. As a Christian gentleman he felt called upon to wield his influence in a certain direction; but many could not, or would not, distinguish between his personal and judicial influence. In any position, in any project, he could not wholly divest himself of the practical robe of justice. Not only were his extra judicial efforts subject to misconstruction and misrepresentation; they also reflected upon his judicial influence. That he felt these difficulties is evidenced by his utterances; and certain it is that the impossibility of continuing to labour under them was recently made perfectly, and even painfully, plain to him. Opponents on the temperance question, and in the church, too, had begun to accuse him of using his position as a Judge in his social and religious efforts; and some had even gone so far as to declare that his tectotal and sectarian views had coloured his decisions from the Bench. Then, to crown all, on the announcement of the appointment of a successor to the late Chancellor, the Globe came out with a leader in which, while approving of the choice made, it remarked upon the probability of the elevation of the Vice-Chancellor, "but for the animus created in "certain quarters by his active interven- "tion in matters outside of his judicial "sphere." In the face of such public expressions what could Mr. Blake do? He must either give up his "active intervention in "matters outside of his judicial sphere" or resign the Vice-Chancellorship; and as he had formerly decided on the latter course should the necessity for such a choice arise, he very properly resigned.

We hope Mr. Blake will now feel himself comfortably able to be as energetic as before, and more successful than ever, in advancing the reforms of which he is so devoted an advocate; and that to render his efforts more publicly powerful he will enter Parliament; where his talents, perseverance and probity cannot but be of immense service to his country.

Editorial Notes.

During the discussion which took place in Parliament regarding the value of the land subsidy to the Syndicate, it will be remembered that Government supporters estimated on the basis of $1 per acre, while Mr. Blake and his followers contended that the lands in the "belts" were worth an average of $3.18. The Syndicate now advertise the lands at $6.50 an acre "until further notice." Even if no further increase be made, the land subsidy at this rate foots up to $62,500,000, or more than double of the $25,000,000 contended for by the Government. But, considering that the price will go up steadily with the influx of settlers, it will be readily seen that the Syndicate lands alone contain an incalculable bonanza, particularly as the settlers must pay all the taxes for twenty years, and the Syndicate none.

THE TORONTO Mail rises to remark, apropos of the grinding-in-bond question, that the Government have not allowed the Order-in-Council compelling millers to export the exact equivalent of American wheat imported; nor is there any indication that the Government intend doing so. Coming from such a source this declaration appears to have the weight of authority; but the facts seem to show that the compulsion is upon, rather than with, the Government. How is it, else, that millers who imported American wheat have neither exported its product, nor paid duty on the import, even though the time has long elapsed wherein they should have done one or other? Where does the typical "coach and four" get through?

GRINDING IN BOND.

The following extracts from a letter, from Mr. Henry Deane, of this town, to the Toronto Mail, furnishes practical evidence of the correctness of THE EXAMINER'S contentions regarding "protection to the farmers," anterior to the elections of 1878. Experience of the N. P. is rapidly dispelling many of its illusions:—

"To the Editor of the Mail.

"SIR,—In your issue of the 12th, I find two letters signed respectively by Mr. William Lukes, of Toronto, and Mr. Geo. C. Rogers, of Peterborough. I am of the opinion that the arguments, if they may be called such, advanced by these gentlemen have been so fairly and fully met by the letter of Mr. William Cluxton, which appeared in your columns a few days since, that a reply is scarcely necessary, but there are some points to which it may not be out of place to devote a little attention. Mr. Lukes, who is known as a professional apologist for the Government regulations, for no other reason than that they happen to be Government regulations, expresses the opinion that the anomaly under which the millers labour in relation to the tariff has no parallel in any manufacturing industry in the country. This is a singular admission on the part of one who is exerting his utmost to maintain and continue the anomalous condition of things which those who, like myself have their capital invested in the milling trade, are endeavoring to induce the Government to remove. Mr. Lukes further admits that the "supply of flour will continue to be met, as at present, by the American millers." There again, Mr. Lukes touches upon the very ground of our complaint. It was assumed that the duty was placed upon American grain and flour for the express purpose of giving Canadian manufacturers the control of their home market, and so very strong were these assurances that many persons increased the capital invested in the milling trade, reasonably expecting that they would be protected in the supply for home consumption, and that the farmer would receive an enhanced price for his grain by the shutting out of American competition without oppression to the consumer. * *

He [the Customs' officer] gave Mr. Rogers the only form of bond which he had, and the same as all other millers are using, and by means of which they are enabled to evade the payment of duty. * * * Mr. Cluxton, in his letter, said * * * any grinder in bond * * * could take the form of declaration now used without committing perjury. * * * — that "any merchant or business man would in ten minutes draft such a form of oath as no customs broker or miller could subscribe to and ship other than the actual product of the wheat imported without committing perjury." * * * Mr. Lukes seems to be unaware that the measure he refers to as being "contemplated" is not a measure of relief, but a proposition to aggravate the evil of which we complain. The remedy has been suggested as plainly as it is possible to suggest anything, and it is this:—If the farmers and local millers are to be "protected" by a duty, let the duty be honestly and straightforwardly carried out; otherwise let it be abandoned, and let all be placed on an equal footing. Under the present conditions, protection—as to flour and grain—for the general public exists only in name; and, for the millers, it is applied only so far as diverts the control of the trade from the millers generally into (as Mr. L. admits) the hands of the "American millers," and is evaded and set aside for the benefit of the Welland and Lachine millers, who prefer to use foreign grain brought in in spite of the "duty" in preference to paying a slightly enhanced price for the product of our own soil. * * * * *

Mr. Rogers says "Ontario will not now produce wheat to make strong bakers' flour to compete with the American flours." If that be the case, what possible object can he see in the duty, unless it be for the mere purpose of increasing the cost of breadstuffs without earthly benefit to the Canadian producer? He asserts again that "Montreal and Lower Province trade is being exclusively supplied by American strong flours." If that be the case, how can it be claimed that the grain duty has kept the Canadian market for the Canadians and not for the Americans"? and why is it that the Welland and Lachine millers insist on the maintenance of the duty, so long as they are supplied with a method of evading it? * * *

Did it not strike Mr. Rogers, * * * that it was somewhat strange that our spring wheat, which was considered so desirable, and which was in such demand in Montreal in 1879, should all at once become so valueless? The firm of Montreal millers to which Mr. Rogers refers did buy several lots of wheat here in the fall of 1879; but the true reason was * * * because, by an oversight of the Grand Trunk railway officers, these millers (and the name of the firm can be given if necessary) had their summer contract rate for freight allowed to run along into the autumn, and thus their wheat pay enabled several cents per bush. less from Port Hope to Montreal than another shippers paid. * * * The Government design to aid, solely, the interests of the producer, the consumer, and the local millers for the benefit of a few wealthy monopolists on the canals, they cannot do better than go, take the advice of Mr. Lukes and Mr. Rogers; but if they wish to benefit the milling trade generally, and do justice to all, they will decide either to have a duty squarely enforced, or to have no duty at all. Could anything more completely serve to illustrate the utterly illusory character of the so-called "protection" on grain than Mr. Rogers' candid declaration that 'the Government still holds his bonds for the duty on grain imported, ground and sold amongst us last year'?"

LABOUR AND LEGISLATION.

(From the French of Mr. Garnier.)

The power by which a nation creates its wealth is its labour; and the quantity of wealth created will increase in direct proportion as the power increases. But the increase of this last may take place in two ways—in energy, and in extent. Labour increases in energy, when the same quantity furnishes a more abundant product; and the two great means of effecting the increase, or of perfecting the productive powers of labour, are the divison of labour, and the invention of such machines as shorten and facilitate manual operations of industry. Labour increases in extent, when the number of those engaged in it augments in proportion to the increasing number of the consumers, which can take place only in consequence of an increase of capitals, and of those branches of business in which they are employed.

Now, to accomplish the increase of labour in both these ways, and to conduct it gradually to the utmost pitch of energy and extent to which it can reach in any nation, considering the situation, the nature, and the peculiarities of its territories, what are the exertions to be made by its government? The subdivision of labour, and the invention and perfecting of machines. These two great means of augmenting the energy of labour advance in proportion to the extent of the market or, in other words, in proportion to the number of the exchanges which can be made, and to the ease and readiness with which these can take place. Let the government, then, direct all its attention to the enlargement of the market, by forming safe and convenient roads, by the circulation of sterling coin, and by securing the faithful fulfilment of contracts, all of which are indispensible measures, at the same time that, when put in practice, they will never fail to attain the desire end. And the nearer a government approaches to perfection in each of these three points, the more certainly will it produce very possible increase of the national market. The first of the three means is, without doubt, the most essential, as no other expedient whatever can possibly supply its place.

The gradual accumulation of capitals is a necessary consequence of the increased productive powers of labour, and it becomes also a cause of still farther increase in these powers; but, in proportion as this accumulation becomes greater and greater, it serves to increase the extent of labour, inasmuch as it multiplies the number of labourers, or the sum of national industry. This increase, however, of the number of hands in the nation employed, will always be regulated by the nature of the business to which the capitals are dedicated.

Under the second head of the increase of the products of labour, the exertions of government are much more easy. In fact, it has only to refrain from doing harm. It is only required of it, that it shall protect the natural liberty of industry; that it shall leave open every channel into which, by its own tendencies, industry may be carried; that government shall abandon it to its own direction, and shall not attempt to point its efforts one way more than another; for private interest, that infallible instinct which guides the exertions of all industry, is infinitely better suited than any legislator to judge of the direction which it will with most advantage follow. Let government, then, renounce alike the system of prohibitions and of bounties; let it no longer attempt to impede the efforts of industry by regulations, or to accelerate her progress by rewards; let it leave in the most perfect freedom the exertions of labour and the employment of capital; let its protecting influence extend only to the removal of such obstacles as avarice or ignorance have raised up to the unlimited liberty of industry and commerce; —then capitals will naturally develope themselves, by their own movement, in those directions which are at once most agreeable to the private interest of the capitalist, and most favourable to the increase of the national wealth.

A. M. Hamilton, Warkworth, writes: "For weeks I was troubled with a swelled ankle, which caused me much pain and annoyance. Mr. Maybee, of this place, recommended Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for it. I tried it, and before one bottle was used I was cured. It is an article of great value."

Cuthbert, of Belleville, has contracted to build for a gentleman in Brockville, a yacht 35 feet long, 8 feet beam, and 4 feet draught of water. The Whitby, Port Perry and Lindsay Railway Company, in order to connect directly with the Sault line, intend to lose no time in extending their line northward from Manilla, to connect at or near Beaverton. The Picton Times, referring to the purchase of the Grand Junction Railway by the Grand Trunk Company, says:—As the latter and the Prince Edward road are working in harmony, there will be no necessity for going on with the proposed extension northward from Trenton. The spur line to Weller's Bay and the shipping wharf at that point will be built, but for this season it is probable most of the iron ore, which after all will not be so extensively mined this year as was anticipated, will be shipped from Belleville.

"WOMEN NEVER THINK."—If the crabbed old bachelor who uttered this sentiment could but witness the intense thought, deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best medicines to keep their families well, and would note their sagacity and wisdom in selecting Hop Bitters as the best, and demonstrating it by keeping their families in perpetual health, at a more nominal expense, he would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.—Picayune. 20-2t

A new horse disease has made its appearance in the vicinity of Belleville, and numbers of horses have been attacked by it. The disease is a type of lung fever, and its existence is shown by a mucous discharge from the nostrils. The nasal chambers are affected, also the glands, and the lungs become at first congested, and subsequently pleurisy sets in. The disease is not considered dangerous, though its existence hereabouts has not been long enough to determine its true character.

CHIC.

Horace Vernet is generally credited with having originated the word "chic," used to describe things striking and agreeable, almost as much in English-speaking countries as in France. Vernet had a clever young pupil, who painted so like his master, and drew with such strength and precision, that he held him up as an example to all his class of pupils. When a pupil displeased him he would say, "Look at Chic"—that was the name of his favorite—"see how he works; do as he does," &c. Chic died young, Vernet felt very badly about it: and when he went into his studio and looked at the work of other pupils he would fold his hands, cast down his eye, and say to himself, "Ce n'est pas Chic."

There is, however, another version, also said to be the true and authentic one, of the origin of the word. According to this account, which it gives in a letter dated December, 1879, by the English chaplain at Croix-les-Roubaix, who heard it from a French gentleman, the word in its present signification was born in Antwerp, in the studio of Rubens, and among his pupils. It fell on a day that one of Ruben's pictures was almost finished, and one of his pupils, Schick by name, found himself alone with the all but completed picture. Moved by the spirit of mischief, Schick proceeded to draw in the centre of the picture a fly. Some time afterwards Rubens entered the room, and taking the fly for a real one, he tried to catch it with his hand. But when he saw what had been done, his feelings may be imagined; and calling his pupils together, he demanded who was the culprit. The fellow-pupils of the culprit joined in saying that it was Schick, for the good and sufficient reason that no one else could have done it so well. Ever afterwards, when anything was so well done that no one could improve it, it was said to be Schick. It would thus appear that what was at one time a cant word among Ruben's pupils, was then forgotten, and long afterwards found its way to the Boulevards from the studios of Paris artists, among whom it signified, as it does still, aptitude, facility, or the result of that.

As a test of ability to pronounce easily and correctly, the following curious composition was recently placed upon the blackboard at a teacher's institute in Vermont, and a prize of a Webster's dictionary offered to any person who could read and pronounce it correctly. The book was not carried off, however, as twelve was the lowest number of mistakes in pronounciation made: "A sacrilligious son of Belial, who suffered from bronchitis, having exhausted his finances, in order to make good the deficit, resolved to ally himself to a comely, lenient and docile young lady of the Malay or Caucasian race. He accordingly purchased a calliope and coral necklace of a chameleon hue, and securing a suite of rooms at a principal hotel, he engaged the head-waiter as his coadjutor. He then despatched a letter of the most unexceptional caligraphy extant, inviting the young lady to a matinee. She revolted to the idea, refused to consider herself sacrificable to his desires, and sent a polite note of refusal, on receiving which he procured a carbine and a bowie knife, said that he would not now forge fetters hymeneal with the queen, went to an isolated spot, severed his jugular vien, and discharged the contents of his carbine into his abdomen. The debris was removed by the coroner."

The St. John Telegraph says that if the burdens now imposed upon the people increase, or are continued for any length of time, and none of the benefits promised at Confederation are realised, some movement looking to a dissolution of the Union is sure to be made, because it is not in the nature of the people of the Maritime Provinces to continue for any length of time to submit to evils which may be remedied. "They will not go on sowing that others may reap; they will not impoverish themselves that the North-West may be enriched; they will not be satisfied with an arrested development that other places may grow."

The Liver is the grand purifying organ of the system; when inactive or obstructed bad blood and ill health are certain results. Burdock Blood Bitters cure all diseases arising from disordered Liver, Stomach, Bowels or Kidneys, purifying restoring and strengthening. It regulates the bowels, cleanses and enriches the Blood, and imparts tone to every organ of the body. Trial bottles 10 cents. 21-2t.

Toronto Globe:—Mr. G. C. Rogers, of Peterborough, a grinder in bond, writes upon the business a letter which amounts to an excellent plea for the abolition of the wheat duty, but to nothing else. He says:—'Ontario will not now produce wheat to make strong bakers' flour to compete with American flours.' Then what is the use of attempting to make the American wheat dearer? If bakers will have American flour, as Mr. Rogers says, they will not have Canadian flour at any price. 'That the Montreal and Lower Provinces trade is being exclusively supplied by American strong flours.' This is a complete giving away of the N. P

ALEX. GRAHAM.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced a remedy so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates the vital functions, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

The Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad Company

Now offer for Sale over 1,350,000 Acres of the Choicest FARMING and TIMBERED LANDS in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan.

Destined to be the best wheat-producing region in the world. These lands are situated in the counties of Chippewa, Mackinac, Schoolcraft, and Marquette, and embrace many thousands of acres of the best agricultural lands in the State of Michigan.

Among those in the counties of Chippewa and Mackinac are tracts of what are known as the "burnt or cleared" lands. These lands offer many advantages over the prairie lands of the West, as the timber lands adjoining insure a supply of fuel at little cost. The soil being a rich clay loam of great depth. The timber remaining upon the land being generally sufficient for the settlers' use in building and fencing.

These partially cleared lands are now offered at the low price of from $4 to $4.50 per acre, one-fourth cash, and the remainder at purchaser's option, at any time within nine years, with interest payable annually at seven per cent.

Roads are being opened through these lands, and no better opportunity has ever been offered to men of small means to secure a good farm, and intending purchasers will be wise by availing themselves of this chance before prices advance, as the lands are being rapidly taken and settled upon.

The lands more immediately on the line of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette Railroad, from Straits of Mackinac to Marquette, are more heavily timbered, and are almost universally good agricultural lands, leaving splendid farms when the timber is removed.

The iron and lumber interests of the upper peninsula are of such magnitude as to call for all the charcoal and lumber that the timber and wood upon the lands will produce—this will enable the settler to make good wages while clearing the land.

Lumber Mills and Charcoal Kilns will be built at various points along the line, and Furnaces are now being erected along the line of the road at Point St. Ignace.

The great demand and good prices for labor, both in winter and summer, make these lands particularly desirable as homes for the poor man. The lands adjacent the Railroad are offered at prices from $5 upwards, according to location, value of timber, etc. The lands are at your very door, and are being rapidly settled by Canadians.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 26, 1881.

Mechanics' Institutes.

The communication of "A Director" in another column, is most welcome; as being the opening up of a discussion on a most important subject, especially at the present time, when changes are about to be made in the Governmental regulations, relating to Mechanic's Institutes. We are glad to accept the correction of fact with regard to the increase of fees; but would draw attention to the impression conveyed by our research into the history of the Institute, namely: that it appears to have been more successful in the most important features during the time the fees were lowest. How is this to be accounted for, providing the surmise be correct?

Our article of last week was entirely general in its tone; not intended to apply to the Peterborough Institute more than to any other. But even "A Director" admits the existence of the frigidity to which we referred, even while he laments it; as we do. There can be no doubt that error in this regard rests on both sides; also that it is not merely within the rooms of the Institute that the harm originates and is itensified, but rather outside. How many of the present members have been guilty of the virtue of friendly conversations with non-attached Mechanics upon the subject of the Institute's advantages, not only to them but to all; and its consequent claims upon their countenance and support,—moral rather than monetary? This pertinent question is not asked to obtain statistical information, but merely that each member may settle the point in his own mind.

While we do not wish to contend that we have struck the chief cause of the non-association of Mechanics in the Institutes, and would gladly confess our theory to be in error, it is particularly noticeable that "A Director," while dissenting from our view, does not offer any other cause for the existence of the too palpable facts. If the reasons be not based on social conditions, on what do they rest? On Finances? Then lower the fees. On want of time? Then shorten the hours of labour. On inherent disinclination to improve? Then seek to counteract it. On gross ignorance? Then give it up till a nearer approach of the millineal age. On something undiscoverable? Then let us confess ourselves beaten.

Rather let us seek for the root of the difficulty with all diligence, and do all in our power to compass its eradication. Thus we will not only be striving for a more satisfactory outlay of Provincial and Municipal money in the direction toward which it is granted, but be also working for the advancement of Canadians in knowledge, unity and true greatness—for the intelligence of individuals and the power of the Dominion.

On the evening of the Queen's Birthday as the boat Victoria was returning to London from Springband, a few miles distant, with six hundred excursionists on board, she suddenly foundered, lurched and sank in twelve feet of water. As she went over, the timbers supporting an upper awning gave way and this construction falling upon those below, prevented escape. Fully 200 persons were drowned. Before the boat left Springbank, vain remonstrances were addressed to the manager as to the overcrowding of the vessel, and several hundred chose to walk home sooner than trust themselves aboard.

THE SCOTCH FARMER AND THE SYNDICATE.

Just how the shrewd Scotch farmer, who is the very best possible type of the class which Canada is most interested in attracting to her North-West as settlers, regards the transfer of the Government railways to a corporation, enjoying a monopoly, may be gathered from the letter of Mr. Imrie, one of the Scotch farmers' delegates who visited the North-West last year. This is the third letter which he has written on the subject, and this last is to explain the reason why, in the second letter, he depreciated the North-West as a place for settlement, whereas, in his first, which was a report of his mission, he reported favorably of the country. The change in his opinion has been entirely wrought by the handing over of the Canada Pacific Railway to the people who, while they had a monopoly of the transportation from the North-West, charged exceedingly high rates, and who, now that they have the monopoly continued to them, are not likely to act more generously in the long run. Mr. Imrie points out how companies with far less power have, when their interests clashed with those of the farmers, sacrificed the latter most mercilessly. Mr. Imrie lives in a country where the principles of political economy are thoroughly understood, and he does not advise any farmer to settle in a country where the Premier and the Finance Minister are disposed to compel the farmers to pay any rate of freight on their grain for export which a company may find it to its advantage to charge, merely to ensure the trafic for a Canadian line.

Hamilton Times:—The Mail is afflicted with doubts about Mr. Blake's sincerity; it fears that he is prone to say one thing and mean another. Let us see. Was it Mr. Blake who, referring to Reil in a speech at Peterborough, said, 'I wish to God I could catch him,' while all the time he knew that Riel was having a good time spending $3,000 of the public money provided by himself? That was an unmistakable case of saying one thing and meaning another, but the Mail does not have its virtuous indignation aroused by the remembrance of it.

The Toronto World insists that the time has come when ante-panic wages should be paid by manufacturers and the employers of labor generally. Ante-election promises have not been fulfilled. Not only were industries to be encouraged and built up, but workmen were to get more steady employment and better wages. The revival of trade that began to be felt in the United States and Europe more than a year ago has reached Canada, and the "hum" is becoming quite general. Employers of labor, however, do not recognize the claims of the laboring men to a share in the increased profits. To get recognition they (the laborers) must "strike," and that is generally a costly venture.—Belleville Ontario.

The Montreal Post shows that Irish Catholics were boycotted in the invitations to the recent public dinner given to Sir Hugh Allen. Commenting on this the Post says:—"It is only fair to give the names of the active spirits of the Committee, the circle within a circle, around which everything revolved, and whom we charge with a piece of insolent bigotry, as stupid as it was foolish. For sure are we that there were gentlemen on the Committe—and the majority at that—who would scorn to descend to anything half so mean. The names we refer to as being the leading spirits in the banquet are M. H. Gault, M. P., A. W. Ogilvie, and Richard White, manager of the Gazette. These men were appointed by Roman Catholics as well as Protestants to carry out the arrangements of a public banquet. Why they allowed religious bigotry to interfere with the discharge of their duty is for them to explain.

RUPTURES, SPRINGLESS TRUSSES AND SUPPORTERS.—Prof. Hotchkin, of Albion, Orleans County, N. Y., will again visit Peterborough and stop at the Huffman House, June 13 and 14. Prof. H. having had thirty years experience, defies the Hernia he cannot hold. Go and see him.

CANADIAN NEWS.

Dr. Griggs, of Port Hope, is dead.

The contract for grading the Napanee and Tamworth Railway has been let.

A mad steer caused great excitement at Paradise Falls the other day. Among others, he chased a Councillor.

The Liberals of Port Hope and Hope are organizing for the coming contest at the polls in East Durham.

The yacht Countess of Dufferin has left Cobourg for Chicago, where she will likely be sold.

Mr. John Harris, of Seymour, has a field of rye already out into head, and measuring fully thirty inches in height.

The Herald is a new paper recently started at Penetanguishene, by Mr. J. F. Osborne.

A well-to-do marble-cutter of Montreal has been arrested on suspicion of stealing tomb-stones from the Cote des Neiges Cemetery.

In the second practice of the Prince Edward Rifle Association, three ranges, seven rounds each, Major White scored 81—the highest.

Says the Port Hope Times:—"We do not think our Mechanics' Institute accomplishes anything like the work which might be expected from its equipment and its income. The membership and the expenditure are too far apart.

Markham school board passed a resolution to buy lots for a school site and asking the village council for $600 for the purpose. The council, at a special meeting, declined to vote the money.

The Collingwood Bulletin has changed hands, Mr. Robson having sold out to Williams, Hands & Edgcomb, of that town, who will take possession on the 1st of July. Mr. Robson goes to British Columbia, where he has secured a lucrative position.

Mr. Kenneth Chisholm, M.P.P., has offered to the County of Peel Agricultural Society the sum of $100, as a special prize to encourage the improving and beautifying of farmers' homes, which amount the Society has supplemented with $20.

The Whig explains how the Kingston Mechanics' Institute refused a copy of Rev. Dr. Ryerson's History of the "Loyalists of America." An agent gave the book to Mr. T. H. McGuire for the Institute to purchase. It was laid before the directors, who thought that for that price ($4.50) they could purchase more interesting matter for the public. That's all.

The Biddulph murder story is revived in all its details, by what amounts to a confession of Jim Feehley, who is said to have stated that he was a witness of the crime, although taking no part in it himself. Acting on information imparted to them of this fact, the authorities have caused the arrest of the two Feehley brothers in Michigan, and steps are now being taken for their extradition.

More than a year ago the Montreal Witness, a good advertising medium, made an offer which has never been taken up. It was as follows:—"A column once a week, on this page, and in this type, is put at the service of all genuine charities, so far as they choose to make use of it, with the condition that nothing shall be printed in it more than once, or at variance with the principles of the Witness. No raffling bazaars need apply."

A number of prominent gentlemen of Toronto, favorable to the suppression of intemperance, have organized an association, and adopted four different kinds of pledges, which it is optional for those wishing to aid in the work, to sign. They are as follows:—1st. The signer pledging not to treat or be treated while in possession of the card. 2nd. A pledge not to drink intoxicating liquors during business hours except at meals. 3rd. To abstain from using, as a beverage, all liquors, with the exception of beer and light wines. 4th. Total abstinence from all kinds of alcoholic liquors. They propose the establishment of coffee-houses in the city.

The Act respecting the Registration of Deaths, contains the following clause:—"Every superintendent or caretaker of any cemetery or burial ground, whether public or private, permitting any dead body to be interred in the grounds over which he has charge, unless he receives a certificate under the hand of the Division Registrar of the Division in which the death took place, that the particulars of such death have been duly registered, shall give to such Division Registrar within seven days after the burial a writen notice under his hand, stating according to his knowledge, information and belief, the name and residence of the deceased, and the date and place at which the death and burial took place. Any superintendent or caretaker neglecting or refusing to comply with this section, shall for each and every offence be liable to the penalties provided by the twenty-forth section of said act respecting the registration of births, marriages and deaths, and the procedure for the recovery thereof shall be the same as is by said act provided."

BRITISH AND FOREIGN.

The Irish Land Bill was read a second time on Thursday last.

The Treaty between Russia and China has been ratified at Pekin.

The Maharajah of Nepaul is dead; and his heir has succeeded to the throne.

The Monetary Conference has adjourned till the 30th of June.

There has been fighting between the Kaffirs and Boers. The loss on both sides was slight.

Mr. Gladstone has recovered from his recent illness, but signs of decay are becoming more manifest in him.

The new Italian Ministry finds it difficult to carry on the Government. An appeal to the people is likely.

Under the scrutin de liste method of electing Deputies the French Chamber will consist of 590 members, or about 50 more than at present.

The excess of revenue from indirect taxes over the French budget estimates during the first half of the current month amounted to 8,500,000 francs.

Lord Salisbury, in a recent speech appears to indicate that the House of Lords will reject the Irish Land Bill in its present shape, or at least virtually amend it.

On the ground that her existing laws are adequate for the purpose, England has declined to take part in an international conference for the prevention of assasination.

A record of conversation between Lord Salisbury, Count Corti and M. Waddington is said to be in existence, the purport of which is that Italy might, if she chose, take Tripoli, while France helped herself to Tunis.

An uproar occurred in the House of Commons, when Sir Wilfrid Lawson (Radical) questioned Collins (Conservative), who was about to take the oath, concerning his religious opinions. He said the Bradlaugh precedent instituted a Parliamentary inquisition, and all should be treated alike. The Speaker said Collins differed from Bradlaugh. Mr. Gladstone endorsed his view.

The municipal authorities of Calcutta have prohibited unlicensed persons from preaching in the streets, for the reason that public and unauthorized disquisitions provoke disturbances among the natives, and tend to violations of the peace. The missionaries have defied the police, and insist upon their right to hold open air meetings. The authorities have applied to the Governor of Bengal for instructions.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says:—The original Russian text of the Czar's manifesto was remarkable for the appearance in nearly every sentence of the words "autocracy" and "autocratic power." The semi-official translation in French in the Journal de St. Petersburg renders these words by souveraineté and pouvoir souverain, which are not only mis-translations, but an evident attempt to lessen the force of the document for foreign readers, and produce a milder impression abroad than the original Russian text would have done.

A collision has occured between the populace and police and soldiery, at New Pallas, near Limerick. The people had removed all their cattle so that no seizures could be made, and the constabulary and troops were attacked with stones, and fired at from an old castle, from which the occupants could not be dislodged without cannon. Artillery could not be brought up, as all the bridges had been destroyed, and the plan had been adopted of investing the place and starving out the garrison. The whole district is on the point of open insurrection, and the priests declare they cannot restrain the people if further attempts be made to carry out the decrees by force. The arrest of Father Sheeby on a charge of inciting to violence, has increased the excitement in Limerick County, and there is now small hope of putting the law into force without violence.

PREPARED FOR SPRING.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, and all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopess, from Brazil, acts as a gentle purgative. It is just introduced into this country. The remarkable results of a few doses are most suprising. Ask J. D. Tully or T. Ruston for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopess, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion. Constipation and Biliousness ever introduced in this country. 44-1y

Peterborough Markets.

Peterborough, May 25, 1881.

The grain market is very quiet. Prices continue rather weak, and some grains lower, spring wheat selling at $1.12, receipts being small. Peas 60 to 62, few offering. Oats in fair demand, at 31 to 35, with every prospect of growing lower. In barley, nothing doing. Hay dull at $8 to $9. On the market there is not much doing. Butter is plentiful and weak, at 12 to 14. Eggs in good supply, selling at 9 to 10. No fresh meat offering except veal, which sells at 5c. for a hind quarter, and 3 to 4 for a fore. Apples continue plentiful for the season, and will bring about $2 per barrel, and from 75c. to $1 per bag, but are slow sale. The bottom has fallen out of the potato market. About ten days ago they dropped to 25c. per bag, but have since recovered a little, and will now bring for shipping 30 to 35c. per bag. New wool has made its appearance, one lot offering to-day; sold at 30c. and the rise. The prospect in wool is not encouraging, a large quantity of Canada combing remaining unsold, and the demands for this class of wool being very light, in fact, almost unsaleable; and although the price is low, with a dull market, it is not likely to pay much.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

How the Holiday was spent.

Those intent on celebrating the 62nd niversary of the Queen's birth, were ored with typical "Queen's weather." umbers left town by trains on the rail- ays, which granted half-fare tickets. mong those taking their departure by Midland Railway at 7 o'clock, was Lacrosse team for Cobourg, accomp- ied by many friends. An hour later steamer Golden-Eye carried away a owd of excursionists to Idyl-Wild. t the exodus was almost, if not wholly alled by the influx of visitors from the joining country and surrounding vil- es. Youthful loyalty displayed itself the usual consumption of fire-crackers; d in the evening rockets, Roman can- s and other fire-works were set off in ferent parts of the town. A pleasing ture was the absence of drunkenness discord, the tempers of the people be- apparently as pleasant, and not so as the weather, which was some- at oppressive, though tempered by a ght breeze.

CRICKET MATCH.

Two cricket elevens from the Peter- rough Club, under the respective cap- ncy of Messrs. Rutherford and Stratton, ayed a one-innings match in the morn- The general fielding and bat- g was especially good on both sides, d the bowling respectable. Rather- rd's team won by six runs, with a total re of 79 runs. The highest individual res were those of T. Rutherford, 20; B. Rogers, 39; and W. A. Stratton, It is the intention of the club to y Cobourg in a short time.

THE LACROSSE CLUB'S EXCURSION.

Between one hundred and fifty and two ndred left town on the Lacrosse Club's oursion to Cobourg, where the first tch of the season, Cobourg vs. Peter- rough, formed the principal feature of programme of sports under the spices of the Cobourg Athletic Associa- n. A very large number of citizens d visitors were present to witness the rts, which commenced shortly before o o'clock. The first half of the pro- amme consisted of a two-mile walking tch; foot races of a quarter-mile and 0 yards, for both men and boys; a half- le race; a mile hurdle race, open to all ces in the United Counties; and a rub race" for a purse given by the tchers' Association. All the events re well contested, although the entries most cases were few, the excessive heat obably deterring many from taking rt. The event upon which the chief traction centred was the lacrosse match, ich was called on about half-past three. a number of events had yet to be con- ted, it was agreed that play should se at five o'clock—the team having the st games at that hour to be declared winners. At sixteen minutes to four ball was faced—the following taking rt in the game:—

PETERBOROUGH.		COBOURG.
LeBrun	Field Capt	W. Salisbury
Sanderson	Goal	Jas. Billington
Rudkins	Point	G. Stephens
McDonald	Cover Point	N. Whitelaw
Rudkins	Defence Field	R. Steinhaur
Simpson	do	J. Hayden
Sheehy	Centre Field	C. Kerr
Hackett	Field	H. Bannister
Halpin	do	C. Koyl
Phelan	Home Field	W. Amsbury
H. Fortye	do	C. Clench
Morrow	Home	E. Steinhaur
Rutherford	do	G. Minaker
G. Macdonald	Umpire	R. Mulholland
McNeil	do	Geo. Guillett
Referee—Jas. Macdougall, Montreal.

From the start it was very apparent at the game would be a defence one on part of the Cobourg team, and roughout the first game the ball was pt almost constantly in front of the bourg goal, where the principal play s confined. It was particularly notice- e that neither team made anything e fine playing, and that the Peterbor- gh team, with one or two exceptions, d not do nearly as neat playing as they ve been accustomed to. The length of grass prevented the "picking up" of ball, and as a consequence the game times had a strong complexion of shin- ying and foot-ball. After ten minutes eely contested playing, the first game s won by Peterborough—Rutherford ding the ball through the goal. The ond game occupied seventeen minutes d a half, and was considerably more vorable to the Cobourg team. Peter- rough playing with over confidence, d becoming somewhat careless missed eral good shots. The ball finally was rown in front of their goal, where after siderable scrambling, it was kicked rough by Clench, scoring one for bourg. The third and last game oc- pied the same time as the second, and s perhaps the most closely contested of match. Both teams played to better vantage, but the superiority of the terborough team showed itself by some allent play on the part of Hackett, therford, Sheehy and P. Rudkins. therford by a splendid home shot ally decided the game, and won the match for Peterborough. The play was throughout conducted in the best of spirit, and at its close cheers were given for both Clubs, the umpires, referee, and the Queen. In the evening the members of the visiting Club were handsomely entertained at a supper at the British Hotel, where a sumptuous spread was prepared for them. The chair was occupied by the President of the Cobourg Athletic Association, and the vice-chair by H. LeBrun, President of the Peterborough Club. After doing full justice to the hospitality provided, toasts and responses became the order, and were taken part in by Mayor Hargraft, prominent members of the Cobourg Association, and by Messrs. LeBrun, Sanderson, McNeil and others, in behalf of Peterborough. The excursionists returned home about eleven o'clock, well pleased with the day's sport, and speaking in the highest terms of the the treatment received at the hands of the Cobourg Club. It is intended that the return match will be played in this town on Dominion Day.

THE IDYL-WILD REGATTA.

This drew together about 700 persons, of which about half were from Peterborough, the remainder being from Hastings, Keene, Cobourg, and other places along the front. A very pleasant day was spent 'mid the Island's sylvan beauties, and the races caused a good deal of excitment among the on-lookers.

The first race was with single canoes, 2 miles, with turn. Three entered: James Wedlock, Thos. Wallace and Beavdr. They started evenly and kept well together until the buoy was reached, when Wedlock gradually drew ahead and kept the lead to the finish, Beaver being a good second and Wallace third.

The single-scull race, 3 miles, with turn, was between Æ. Jarvis, of Hamilton, and J. Laing, of Montreal. They started well together, and for the first half-mile kept pretty even; then Laing pulled away from his opponent and led to the finish, winning easily by about three lengths.

The double canoe and four-oared races did not take place.

Mr. H. Calcutt, acted as judge, and Mr. John McClelland, as referee.

During the afternoon a drawing took place, for a canoe to the gentleman, and a sewing machine to the lady excursionist, holding the highest number. The successful ticket-holders were Mr. James Burns, of this town, and Miss Katie Ayers, of Cobourg.

The excursionists left Idyl-Wild about five o'clock, and the dancing of the morning passage was resumed on the return trip. "All went merry as a marriage bell," and even the tired ones were satisfied with the day's outing, and the night's rousting.

THE GAMES.

Shortly after half past one, the games arranged by a joint committee of the Boating and Cricket Clubs began on the pretty, pine-shaded Agricultural Grounds. There was an attendance during the afternoon of some five or six hundred people, who witnessed the sports with a considerable degree of pleasure, in spite of the heat. Everything came off without discord or hitch, barring that the too numerous influx of the crowd into the grounds, and upon the course, during the latter part of the proceedings, tended somewhat to obstruct the even-running of the arrangements. The Managing Committee consisted of seven members from each of the Clubs; the judges were Rev. V. Clementi, Hon. R. Hamilton and J. F. Lewis; and the starters were R. A. Morrow and R. B. Rogers. The 57th Battalion Band supplied music, the various selections being well played.

The games contested were as follows:

HOP, STEP AND JUMP.—Three entries. Won by E. Welsh, 38 ft., 11 in.; F. Weir, 2nd.

THROWING CRICKET BALL.—Six entries. Won by J. Hayes; A. B. Wilson, 2nd.

HURDLE RACE.—Five entries. Won by A. B. Wilson; Alf. Rogers, 2nd; A. St. A. Smith, 3rd. The contestants ran well together.

HURDLE RACE FOR BOYS.—Four entries. Mark Orde, 1st; Frank Sherwood, 2nd; Allen Bell, 3rd. The winner is an excellent jumper.

RUNNING HIGH JUMP.—Very closely contested between J. Hayes and F. Weir, the former winning. A third jumper dropped out early.

RUNNING HIGH JUMP FOR BOYS.—Three entries. Won, after a close contest, by W. Cottingham; F. Sherwood, a good second.

100-YARDS RACE, heats.—The first heat was easily won by A. B. Wilson, of Lifford; but in the second he was very closely pushed by G. A. Strickland, who took second prize.

100-YARDS RACE FOR BOYS, in heats.—The first heat was taken easily by Mark Orde; but in the second he barely reached the line before V. Williams, who stood second.

PUTTING THE HEAVY WEIGHT.—This was a contest between four, and was won by Thos. Ryan; — Hurley, 2nd.

QUARTER-MILE RACE.—Won neatly by Strickland, with James Halliay second.

QUARTER-MILE RACE FOR BOYS.—A good race—won by James Fairweather, with W. Milligan second.

MILE RACE.—Michael Bird won easily; Jas. Halliay second.

TUG OF WAR.—This was contested by ten each side from the Boating and Cricket Clubs respectively. The first pull was in favour of the Boating Club; but the second and third were on the side of the cricketers, though there is some suspicion that they got help from the crowd that pressed closely about.

RACE ON ALL-FOURS.—This amusing race was won by H. Carnegie; G. Orde second.

WALKING RACE FOR BOYS, half-mile.—Quite easily won by W. Cottingham, by fully half the length of the course, which is 1-7 of a mile.

WALKING RACE, 2 miles.—Three entered, but M. Johnston soon dropped out, leaving T. McNaughton and E. B. Rogers on the course. McNaughton started off at a rattling pace from the first, and after a time gained a lap. For a little he contented himself with dogging the other; then passed him and finally won by a lap and a half. There were some doubts expressed as to whether the winner's gait was a walk, though it was clearly heel-and-toe progress.

CONSOLATION RACE.—This contest lay between Carnegie and Orde, who ran closely all round, Carnegie winning.

CONSOLATION RACE FOR BOYS.—There were many entries; but E. Stratton took the lead from the start and kept it, being followed by D. Wallace.

TILTING AT THE RING.—For this entered Capt. Rogers, Lieut. Reckham and Sergt. Stoddard. Rogers and Stoddard beat the Lieutenant, being ties. Further trials between the two resulted in a number of ties, till the Captain in one course missed both rings, and the Sergeant took one, and the first money.

HASTINGS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The celebration here consisted of games, races, dancing and an evening concert. The attendance at the games was at least 400, and perfect order prevailed throughout. Some of the games were very keenly contested, and in the horse-race the veteran "Wanderer" came to the front, as he had often done before. Prizes were taken by the following persons:—

Special Prize for Waltzing.—Mr. Osborn and Mrs. Murphy.

Step-Dancing.—C. Street and Miss Heffernan.

Running Hop, Step and Jump.—Joseph Geary, 1st; Jno. McHugh, 2nd.

Wheelbarrow Race.—Geo. Murray, 1st; J. Anderson, 2nd.

Throwing Cricket Ball.—Thomas O'Neil.

Three-Legged Race.—J. Murray and A. Wilson and P. Howard and G. Malcolm divided the prize.

Three Jumps.—M. Heffernan, 1st; Joseph Geary, 2nd.

100 Yards Boys' Race.—Albert Fife, 1st; Wm. Covert, 2nd.

Single Scull Race.—R. Howard, 1st; A. Wilson, 2nd.

Double Scull Race.—Wilson & Howard, 1st; Anderson & Malcolm, 2nd.

Horse Race.—Vesper's "Wanderer," 1st; Wood's "Jay Jim," 2nd; Short's "Young Briton," 3rd.

Quoits.—A. Wilson, 1st; Dr. O'Gorman, 2nd.

Rifle Walk.—Murray & Dyas divided the prize.

100 Yards Race.—John Murray, 1st; A. Wilson, 2nd.

Hurdle Race.—John Berry, 1st; John Murray, 2nd.

Standing Jump.—T. M. Smith, 1st; T. Lancaster, 2nd.

Vaulting with Pole.—T. M. Smith, 1st; D. McGrath, 2nd.

The concert in the Drill Shed was the finest ever given here. The place was literally packed, but the arrangements were such as to reflect great credit on the committee. The musicians from Peterborough, Port Hope and Belleville, were particularly appreciated, and are to be congratulated on voice, taste in selection and good style in appearance and demeanour on the stage.

A surplus remains in the hands of the committee, to be devoted to a celebration on Dominion Day.

HARWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

THE FARMERS have completed the seeding, and although the fall wheat has been pretty well thinned out with spring frosts the prospects are most favorable.

ALNWICK CHEESE will likely be kept booming all summer, as two firms are soliciting the patronage of the farmers. Some who consented to supply the new factory at Roseneath have become dissatisfied on finding that they are bound to be patrons and supply a certain amount of milk for five years.

FISHING has commenced and a good business is done in that line.

A STRONG EAST WIND blew up the lake last week for four days, which has not been known on Rice Lake in a number of years.

A BASE BALL CLUB has been organized.

FRUIT PROSPECTS are good, as the trees now make a fine show in bloom.

THE DROWNED INDIAN, James Simpson, whose body was found recently in the Trent, was a brother of Allan Simpson, who was also drowned a short time since.

THE TEACHER'S ASSOCIATION for Northumberland met at Colborne, May 12th and 13th. A large number of teachers and others were present; but the session was considered rather less interesting than usual.

THE Dove is now the name of the handsome little steamer formerly the Maggie Somerville.

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

SLIGHTLY SCALDED.—A little daughter of W. E. Roxburgh of this village, was slightly scalded on the shoulder and legs by pulling upon herself a tin of boiling water.

FATALLY SCALDED.—A son of Mr. Medcalf, of Asphodel, fell into a tub of boiling water on Monday last. Aid was procured as soon as possible, but the child—who was only in his fourth year—died shortly after the accident.

OBIT.—Anderson J. Barker, youngest son of Mr. George Barker, a former resident of the Township of Asphodel, suddenly died of scarlet fever at Runbeck, United States, where the family now reside, on the 20th ult. Mr. Barker is well known in this community.

A VETERAN.—A discharged soldier of the United States Army found his way to our village on Wednesday week, in destitute circumstances. Although having only the use of one leg and one arm he walked here from Hastings, on account of the uncharitable conduct of the villagers. He was compelled to walk the streets all night, being turned out of one of the hotels. On arriving at Norwood, lodgings were at once provided for him during his stay here of a couple of days, and a sum of money was raised for him to send him on his journey to Ottawa, where his relations are. He came this way expecting to find them at Madoc, but learned that they had moved to the Capital.

A LOYAL SERVICE.—On Sunday evening last the Methodist congregation of this village were highly gratified to enjoy a service in honor of the anniversary of the birth of our beloved Sovereign. The service was conducted by the Rev. J. E. Sanderson, the pastor of the Church, who chose a highly appropriate text, and delivered an interesting and instructive sermon, dwelling considerably—but not too much so—upon the virtues and nobleness of character of Her Majesty, and urging, during these hazardous times to crowned heads, loyalty and affection to the Royal family. This highly interesting service closed with the singing, by special request of Mr. Sanderson, of "God Save the Queen," the congregation heartily joining in the beautiful anthem. The sermon is very favorably commented upon.

THE 24TH.—Norwood honored Her Majesty's Birthday with a remarkably enthusiastic demonstration. The band had the celebration in charge, and, as usual, did all things well. There was a great number of people in town, drawn from miles around, notwithstanding that great allurements were held out in neighboring villages. The games were very spiritedly contested. Our athletes are improving as well as increasing in number. The concert in the evening was a splendid affair, reflecting the highest credit on all concerned. The expectations of the public regarding the lady vocalists who took part in the programme were fully realized. The male vocalists also did well. The band played several pieces in a highly creditable manner, doing justice to the painstaking efforts of the bandmaster, Mr. W. H. Mullins. None of the people of the neighborhood were attracted southwards by extraordinary amusements.

We happen across a rhymed list of the English sovereigns which our younger readers will do well to cut out and put in their scrap-books:—

First William the Norman, then William his son;
Henry, Stephen, and Henry, then Richard and John;
Next Henry the third; Edwards—one, two and three;
Again, after Richard, three Henrys we see.
Two Richards, third Richard, if rightly I guess;
Two Henrys, sixth Edward, Queens Mary and Bess;
Then Jamie the Scot; then Charles whom they slew;
And then followed Cromwell; another Charles too.
Next James called the second, ascended the throne;
Then William and Mary together came on;
Till Anne, George four, and fourth William all past,
God sent them Victoria, the youngest and last.

GO SLOW.

When you a pair of bright eyes meet,
That makes your heart in rapture beat;
When one voice seems to you more sweet
Than any other voice you know;
Go slow, my friend; go slow;
For brightest eyes have oft betrayed,
And sweetest notes of youth and maid
The very falsest things have said,
And thereby wrought a deal of woe;
Go slow, my friend, go slow.

When you're convinced you are a poet;
And, wishing all the world to know it,
Call on some editor to show it,
With verses full of glow and blow;
Go slow, my friend, go slow;
For many a one has done the same,
And stopped to grasp the hand of Fame,
And yet has never seen his name
In print. And why? Waste-baskets know.
Go slow, my friend, go slow.

When you to greed for money yield,
And long the mighty pow'r to wield
That's always found in golden field,
With scheming pomp and pride and show,
Go slow, my friend, go slow;
For thousands, tempted by the glare
Of wealth, have fallen in the snare
Set for the thief. And now despair,
Regret and shame have brought them low;
Go slow, my friend, go slow.

The good old earth is never wrong,
Each of her works takes just so long;
Months pass before a happy throng
Of flowers in the meadow grow;
Go slow, my friend, go slow.
And Spring gives life to Summer's flowers,
And Summer's sun and Summer's showers
Prepare the fruit for Autumn bowers,
And Autumn's frost brings Winter's snow;
Go slow, my friend, go slow.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Farm Hints.

It is said by those who have tried its that bran is as good as the best commercial fertiliser for potatoes and corn, and much cheaper.

The advantage of spreading manure from the waggon as it is drawn out are a saving of labour and a more even distribution of the soluble salts (ammonia, potash, phosphates, &c.,) in the soil by rain. If the manure is heaped on the field and gets a heavy rain before spreading, the ground under the heaps receives an undue share of the best part of the manure, which not unfrequently renders these spots barren for a season or two.

Prof. J. F. W. Johnston quotes the results of experiments in which wheat dressed with salt gave an average of eight bushels more than the same kind of soil produces without salt; barley gave an increase of twenty-one bushels an acre, and hay one ton increase to the acre. The experiments of John Hannan, of England, as detailed in an essay on manures, for which he received fifty pounds, show a large increase, by the use of salt, in the acreage production of barley and oats, and a moderate increase in the yield of wheat.

The horse has the smallest stomach in proportion to his size of any animal. Fifteen or sixteen quarts is its utmost capacity. This space is completely filled by four quarts of oats and the saliva that goes into the stomach with it. Horses are generally over-fed, and not fed often enough. For a horse with moderate work six or eight quarts of bruised oats and eight or ten pounds of fine hay a day is sufficient. This should be fed in at least three meals, and is better if fed in four. Give only a moderate drink of water to a horse. A large drink of cold water before being driven will have a very quieting effect on a nervous horse. A heated body is a reason against watering, and of feeding, for the system is then just in the condition to begin digestion. A horse will not founder if fed moderately when hot.

Speaking of poor orchard management a writer remarked that he had seen trees, standing in grass neither broken up nor manured for many years, making a feeble and stunted growth, and producing heavy crops of fruit, one half, or one fourth of which may be merchantable, the balance hardly worth picking up. In his pear orchard, to lessen the chances of blight, he slacked off in both cultivation and manure. The result was, in two years one half of his crop was culls. His trees, instead of making stout shoots twelve to eighteen inches long, made scarcely any growth at all. He had observed similar results in the case of other fruit trees. In some soils, especially those of a light and sandy nature, a moderate top-dressing every year is necessary; in others, every second year will be sufficient. There can be no rule laid down. The trees and fruit will tell what is wanted.

The Agricultural Gazette, in a view of all the different breeds of cattle in Great Britain and the Channel Islands, estimates the cows and heifers at 2,250,000. After glancing at the twenty different herds, the Gazette comes to the following conclusion:—"It is the greatest merit of the Shorthorn that it holds the foremost rank in both classes. The exceptional aptitude of the cows of this breed to lay on flesh whenever, whether by accident, or by age, they have become no longer adapted for the dairy, is a very great addition in the eyes of the dairy-farmer to their merit as mere milk producers." In consequence of this, Shorthorn cattle, which early in the century only occupied a few narrow districts in England, have now spread over the whole country wherever moderately good pastures abound.

Garden Information.

No plant is more obedient to training in youth than a fuchsia. Take the little upright plants, pinch out the centre, and in place of one there will spring out two, often three shoots. Let these branches make about the same growth, and repeat the process to each, keeping the side branches of equal length, or tapering like a pyrmid; or by clipping off all the lower limbs and letting the upper ones droop over, you have an umbrella. Indeed, you can have any shape you please, if you begin with a young plant. Besides, the fuchsia likes the pruning and will reward you with fourfold blossoms.

The scales which fly off from iron being worked at forges, iron trimmings, filings, or other ferruginous material, if worked into the soil about fruit trees, or the more minute particles spread thinly on the lawn, mixed with the earth of flower beds or in pots, are most valuable to the peach and pear, and, in fact, supply necessary ingredients to the soil. For colored flowers they heighten the bloom, and increase the brilliancy of white or nearly white flowers of all the rose family.

"If I had to preach a sermon on horticulture," says Downing, "I should take this for my text:—'Stir the Soil.'" As soon as plants are above ground they should be thinned out so as not to interfere with each other's growth. At the same time the soil may be loosened a little about them, without injury to the young plants, so as to break any crusts that may have formed; and the weeds may be removed. A little later stir the soil with a narrow hoe, taking care not to cover the plants. Every weed should be cut or pulled, no matter how small. Digging among the plants admits the air, and actually manures the young plants. In dry weather particularly, the soil should be stirred often, so as to increase the cool surface exposed to the reception of moisture.

Transplanting should be done at evening, or just before or after rain. Give each plant a gill of water, and shade with a shingle.

The best time to water plants is at sunrise or evening. Always use rain-water when it is to be had. Well-water should be exposed a day or two to the sun that its temperature may rise to that of the air. Water may be given the roots at any time, but not to the leaves in the hot sun. One copious watering is better than little and often. The earth should be stirred as soon after watering as the ground becomes dry.

Beans should be planted after all danger from frosts has passed. Hoe often; but only when the ground is dry. Plant two or three inches apart in two and a half feet drills, or in hills that distance apart in the rows, and rows two feet apart.

Household.

How much air can be safely admitted into a sleeping or living-room is a common question. Rather, it should be considered, how rapidly air can be admitted, without injury or risk, and at how low a temperature. We cannot have too much fresh air so long as we are warm enough, and are not exposed to draughts.

Soiled undergarments or the wash clothes ought not to be put into a closet, ventilated or not ventilated. They should be placed in a large bag made for the purpose, or a roomy basket, and then put in a well-aired room at some distance from the family. Having thus excluded one of the fertile sources of bad odors in closets, the next point is to see that the closets are properly ventilated. It matters not how clean the clothing in the closets may be; if there is no ventilation that clothing will not be what it should be. Any garments after being worn for awhile will absorb more or less of the exhaltations which arise from the body, and thus contain an amount of foreign—it may be hurtful—matter which free circulation of pure air can soon remove.

Dandruff is a natural secretion, but it becomes a cutaneous complaint by neglect. Take an ounce of powdered borax, a piece of unslaked lime the size of a chestnut, and a tablespoonful of spirits of ammonia; put them into a quart bottle and fill it up with boiled or pump water. After twelve hours apply this wash to the scalp. Ladies can apply it best with a fine sponge. Rinse with tipid water. After a few applications the scales will disappear, the hair become soft and brilliant, and young hair will be seen to start out. Dandruff should be cured gradually, so as not to produce sick headache or dizziness by the sudden suppression.

The excellent washerwomen in Holland or Belgium, who "get up" their linen so beautifully white, use refined borax as a washing powder, instead of soda, in the proportion of one large handful of powder to about ten gallons of boiling water. They save in soap nearly one-half. All the large washing establishments adopt the same mode. For laces, cambrics, etc., an extra quantity of the power is used; for crinolines, requiring to be made stiff, a strong solution is necerrary. Borax being a natural salt, does not in the slightest degree injure the texture of the linen. Its effect is to soften the hardest water.

Lung and Liver complaints are certainly benefited, often cured, by a free consumption of onins; either cooked or raw. Colds yield to them like magic. Don't be afraid of them. Taken at night all offense will be wanting by morning, and the good effects will amply compensate, for the trifling annoyance. Taken regularly they greatly promote the health of the lungs and the digestive organs. An extract made by boiling down the juice of onions to a syrup, and taken as a medicine, answers the purpose very well, but fried, roasted, or boiled onions are better. Onions are a very cheap medidine, within everybody's reach, and they are not by any means as "bad to take" as the costly nostrums a neglect of their use may necessitate.

Formerly milk was put in shallow pans and rarely in deep, earthen jars, and we owe the deep system to the Swedish dairymen. With the deep pails, deep, cold spring water tanks or ice closets are required, and where flowing cold spring water can be secured, this more modern system is very convenient, chiefly because of the economy of room. A 20-quart deep pail is nine inches in diameter; a ten quart pan is 15 inches, and a pool to hold 400 quarts of milk in deep pails, may be no larger than four feet long by three feet wide, while to hold 400 quarts in shallow pans would require a trough 60 feet long and 16 inches wide. The advantage is obvious, and for those who use spring houses it is it is a great economy. With a deep pail the milk of a family cow may be lowered into a well and kept at a regular temperature the whole year, and the milkhouse becomes a very simple affair. The simple deep pool in which the pails are immersed to within two inches of the upper edge, may be built up in bricks laid in cement, or with a wall of cement. This may be constructed above a spring so that the water flows in at the bottom and over the top, and escapes by a pipe built into the side; or a pool is supplied by water brought in a pipe from a spring or from a well near by. With a spring there may a constent flow of water and no ice be required. With well water a supply of ice will be required in the summer, and the house will need to be warmed in the winter.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION.

"What is rack rent, dad?" enquired a young Irish-Canadian, who had been reading the news from Ireland.

The patient parent laid down the Toronto Tribune and replied:—"Do you know how much I charge Mr. Boggarty for his room upstairs?"

"Yes, sir; $12 a month."

"Well, now, suppose Mr. Boggarty should take it into his head to have, at his own expense, new paper put on the wall, the ceiling whitened, and all the furniture mended, the room would look a heap sight prettier, wouldn't it?"

"Lor!" murmured the intelligent boy

"Well, if the minute Boggarty had got all these improvements made I should go up and look around, and smile, and jingle my money in my pocket and remark: 'This is a pretty good lay-out for a single man, Boggarty, and you have altogether too soft a thing. Your rent will be $20 a month hereafter,' what would you think of it?"

The innocent child giggled and said: "That would be cheek, wouldn't it, dad?"

"Bet your money on it, my boy," replied the father, beaming kindly on his offspring. "That would be rackrenting Mr. Boggarty, and if he kicked and claimed that all the improvements had been made by him without costing me a cent, and I should fire him out, that would be eviction. I will now," continued the parent, warming up, "briefly review the history of Ireland for the past 700 years. When Brian Boru—"

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. AN EXPENSIVE HOAX.

The following account of a hoax played upon me many years ago may teach [illegible] a useful lesson. [illegible] taking practical fun [illegible] price [illegible] this expedients. I am as fond of a good [illegible] as any one; but I detest hoaxes, which as a rule are 'past a joke,' seeing [illegible] in most cases they go far beyond [illegible] their perpetrators intended. In [illegible] I am about to narrate, either [illegible] false shame or fear, the chief actors [illegible] things take their course, without [illegible] or being able to stop them.

It will be within the recollection of [illegible] in China ports some eighteen [illegible] ago, with how great an amount of [illegible] and expectation the opening of [illegible] mighty Yang-tse ('the river of gold- [illegible] by all foreigners living in the far East. After the Anglo-French Chinese war, which had terminated with the capture of Pe-[illegible], the Chinese Government had been compelled, by force to comply with the [illegible] western powers; and had granted, however unwillingly, the opening of several northern ports, and the navigation of the [illegible] Hang-kow, the old treaty port at the mouth of the Yang-tse, was of course the [illegible] interested in this new state of [illegible], as it was the starting-point of [illegible] up-river expeditions; and every mind [illegible] filled with the prospects of the large [illegible] to be realised—prospect which unfortunately proved rather fallacious in [illegible] cases afterwards. There was, however, one serious drawback to the navigation of the river—its many shifting [illegible] and rapid tides made the ascent a matter of great difficulty to sailing vessels; and [illegible] was obvious that [illegible] of any profit to be made [illegible] fall to those fortunate few who [illegible] their own steamers or had one at their disposal. The number available [illegible], however, very small, and the rates [illegible] freight rose to such an exorbitant height, that a few [illegible] down [illegible] the cost of any good-sized steamer. In anticipation of coming events, I had [illegible] in conjunction with [illegible] friends, in order to [illegible] the purchase of a small American-built river-steamer in Hong-kong, which was to run [illegible] the river Yang-tse. Drawing but very little water, it was deemed inexpedient to expose the small craft to the danger of crossing the boisterous China Sea, and though it took a much longer time, was determined to make her run up north as close as possible along the coast. [illegible] connected with the Yang-tse [illegible] were kept very dark at the time; but this had not prevented something about the purchase and the passage of the little steamer being whispered [illegible], a fact of which I was to become [illegible] ere long.

One evening, late—it was close upon midnight—I was busily engaged in my office in Shang-hai preparing for the outgoing mail, when the office-boy rushed [illegible] a letter, just delivered [illegible] than usual excitement—no foreign mails had arrived, and business communications are not generally made at midnight. I turned the letter rather suspiciously around, for it looked very dirty and well thumbed. Inquiring who had delivered it, I was told [illegible] a coolie, apparently in a great hurry, [illegible] had handed the same to the gatekeeper a few minutes previously—that the man had stated he did not know from whom the letter came, and that no answer was required. There was nothing for it but to see what the ominous missive contained: and I was not a little shocked upon reading the following:

'[illegible] Phœnix, 25th March 188—.

'DEAR SIR,—I regret to have to inform you that we have run upon the North Bank during the last gale, and find ourselves in great danger. We may possibly succeed in getting off, if it ceases to blow hard. Captain [illegible] is sick in bed, and he has asked me to write to you for assistance.—Your obedient servant,

JOHN S——,
(Chief-officer.)'

Rather pretty news that! The whole of the letter, including the writer's signature, whose name, moreover, was unknown to me, was very illegibly written in pencil on a piece of paper, evidently torn from some memorandum book, bearing the marks of hurry and excitement. The dirty look of the outside cover was now somewhat explained—the steamer [illegible] probably had one of the Chinese [illegible] passing by; and the letter had been forwarded by a Woosung runner—the only curious circumstance being, that the man should not have even waited for payment.

We had had very heavy north-easterly gales for two days past, and the Steamer [illegible] at any moment. So far everything seemed correct enough; and Captain S——, though known as one of the best men on the China coast, might as well have met with a mishap as any other. I hardly waited for the morning to take the necessary steps in the matter. The gale continued to blow very hard, and every moment's delay might render the vessel's position more precarious; so I was on my way before break of day to consult one of our best pilots, an American, whom I knew. The man had only returned during the night, I was told, and was still in bed; but I made him get up at once, shewed the letter to him, and asked his advice.

'That looks very bad,' he said, after perusing the letter, shrugging his shoulders. 'With the wind blowing as it does, the steamer may easily have been driven near the Bank. The only chance that remains is that she may have got into deep water between the North and South Banks. But if she has gone on the latter, I would'nt give a cent for the hull and all that's in her! If we had another steamer handy (the only available one was just out of port), I should ask you to send her down without a moment's delay. As it is, I'll go down there at once, and see what's to be done. My boat is ready; a few good men will soon be picked up, and I shall be off in half-an-hour's time. Meanwhile you must hope for the best.'

Thanking the brave fellow with all my heart for his readiness, I left him to get ready; and after seeing him go down the river under full sail before the appointed time, I returned home somewhat calmer.

Thirty-six hours of anxious waiting had gone by, when on the afternoon of the following day, Mr. C——, the pilot, entered my office. His face looked no good. 'I have come back,' Mr. C—— commenced. 'I could find no trace whatever of the Phœnix. Heaven knows what has become of her and her crew. We have searched the whole of the outer Bank, and got outside it upon it; and we only put off when it was found that our boat had sprung a leak in striking, which compelled us to return. There is now but one possibility left—provided the vessel is not gone to pieces [illegible] ago, as I told you yesterday may have got between the two Banks, or in fact on the South Bank. You have now only one course to take. Try and get Captain [illegible] of the Dragon [illegible] before mentioned], who has just come into the harbour, to go down again without delay. I will go on board with you at once; and I am sure Captain F—— won't leave you in the lurch in such an emergency.'

This was no sooner said than done. Arriving on board the Dragon, we found Captain F—— just on the point of going ashore. A few words sufficed to inform him of the state of things. Although he himself and his crew had hardly had any rest for some days past, he did not hesitate a moment.

'We cannot leave Captain S—— without assistance, if help is still of any earthly use to him. He wouldn't think twice if he was in my place; and the poor devils are off our beam. Luckily, we have still got steam, so we will start at once. But you must be prepared for a long bill. You know our charge is fifty taels' (seventeen pounds) 'per hour as long as I am under weigh; and I am not at liberty to reduce the owner's charges.'

Of course I told him that money was of no consideration where the lives of so many people were at stake; and I had the satisfaction to see the Dragon again out of the harbour within a quarter of an hour. The news of the presumed dangerous position of the Phœnix, and of the steps taken to assist her, had meanwhile spread all over the foreign settlement; and I had to submit as best I could to the many inquiries and condolements about her probable fate from all sides. Captain S—— was a well-known person in all the China ports, and everyone waited anxiously for further news, while his sad end was universally deplored.

In the afternoon of the day following, the Dragon was reported in sight; and I was on board before she had dropped anchor. Captain F——, who looked flushed and wearied, had evidently not taken a moment's rest since he had started. He came up to me with a sad face.

'We have not been more fortunate in this attempt than Mr. C——, the pilot,' he said. 'There is no vestige of the Phœnix to be seen anywhere; if she has really struck there, she must have gone to pieces long ago, and not a soul of her crew has been saved. I have done all in my power, and left nothing undone. We have searched every nook and corner, and went as far as the South Bank; and the worst is, I nearly lost my own steamer as she struck, and washed all the trouble in the world to get [illegible] rather surprised, though, that we have seen no spars or timbers floating about. And that makes me ask you—don't be vexed, but rather a queer thought struck me suddenly when returning—do you know the name of the chief-officer of the Phœnix?'

I told him I did not.

'And has it never come across your mind (now, just keep quiet), that some one, maybe without considering the consequences, may have sent that letter for a hoax?'

'It would be too abominable, Captain F——,' I replied; 'nor could I believe any one would dare to do such a thing.'

'Well, we'll soon see about that. But for your sake and Captain S——'s, I could almost wish that to be the case. Not but that it would give me all the pleasure in the world to horse-whip the writer all round the settlement. Now, at all events, have done your duty; the rest we must leave to the future.'

I left the honest Captain with rather conflicting feelings. Hitherto, I had never dreamt of giving way to any such suspicion, as he had done; but the more I thought of all the circumstances connected with the delivery of the mysterious letter, the more I felt inclined that there might be something in the view he took of the affair. The first thing I did on reaching home was to try and decipher the very illegibly written signature of the name, to which, as yet I had paid but little attention. Now, with roused suspicions, I looked at it in a different light; and I succeeded at last, with a deal of trouble, in linking the single characters together. The result was Snooks—JOHN SNOOKS. Now, although the chief-officer's name, for all I knew to the contrary, really might have been Snooks—a very low one, it must be admitted—still this discovery could not but fail to increase any suspicion as to the genuineness of the letter itself. 'It might be Beelzebub, but it ain't,' was the short and smart repartee of a friend of mine, who, when travelling in the United States, was once accosted by a Yankee with the inevitable, 'What might your name be, stranger?' It might be Snooks; but I could not help being convinced that the officer's real name was not Snooks after all. However, I was not to remain very long in suspense on that point, and was still ruminating on this matter, when Mr. A——, an old friend of mine, came into my room. We had known each other from the first day of his arrival, and had always been on the best of terms together. He commenced talking on several different subjects—both of us avoiding any allusion to the steamer; but I could not fail in observing that A——, in general very quiet and collected, appeared unusually uncomfortable and absent. He shifted uneasily about on his seat, just like a man who has got something on his mind, and who wishes to unbosom himself, but does not know how to set about it. At last he seemed to have come to some resolve, for suddenly he jumped up from his chair and paced the room several times.

'So the Dragon has come back, and brought no further news?' he said, turning round upon me.

I told him that was exactly the state of the case.

'Now, look here, H——,' he resumed. 'It's about time this business were put a stop to; and on that account I am here now. But for mercy's sake, my dear fellow, be calm.' (I had started to my feet.) 'At all events, listen quietly first to what I have to tell you; afterwards you are quite free to decide what course to take.' And then the whole of the edifying story came out.

Some evenings ago—according to A——'s account, he himself having been from home—his younger brother had had a few friends dining with him. After dinner, and while sitting over their wine, of which they had likely partaken a little more than was good for them, and while debating how to spend the rest of the evening, one of the guests, Mr. L——, had of a sudden proposed to indite the letter about the Phœnix, which he declared would be a 'splendid joke.' Neither L—— nor any of the others really meant any harm, for I was on good terms with all of them; but having nothing better on hand, the proposal was at once accepted as 'capital fun;' and the company joined together to concoct the epistle which had been sent to me—with what result, I have told. Next day, neither of them appeared to have thought any more about the affair; when to their utmost consternation, on the return of the pilot-boat, they were roused by the report, rapidly spread about, of the loss of the Phœnix, and of the steps taken to save her. None had expected such serious consequences. But when the deputation to Mr. Dragon, and lately the full extent of the letter for the first time became unknown, they got very much frightened; and it was decided that the chief culprit should disclose their misdeed to A——, begging him to interfere, and, if possible, to get them out of the scrape by pleading their cause with me.

'Now that you know all about this stupid affair,' A—— continued, 'it is of course for you to say how you mean to act. I hardly dare ask you to pardon them, though by generously doing so, you will oblige me to the end of my life. If you decide otherwise, my interference is at an end. Consider, however, that you have, to a certain extent, their future fate in your hands. L——himself will not have the courage to shew his face again, and the consequences will be most serious to him. As he did not venture to tell you himself, I could not well refuse his earnest request to beg for him and the others. In case you forgive them, L—— promised to come around after dark to tell you how deeply he regrets his foolish act. I am also commissioned to inform you, as a matter of course, that the fun engaged in this affair are ready to refund all the expenses incurred; which I consider but a just punishment for what they have done.'

What was I to do? Making the names of the actors public, would certainly damage them seriously, but do little good to me now. On the other hand, angry and vexed as I was at the thought of the care and trouble I had undergone, it was a relief to find that the damage to the vessel, and the consequent loss to me, had no real foundation. After a short consideration, I gave way to the earnest pleading of friend A——, and granted a free pardon upon the conditions proposed by him—at which happy result A——left me, evidently much relieved.

There is little more to add to my story. The actors and amateurs of hoaxing had received a lesson they were not likely to forget as long as they lived, and which cured them radically of all further propensities in that line. I withstood all demands to make the names known, though I could not prevent the fact becoming public that I had been subjected to a hoax; which caused Mr. C——the pilot to 'salt' his bill rather severely for repairs to his craft, &c.; which otherwise, as he told me, he should not have done. Suffice it to say that the small bill for the Dragon, the pilot, &c. amounted in a round sum to close upon five hundred pounds, which the hoaxers had to pay with a grin, glad to get so cheaply out of the scrape.

Thus ended this very foolish but expensive hoax, the moral of which I trust will be taken to heart by those who are fond of practical joking. I may conclude my story by adding that the Phœnix arrived safe and sound only a few days later in the harbour.

If you are suffering with a cold do not fail to try Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam; it is daily relieving its hundreds throughout Our Dominion. It is pleasant and palatable. 21-1t.

"I DON'T WANT THAT STUFF," is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At the first attack thereafter, it was administered to her with such good results that she continued its use until cured, and was so enthusiastic in its praise, that she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That "stuff" is Hop Bitters.—Standard. 20-2t

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

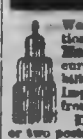
A Great Cause of Human Misery

In the Loss of

MANHOOD



We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

MECHANICAL ORGUINETTES.—Mr. G. A. Mitchell, of Water street, has been appointed agent for the town and county of Peterborough for the sale of the Mechanical Orguinette in all styles and sizes. It can be operated by anyone, even a child, and gives forth a variety of tunes with unfailingly correct musical tone. The demand for these instruments is so great that the manufactory in Montreal, is kept constantly busy in attempting to catch up to the order-list.

DRAUGHTS.—The draught match between J. Downs, of Toronto, and R. McLaurin, of this town, for $40 a side, which commenced at the Caisse House on Wednesday afternoon of last week and continued next day, resulted in a victory for Downs by four to one, McLaurin retiring after the 18th game. Downs took the first, ninth, eleventh, and eighteenth games, McLaurin the second, and the balance were drawn. A considerable number of small outside stakes were up on the result.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—The train leaving Peterborough at 4.40 in the evening, was on Monday thrown from the track about four miles from town, by the breaking of an axle. The smoking car and three box cars containing wood were thrown completely off, one of the latter being smashed to pieces. Only the front trucks of the passenger car left the rails. As the speed was slow scarcely a jar was felt by those on board. The wreck was cleared away by six o'clock next morning.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—We have received a communication from Apsley bearing the signature "Bridget O'Grady." To all communications the signature of the contributor must be attached, not for publication, but as a guarantee of authenticity. There are also several pretty strong statements that might require proof. Fun is fun; but when you come to charge a man by insinuation, with pocketing or stealing money from his employer, it is in our opinion a matter for the public press only when it comes in the shape of a report of a trial at court.

GRIP has the following among its "answers to correspondents":—McKenzie R-o-b. Joking again, Mac. You are incorrigible, but as you ask for our opinion we give it. You gained the farmers' votes by promising to impose a duty on American wheat. "Good!" shouted the farmer. Then you imposed the duty. "Good again!" shrieked the farmer. Next you tipped the big millers one of your inimitable winks, which said, "Bring in as much wheat as you like—grind it and sell the product—we shall never ask you for the duty—that was only imposed to bamboozle the farmers." This is what you have done and we are ashamed of you. Our advice is, either abolish the duty or collect it honestly—if not, remember the farmers will probably bamboozle you when the elections come round again.

A MUSICAL TREAT.—The music-loving population of Peterborough will be pleased to learn that there is now in contemplation the presentation at Bradburn's Hall shortly of the dramatic cantata in the scenes of Belshazzar's Feast, or the Fall of Babylon, and that those who are to appear in it have their parts now in preparation. Not the least pleasing feature in connection with this enterprise, is that it is undertaken as a farewell mark of respect and affection toward Rev. Mr. Roberts who has been an exceedingly popular minister in this town. With such feelings on the part of the singers, they will perforce work hard in preparation, and be so animated as to lead to the best possible execution on their several parts. The cantata is a grand and moving one, and as such is well worthy the close study of performers and the attentive ear of the public.

PRESENTATION.—Last Sunday afternoon the pupils of J. W. Flavelle, in the George-street Methodist Sunday School, on the eve of his departure for a trip to Europe, presented him with Whedon's "Commentaries on the New Testament" (five volumes), Butt's "Commentaries on Romans," "Homiletic Cyclopedia of Illustrations," and Thompson's "The Land and the Book." The gift was accompanied by an address in which his scholars expressed their appreciation of Mr. Flavelle's faithfulness as a teacher, not only in the school, but by outside example and encouragement; wishing him a pleasant and beneficial journey and a safe return; and bearing assurances of strong personal affection and prayerful regard. The address was read by Mr. J. H. Burrow, and the books presented by Messrs. G. W. McCall and J. T. Emmerson. Mr. Flavelle, in reply, thanked his class not only for their present, but also for their uniform kindness to him since he has been their teacher.

GREATEST LIVING SINGER.—The following are notices with reference to Mr. Philip Phillips who with his son sings here in George Street Methodist Church on the 9th of June next. We are glad Mr. Phillips is coming, as his reputation has long been before the world as the sweetest living singer of sacred song. He has the peculiar faculty of singing from the heart and of stirring th esoul to sympathy with the sentiment of the song.

"He possesses the same powerful voice with which he thrilled us in New York fifteen years ago."—Chicago Times.

"Philip Phillips sang here last evening. His voice never was so good in twenty-one years in which I have occasionally heard him. It never had the rich swell and melody in it that it has at the present. The character of his songs has changed, and the change is a decided improvement."—Rev. Geo. Lease, in the Western Christian Advocate.

"Philip Phillips fulfilled the highest expectation at his concert last evening. His programme illustrated almost every phase of human life in its sacred relation, and the grand songs swept across every human chord and thrilled the audience to its deepest and sweetest sensibilities. He was occasionally assisted by his son, who sang with scarcely less effect than his father."—Daily Tribune

"Philip Phillips gave one of his sings at Ottawa Street Church, Saturday evening. There was a good audience, and it always rests one and makes him feel better to hear sacred songs. This is doubly so when they are sung by a person like Mr. Phillips, for he sings sweetly, pleasantly and earnestly. Mr. P. has a rich, strong voice, and pleased all. His remarks, too were earnest and sensible."—Joliett Daily Record.

"The reputation of Philip Phillips as the greatest living singer of sacred songs in the world is wide and well deserved. His audience last night at Lincoln Hall was delighted and appreciative."—Washington Star

SUICIDE BY SHOOTING.

About 5 o'clock on Monday evening, Alexander Cochrane, aged 67 years, who lived on the 4th concession of Douro, with his cousin, Irvine Cochrane, took a gun, went to the barn, and shot himself through the heart. Death was almost instantaneous. He was just recovering from an illness which had confined him to bed about two months. Some 30 years ago he had sustained a fracture of the skull. His wife died about eleven years ago, leaving four children, all of whom are doing well, some of them being married. No special cause can be assigned for his suicide, other than a supposed affection of mind from recent illness or the old injury to his head. An inquest was held before Dr. Kincaid, when the jury brought in a verdict in accordance with the facts as stated.

CHANCERY SITTINGS.

The Chancery Sittings opened at the Court House on Friday morning last, before Vice-Chancellor Proudfoot. There were professionally present S. H. Blake, Q. C., and Chas. Moss, Q. C., Toronto; J. B. Dixon, Lindsay; D. Chisholm, Pt. Hope; and resident legal gentlemen. The following cases were disposed of:—

HARDING v CARDIFF.—Rev. Philip Harding sought to set aside a By-law of the Municipality of Cardiff, for the opening of a road through his property, the contention being against the decision of the arbitrators as giving too low a valuation to the land taken. The learned Vice-Chancellor suggested the setting aside of the award, that a new one may be made according to statute. This was accordingly done. Hatton, Hatton & Beck and C. Moss for plaintiff, J. B. Dixon and S. H. Blake for defendant.

BEAVIS v McGUIRE.—Suit to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance. Bill dismissed with costs. C. Moss and N. D. Beck for plaintiff, S. H. Blake and W. H. Moore for defendant.

ROXBURGH v LOGAN.—Bill to set aside fraudulent conveyance of deed made from father to son in 1879, plaintiff's claim then existing. Decree for plaintiff. Edmison & Wood for plaintiff. E. H. D. Hall for defendant.

This closed the business, which occupied the attention of the Court till a late hour on Saturday.

MECHANIC'S INSTITUTE MATTERS

To the Editor of EXAMINER:

SIR,—As one of the Directorate, allow me to thank you for the prominence you have given our Institute in the last issue of your valuable paper. Your sketch of our history is just and timely, but I might offer one slight correction in regard to the stated change of fees. They were never changed until we arrived in our present quarters. There was a By-law passed to make the change, but it was rescinded before it came into operations.

You will also please allow me to dissent from the opinion expressed in your article entitled "Mechanics' Institutes," in reference to the meagre support given them by mechanics. As one of this class, I regret the fact; and also think that the cause you assign and reasons offered flatter us too much, and belittle the valuable assistance we receive from the professional and merchantile gentlemen belonging to the Institute. There are among us, large-minded men, who freely contribute their money, devote considerable time, and forego their ease; because they know that through our Institute they can do good service to the public. They do not patronise us any more than we patronise them. We all have a common purpose, and work to one common end, that is, to make the young man a better mechanic, and the mechanic a better man; to provide also at least a rudimental business education for our business young men, and a means of intellectual enjoyment and improvement for any who comply with the conditions of membership, with-our regard to age, sex, nationality, religion or politics; and if it is not an Institution of Mechanics, they form, at least, a very respectable minority. The social difficulty you refer to, no doubt exists, at least, to a small extent; not with reference to Mechanics' Institutes only, but in our churches as well; but it is confined to only two classes:—those who have sufficient means to put on the appearance and ape the manners of gentility, and who, knowing the slender basis on which their pretentions rest, guard them carefully, and in so doing, often snub the other class, who are anxiously aspiring to do the same thing, but cannot. You say this may be a mistaken feeling, which it certainly is, and as such, should not be humored, but, if possible, eradicated; and the Institute endeavors to do, by promoting more general intelligence. For my own part, I wish people to treat me just as they please,—to be what they are. If there exists similarity of tastes, pursuits and sentiments, there will, no doubt be cordiality; if not, there will be no unfriendliness. If there is positive antagonism, we shall endeavour to keep so far apart as never to strike fire.

Your remarks, however, were general in their character, and if not fully applying to us in Peterborough, may very properly apply to some other places, such as Toronto, which is not a manufacturing, but a commercial city. It is also the centre of education, of Provincial Legislation; also of Divinity, Law, and Medicine. Among all these great prevailing interests, the mechanic takes the back ground.

Those who have a well-cultivated taste for good reading, and have both the means and the time at their disposal, will be the first to enjoy the advantages of our magnificent library and copiously supplied reading room. The mechanic, and his help-mate as well, are generally stinted for both; but when the privileges of the Institute are well appreciated, it is not difficult to find both the time and the means. This lack of appreciation of the Institute's advantages by those for whom they were designed, is the greatest hindrance to our complete success.

Yours, &c.,
A DIRECTOR.

A washerwoman, a regular and attentive listener at church, was commended by her parson,—"Yes," she said, "after my hard week's work is done, I get so rested to come to church and sit and think about nothin'!"

"The only lady that ever impressed me much," said an old bachelor, "was a three-hundred-pound woman, who was standing in a car, and when the car turned a corner fell against me."

The treasurer of Quebec has a deficit of about half a million on the year's transactions rendering increased taxation inevitable. Sir Charles Tupper, on the eve of the election in Colchester and Pictou, has increased the pay of the Intercolonial Railway station masters, besides appointing to lucrative positions in the public service, the sons of Senator Almon, as a salve to the disappointment of the father in not being taken into the Cabinet, as he had expected.

The St. Paul Syndicate has deflected the Pacific Railway from the Rapid City district, and thereby failed to carry out the pledges and promises made by the Dominion Government. An intense feeling of dissatisfaction consequently prevails among the Rapid City settlers; and a dozen or more Old Country families are packing up their effects and migrating to the United States. They have telegraphed to their friends in the Old Country, who were about embarking, and advised them not to come, as they will be disappointed. On the present Dominion Government alone must rest the responsibility for this unfortunate state of affairs, as it neglected in making the bargain to place in the agreement the ordinary safeguards as to the fulfilling of its own promises made prior to entering into the contract.

A Nova Scotia contemporary puts the issue before the electors of Pictou in brief but emphatic terms thus: The present Government assumed power early in October, 1878, and almost immediately began increasing expenditure till this year their estimate is $28,455,000 or $2,900,000 in excess of 1878. They have increased our taxation $4,000,000; will have increased our debt by the end of the fiscal year $42,000,000; bound the country to give to a railway corporation $25,000,000; to expend $30,000,000 in completing railroads and then hand them over to said company; give them 25,000,000 acres of land and an outrageous monopoly of the transportation of the country, virtually making them masters of the whole North-west.

The recent disallowance by the Ottawa Government of an Act affecting local property and rights in Ontario, passed by a Government and Legislature on which the Imperial Parliament had conferred the power "exclusively to make laws" in relation to "local works and undertaking" and "property and civil rights" brings the people of Ontario face to face with the discussion of two questions:—(1) Whether responsible government exists in reality, or is controllable by an outside power which is not responsible to the popular will as expressed at the Provincial elections; and (2) whether this power of disallowance is not a relic of the old colonial system of Downing-street rule, inconsistent in principle and practice with our present system of responsible government.—Globe.

REVOLUTIONARY DEMANDS IN RUSSIA.

The Executive Committee of the revolutionary party in Russia, have issued a manifesto addressed to the Czar, in which they set forth the wrongs under which the Russian people have groaned for centuries, and also formulate their demands for reforms. They demand:—

"1. A general amnesty for all political offenders of the past, inasmuch as they were not guilty of any crime, but only fulfilled the duty of citizens.

2. The convocation of representatives of the Russian people for the revision of the existing form of Government and social life, and their reconstruction in accordance with the desires of the people."

In order to secure a fair representation of the people and a true expression of the national will, they demand:

"1. That deputies shall be summoned of all classes of the people without distinction, and in proportion to the number of the inhabitants.

2. That no limitation be made as regards the rights of electors or of deputies.

3. That elections be contested freely, and therefore that the Government, as a temporary measure, and until the decision of a national assembly, shall permit:—(a) Complete liberty of the press; (b) Complete liberty of speech; (c) Complete liberty of public meetings; (d) Complete liberty of electoral programmes."

"1. The abolition of money inheritance and property devise.

2. Restriction of the isolated household, i. e., the destruction of the home, and the development of the associated household.

3. Compulsory and equal share of physical labor.

4. Organization of labor.

5. Equal division of everything.

6. Universal diffusion of education, science and art."

PRINCESS LOUISE.

At the last moment the Princess wants to back out of her promise to return to Canada. And well she may. She has been brought up from infancy among ladies and gentlemen, and in society where drunkenness, blackguardism, or dishonour are unknown. She possesses the most estimable qualities, has the soul of an artist, and represents the most advanced refinement of the day. It is natural that she should feel aversion for her Ottawa surroundings, repugnance for the men with whom she was forced into contact. It is currently reported that on more than one occasion an eminent Canadian statesman, having official relations with her husband, came to her residence "very much the worse of liquor." Can it be expected that Louise should wish to return to such an environment. Before Canada can become a fit residence for ladies of the station and tastes of Louise, the people must have learned that drunkenness is a vice which should be publicly discountenanced, and that for a Minister to receive gifts of money from parties asking government favours is dishonorable.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

A WARNING TO OVER-CONFIDENT GIRLS.

A dispatch from Toronto dated Friday night says: Last night Detective Burrows arrested a man named Ellis on the strength of a telegram from Cobourg, charging him with robbery. It appears that Ellis has a wife and several children in Napanee, where the alleged robbery took place, and was on his way west. Not satisfied with his booty, he must get into the good graces of a young girl in Cobourg, named Boyde, the daughter of wealthy and highly respectable parents. Ellis fine address, elegant manners and reputed wealth won the heart of the poor girl, whom he induced to elope with him, and it was well that Ellis was arrested before his vile purpose of taking her out of the country was accomplished. The girl was sent home to her parents this afternoon in a nearly broken-hearted condition.

There are some very straightforward people. One went into a newspaper office, and, sauntering up to the desk, asked, "I hear that the Bible has been revised. Do you know if many important changes have been made?" "A good many, I believe." "Then there is no mistake about Ananias being struck dead for lying?" "No, I believe not." "Well, if I were you, I would find out about it;" and he strolled out as unconcernedly as you please.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 9, 1881.

The Disallowed "Streams" Bill.

The "Streams" Bill of the Ontario Legislature, disallowed by the Dominion Government, was passed by the Provincial Parliament to protect the public right of floatage against the claims of private parties who would obstruct the work of rival lumbermen; as had been done in a now notorious case. But in order that the maker of improvements might receive remuneration for the works constructed by him, a clause was inserted giving him liberty to charge tolls subject to rates fixed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. In fixing the rates, or varying them from time to time, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council was required to take into consideration the original cost of the constructions and improvements, the cost of maintainence and the interest upon the original cost, as well as other circumstances which might be deemed just and equitable. Thus the responsibility of awarding a fair rate in the public interest was very properly thrown upon the Ministry, responsible to the people; instead of the matter of charges being left to the cupidity or business spleen of an irresponsible private grabber, with little or no consideration for public opinion. In disallowing the Act the late Minister of justice appears to have interpreted its provisions from mere heresay; or else he grossly misapprehended its scope and purpose. Its effect was not, as he avers in his report, "to take away the use of his property from one person and give it to another;" for the owner of the works was left not only the free use of them, but also saved his rights in case of the use of his works by others. In this particular it differed essentially from the Prince Edward Island Act of 1876, to which the Minister refers as a parallel. The lame argument, that the owner of the works was by the Act made a toll-keeper against his will, disappears under the fact that the fixing of dues by the Government gave the builder of the works a clear claim against any other party using the improvements, for an amount of money based on the quantity of material passed through the works; making the matter simply one of collection under the strict provisions of the laws relating to timber dues. Such an Act is certainly much called for, to prevent the veritable outrage of any lumberer building a dam or slide on a stream used by himself in common with other operators, and refusing to let any logs other than his own pass down, at any price; and in disallowing the Bill the Dominion Government is clearly responsible for the continuation of an intolerable evil, and the encouragement of an evident injustice.

Quebec Finances.

In his Budget Speech, the Provincial Treasurer of Quebec, after a forced acknowledgement of error in the wrong direction in his estimates for the fiscal year ending June, 1880, significantly abstained from more than a mere passing reference to the financial aspect of the year ending with this month. On the ground that it was impossible to go into details before the close of the year, now very near at hand, he did not even condescend to say a word of the broad outlines of the case, as a straightforward course would have commanded. It is probable he shrank from the task of making a very disagreeable expose, which could only prove disastrous to his party and the Ministry of which he is a member; for his incidental remarks during the course of his speech were anything but encouraging to the hopes of the electors. As to the estimated $230,000 from law and registration stamps, he said: "I am afraid my estimate will not be realized." His confession as to the estimated receipts from government railways was:—"They may not be what I expected." So the apology ran through the proposed reduction of Government employes and the contingencies of the departments. In his estimates for next year he reaches a surplus of $11,000 by introducing as probable revenue some very extraordinary items, the collection of which must be contingent on entirely outside circumstances. In fact the estimate is based on "ifs" and propped up by "buts" to such an extent as to make it quite unreliable, especially in view of the acknowledgement by Mr. Robertson that his last estimates were greatly over the mark. The people of Quebec, at the rate their Government is going, may begin to look the necessity of direct taxation fairly in the face, and set about preparing for it as the inevitable.

Editorial Notes.

WILL any of those journals which are so fond of boasting the alleged benefits of the National Policy, name a single manufactory in Canada, which owes its existence to the fiscal fraud penetrated upon the people of the Dominion by the so-called Protectionists? Name! or Shame!

THE United States has been trying to arrange with the Colombian Government, a plan by which the Panama Canal will be virtually under Yankee jurisdiction. The proposal provides for the free passage of United States ships of war through the canal, in peace or war; for the erection of forts, arsenals, &c., by the two Governments; for military occupation of the Isthmus by the United States in case the "neutrality" of the canal be threatened; and that ships of war of any other nation may be prevented from passing through the canal. Brother Johnathan has, in this case, outdone himself in the matter of cheek. Of course the proposition was not accepted by the Colombian Government, and the American Minister who drew up the proctocol, is said to be very wroth at the refusal of his little plan. The Colombians, like everyone else, could not expect French capitalists to construct a canal under any such absurd conditions of United States occupation. It is a case in which no one nation should be given a preference; and the attempt to gain an advatage of control over the proposed canal is a national impertinence. That, however, in no new thing in the history of the United States.

BIG FIRE IN LINDSAY.

AN ACRE OF WOODEN BUILDINGS BURNED.

(From the Post, June 3.)

Yesterday morning, about two o'clock, a fire broke out in the bakery of Mr. F. Green, in the rear of the Lundy block, William street, and before the alarm was sounded, the building, which was of wood, was completely enveloped in flames. It was surrounded on all sides by sheds and other outbuildings, also of wood, and dry as a cinder, and it was only the work of a few minutes for the flames to encircle them and to fork out towards the rear of the Lundy block on the one hand, and the block owned by Mr. D. Browne on Kent street, on the other. Fortunately there was a dead calm, and when once the water-works were turned on, they did good service. Three streams were working about fifteen minutes after the first alarm was sounded, but though they were not very strong ones, owing to the hydrants having been opened before the pipes were full, they, from the first, kept the flames in check, and when the full power was secured, the fire was completely drowned out. So rapidly did the flames spread at the outset, that it did not take more than twenty minutes for them to reach the end of the Globe hotel sheds, half a block away from where the fire originated. About an acre of wooden buildings were burned. The buildings completely destroyed were the bakery, the Globe hotel sheds, Mr. John Chisholm's stables, and the sheds and outhouses in the rear of the Lundy, Stevenson and Thornhill blocks, on William street. The rear portions of the brick block down as far as Mr. Robinson's gun shop were also badly injured, especially three stores of the south end, occupied by Mr. James, Mr. Silver and Mr. Johnston, which were almost gutted. The losses are estimated as follows:—J. Stevenson, Peterboro', three brick stores, insured in Royal for $2,000; loss about $500; bake shop in Imperial, $300. Mr. D. Browne's stables and sheds were fully covered by insurance. Mr. O'Leary, hotel-keeper, loses a cutter and hay to the value of about $75. Mr. Chisholm's loss is trifling. The tenants in the block on William street were Mr. Janes; Mr. Johnston, grocer; Mrs. Brown; H. Silver, paint shop; F. Green; H. Manly, furniture store. They saved nearly all their furniture. Mr. Manly lost about $50 in lumber and tools. Mr. Robinson, gunsmith, lost a bellows and other articles not of great value. All the household goods and contents of the stores were removed from the buildings, and suffered more or less in the handling. The damage done to the Lundy block is estimated at $2,500, which is fully covered by insurance, the block being insured in the Northern and Scottish Imperial Insurance companies for $4,500. Great satisfaction is expressed by the town people that the loss was not greater. They are well satisfied with the way in which the water-works worked, and with the energy displayed by the fire brigade. Under the old system, it would have been impossible to save many valuable blocks on Kent street, and those on William street, now only slightly injured.

THE COBOURG RAILWAY.

At a meeting held last week in Cobourg, to discuss the question of securing railway communication with the back country, by resuscitating the first enterprise begun in Ontario for the purpose, Col. Chamblis, representing the Company, delivered an address, the main points of which we select from the Sentinal-Star's report:—

The present owners of the road originally purchased the property for $600,000, of which they put in nearly $400,000 hard cash, issuing bonds for nearly $200,000 for the balance to extend it to Peterborough. They worked the line for one hundred to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year gross income, for some years, but not one dollar of this did they receive, for it went into the road. Whatever money was spent on the road, had been spent in this county, and had gone for the benefit of this town and community, and the company had received no returns whatever. When he thought the road could be pushed through to Peterborough, he went to work at once, to redeem his promise to the people of Cobourg. It was estimated that $200,000, with the iron, and the Government aid, would complete the road to Peterborough. He urged the Company to go on with the work. They put in the $200,000, and the people here gave the iron. The road would have been completed, but as a first drawback, Peterborough backed out. They had agreed to give $40,000 towards the completion of the road. They refused to give it. If they had given this forty thousand dollars, he would have put it in the bridge; for the bridge was so far advanced, that this, with the Government aid, and a very little more, which the Company agreed to give, would have finished the work. But iron began to go down, and continued to go down, until the furnaces at last had to stop. When he went to the Company for money to finish the road, they asked how many parties there were to that agreement? Three, he told them; themselves, Cobourg and Peterborough. Had they not done as they agreed? he was asked. He said they had. Had not Cobourg done her part? He said she had. Had Peterborough? He had to answer, no. The Company said: Let Peterborough fulfil her promise. The action of Peterborough was a direct repudiation, upon technical grounds, as the road was not completed for three weeks after the time stipulated. Some people were under the impression that Peterborough's objection was because the bridge was not built, and wondered why he went on with the construction at the other side of the lake before completing the bridge. The distinct agreement with Peterborough was with regard to the Chemong portion of the road. They said nothing whatever about the connection with Cobourg. They took it for granted that if the road was built on the north side of the lake, the lake would eventually be crossed. It would have been done, too, long ere this, if Peterborough had kept her promise. He was just as anxious now to do all he could for the interests of the town, as he had been in the past. He thought however, that the interests of the town lay in the procuring of furnaces and smelting works, instead of the railway. Furnaces could be constructed for about $50,000, for making steel, and it was found that the Marmora ore was the best that could be got, for the manufacture of Bessemer steel. The great trouble with the owners of the mine was its distance from Pittsburg. Furnaces could be erected at a small cost. He thought the Company would be able to make arrangements to ship iron by midsummer. As to resuscitation, a portion of the road was already completed, it would take about $120,000 to finish it to Chemong lake, and it had about thirty or forty thousand dollars of rolling stock. Supposing it were completed to-morrow, how much would it be worth? The question simply was, would it pay to complete the road? That is the business way to look at it. If this trade of the north is going to be so remunerative, let the town, or any company, or individual, complete the road,—make the bridge across Rice Lake, form the connection with Peterborough, and complete the line throughout, and they shall own half the road. Finish the road, and you shall own one half of it when completed, notwithstanding all the money we have put in it, and its rolling stock. Now, if it would be good for the present company to build it, it will be good for anyone else; and there is a chance.

After some discussion, during which Mr. Hewson told the meeting, after Col. Chamblis had left, that he was willing, if a company was formed for the purpose, to make the same liberal offer with regard to the mines, that he did with regard to the railway, the following resolution was passed:—

That this meeting is of the opinion that it is expedient to have the re-construction of the railway carried through by means of a company, independent of the town, or municipality.

THE BIDDULPH TRAGEDY.

THE FEEHLEYS TO BE TRIED FOR MURDER.

The papers in the Feehley matter have been sent to Washington by U. S. Commissioner Davidson, and the extradition will follow as rapidly as the course of the law will allow. County Crown Attorney Hutchinson has placed the matter in the hands of the Attorney-General. It is asserted in well-informed quarters that on reconsideration of the case in its present stage the Crown has decided to indict the Feehleys for the murder of one of the inmates of the Donnelly homestead, probably Tom, and that an indictment against them will be framed forthwith. It is hoped by the Crown officials that the knowledge of the part he took in the murder of his friend, coupled with the fear of conviction upon his own confession, will so work upon Tom that he will before the trial, make a clean breast of the matter, and the arrest of all implicated by his confession will follow. At present no arrests will be made, the Crown preferring not to incur again the great expense necessarily involved until they have either tested the value of the Feehleys' statements to other parties as evidence, or have their written confession to strengthen the case. Certain it is that the Crown will make no more advances or offers of immunity to prisoners. If they want to confess they must make the first advance.

BISHOP CLEARY.

His Visit to Peterborough—His Reception—His Zealous Interest in Things Ecclesiastic and Educational.

The knowledge that the lately appointed Bishop, of Kingston, Dr. James Vincent Cleary, would visit Peterborough on Saturday, had, for some days before, produced unwonted activity among the faithful Roman Catholics of the town and neighborhood, in preparing for him a fitting reception and warm welcome. High merit is naturally looked for in a Bishop; this Bishop prelate was known to have attained to distinctions, in his native land and elsewhere, such as are not common even among Diocesan dignitaries. In order that our readers, of all creeds, may understand something of the "man" whom the Roman Catholics of this Diocese may well feel proud to receive as their Bishop, we present a condensed account of his past life, condensed from the columns of a well-known Roman Catholic journal:—

James Vincent Cleary was devoted to the service of the sanctuary from his boyhood. While quite a youth he was sent as a student of divinity, to Rome. Having distinguished himself there by his abilities, and won the respect and confidence of his superiors for his graces of heart and soul, he was invited to return to Ireland; and was appointed to a Professorship in the classes at Maynooth, and has carried off at that school the highest honors in philosophy, theology, and critical studies of the holy writ. His thirst for learning led him, after his ordination, to enter on a still further and higher course of study at the College of Salamanca. Having obtained high honors in that institution, he was invited to return to Ireland as Professor of Dogmatical Theology and Biblical Exposition in St. Johns College, Waterford. The first public examination for the granting of degrees by the Catholic University, since the time of Henry VIII., was assigned to the young Professor of Theology, and in recognition of the acuteness of logic and breadth of learning then shown, he received from the Senate of the University the merit-degree of Doctor of Divinity, and the appointment as permanent examiner of students of the theological classes. Promoted subsequently to the Presidency of St. John's College, he earned a high reputation as a disciplinarian and administrator. To the National Synod of the Catholic Church in Ireland, in 1875, the Bishop of Waterford took Father Cleary as his theological adviser, and the Synod appointed his reverence to the secretaryship of one of the most important committees then charged with duties de fide. After his return from the Synod, Father Cleary was appointed Vicar of the Diocese of Waterford, and parish priest of Dungarvan. Resigning his Presidency of St. John's College, he entered on his new functions with a zeal and ability which have brought forth many good works in a few years. In the parish of Dungarvan he has given proof of his artistic taste and religious zeal in the addition to the church of works of art at an aggregate cost of over $5,200. When the hand of God sent famine on the land for his labor, Father Cleary cried eloquently for help to his countrymen at large, and to the citizens of Canada and the United States. The response was so timely and so generous, especially from Canada, that it resulted in the plucking from the jaws of death men, women and children, to the number of fourteen hundred. It is said of Father (now Bishop) Cleary that, "during more than twenty years of his priestly ministry he was universally held in high esteem as a cultured gentleman, a polished scholar, a learned divine, and a zealous priest." Selected by the Pope to succeed the late Dr. O'Brien, as chief pastor of the Diocese of Kingston, his Lordship received consecration at Rome, in the Church of the Propaganda. Cardinal Simeoni was chosen to represent his Holiness at the service, and was assisted by the Irish Archbishop of Cashel, Dr. Croke.

Such is the person and prelate who since his arrival at the See to which he has been assigned, has visited several parts of his Diocese, and to whom his people in Peterborough very properly sought to do honour on his appearance among them. Accordingly preparations were made for his reception in a manner befitting his intellectual and moral worth, as well as his position as a dignitary of the Church. On his arrival, by the noon train on the Midland Railway, he was met at the station and received by a deputation consisting of Messrs. O'Sullivan, Cahill, Muncaster, Corkery, Delaney and Hayes, who were, however, a mere fraction of the reverential crowd who had assembled to get a first glimpse of their Bishop. He was driven directly to the presbytery, whence presently issued a procession of Priests and altar-boys with tapers, escorting the prelate, in vestments, and with mitre and crozier, to the Church. The attendant priests were Fathers Lynch and Cicolari, Peterboro'; Casey, Campbellford; Kielty, Enniskmore; O'Connell, Douro; and Quirk, Hastings. Across the street, from Church to Convent, hung flags and bannerets; and over the gateway leading to the Church an evergreen arch bore a streamer with the words, "Welcome from Dungarvan," also the secondary mottoes, "Pastor Bonus," and "Vive les Canadiens," besides other bright decorations and intertwined maple-leaves and shamrocks—the work of the sisters and pupils of the Convent. After the ceremony of presenting the keys, the procession entered the Church, and the congregation rising, a glad Te Deum rang forth from organ, choir and priests. The brilliantly illuminated altar was also profusely decorated with flowers. After devotion, His Lordship took his seat within the chancel, supported by the fathers, and was presented with from the laity of the parish and the St. Vincent de Paul Society of the mission.

The first was read by Dr. O'Sullivan, supported in its presentation by Messrs. Corkery, Delaney and Muncaster; the second by Mr. T. Kelly, supported by Mr. D. Sullivan. All of these gentlemen received the blessing of the Bishop, who also made pertinent inquiries as to the state of the congregation and the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

SPEECH OF THE BISHOP.

His Lordship explained that the purpose of his visit was to acquaint himself with the religious condition of the parish, as its Bishop, responsible for the souls of the people. The priests were under his directions, he was under that of the Pope, who, under Christ sent his Bishops into all the world to preach the Gospel. The good Bishop sought to secure spiritual attendance for every member of the flock, from the cradle to the grave. He came to the Church at Peterborough that he might know it better; to hold personal conversation with its members; to bless them, and assure them of his desire for their welfare. He came to see if all properly applied the discipline of the Church to their consciences, in the domestic circle and in society. His especial charge was to see that the duties of the ministry were faithfully carried out. A particular part of these duties consisted in care for the young, directing them in the right path, and, by instilling into their minds sound faith, th s securing their continuance in the true way.

He thanked the congregation for their address, and assured them of the pleasure the visit to Peterborough afforded him. Such words of welcome to one coming, as he did, from a distant land, on no mere voluntary trip, made him feel that he was among friends. In a place of which he had no previous personal knowledge, these kind greetings were as music to his ears. He gladly accepted the assurances of affection, supported as they were by those of co-operation with him in his work. He liked the application to him of the words "father" and "brother." As a father to the young he desired to supply them with all needful nourishment, with fatherly affection and care. As a brother to the older members he, would reach their hearts; encourage them; sympathise in their troubles; advise and co-operate with them in their projects. "Father" and "brother," were words he loved to hear. He was greatly gratified at the expressions of attachment and loyalty to Fathers Lynch and Cicolari, and that they were held in reverence and affection. He hoped the people would ever prize their educational advantages and maintain that educational freedom which is the great bulwark of success. Briefly referring to his visit to Rome, he was glad, after the sacrifices he had made in coming to them, to hear from themselves that they would aid him in his office. As pastor, and as people, their relations were mutual, God never established an honour without some corresponding obligation and duty. Their duty was obedience; his was labor and self-sacrifice. He accepted their proffered obedience, and thought that therein his hopes would be verified. He was glad of their reference to the great glory of God. On the stage each man plays his part; and then the curtain drops; life is the same. Human life is as a flower that blooms in the morning and is crushed at night, and all the pomps and vanities of the world will soon pass away. He was delighted to know that their religion was advancing; and was gratified to hear in Peterborough, as elsewhere, that Canada was a free country, with equal rights and equal laws for all, rich and poor, Protestant and Catholic. He hoped that they would always honorably maintain the great freedom they enjoy, by seeking to do no harm to their fellow men. "Peace!" was the watch-word announced by angels on the morning of the Nativity. "Peace," was the first salutation of the risen Saviour to his disciples. Perfect peace should reign in each man's conscience, in the family, and in society. He urged that none would, by any act of injustice, deprive themselves of that perfect freedom which alone could insure peace. As a great Roman statesman has written:—"There is no injury done by citizen to citizen that is not a crime against the commonwealth." Even so in the Christian Republic. Alluding to the people of Ireland, mentioned in the address, he said they were robbed of freedom, their lands were confiscated, they were cast on the ocean of life, to sink or swim, and they passed as paupers among the nations of the earth. He denounced the unparalleled laws by which Ireland has been ruled. The country had been deprived of education and intellectual growth, because it preferred its religion, and refused to sell its birthright. He hoped the day would soon come, when the people of Ireland, like those of Canada, would be given the right to arrange their own concerns.

The members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society were next encouraged. The Bishop remarked that the foundation was not the building. It requires stone upon stone to form the edifice. Faith is the foundation of the Church; charity its completion. Without the stamp of charity there is no virtue in anything; it availeth nothing; and charity shall remain after all other virtues have vanished. He placed a very high value on the work done by the members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society. They stretched out their hands to their poorer neighbors, gave them consolation and comfort, made them forget their sorrows and took them by the hand and lifted them up, aiding them in time of distress. Without such actions this world would not be worth living in. Wherever he went he would advocate the establishment of St. Vincent de Paul Societies, for he knew they were a blessing. The members of the society had helped him in his parish to aid distress during the dark days of want, and he always found them willing to do their duty. They were always religious and representative men, and models to younger members of the congregation. He congratulated Fathers Lynch and Cicolari on having such an organization in the parish, and promised to do all he could to assist it. He thankfully accepted the position of an honorary member of the Peterborough St. Vincent de Paul Society, so kindly offered.

Receiving the Benediction, the congregation dispersed, and the Bishop returned to the Presbytery.

AT THE CONVENT.

Later in the afternoon the Bishop paid a visit to the Convent, where he met a really beautiful welcome from the pupils, who to the number of more than a hundred were ranged in orderly array to receive him. About fifty of the children were dressed in white, and many of them bore flowers. Roses also garnished the looped-up curtains over and beside the folding-doors. On the walls were mottoes, "Welcome," "God Bless Our Bishop," "Dungarvan's Pride," "Joy Reigns Supreme," and the Harp with "Erin go Bragh." There were present, besides the nuns and their pupils, Mayor Smith, Sheriff Hall, Rev. J. W. R. Beck, R. W. Erratt, W. Claxton, F. Lynch, Dr. O'Sullivan, Thos. Cahill, Jno. Garvey, Jno. Moloney, B. Morrow, E. Mynes, and others. The entrance of the visitor was greeted with glad strains from piano and organ, the company standing until the bowing Bishop had seated himself upon a slightly raised platform, with the Mother Superior and the priests supporting him. A song of welcome was sung by the pupils, the solos being taken by Mary Tierney and Annie Dunn; a rhymed address of welcome and thanks was spoken by seven little girls, wearing gilt crowns, one of whom presented his Lordship with a tastefully arranged bouquet of flowers. After another song of welcome in which Misses Mahew, Tierney and Dunn bore the principal parts, Mary Tierney presented the address of the school to the Bishop, and a little mite in white, named Doherty, spoke the lines:—

"And now Your Lordship's blessing kind we pray,
As crowning favor on this happy day."

The blessing so prettily asked was of course given.

In response to the warm welcome he had received,

His Lordship assured his hearers that his expectations in coming to Peterborough were more than realized. He was very desirous to come and see not only the parish and pastor, but also the Convent and School, where virtue is taught and the children are prepared for the conflicts and trials of life; to see the faces of those good little girls who had been smiling so graciously upon him. He knew they would welcome him as their Bishop; but they had also proffered to him their kind wishes. What was very gratifying was that they had culled flowers, and arranged them in their symbolical character, each with its significance, surmounted by the lily, the type of purity, and had thus presented them to him. That was bringing God between the givers and the receiver. The fragrance of the bouquet expressed to him all the givers could say in words. They had given him a welcome also in rhythmical lines, expressive of their beautiful sentiments, attuned to the sweet lyric of dear old Ireland, "The Vale of Avoca." They had said their welcome in a manner which charmed him and brought it to his very heart. They had welcomed him in a manner befitting children; in a way expressive of the relation of children to a parent; of Catholic children to their Bishop. He knew well that the children only expressed the sentiments that had been inspired into their souls by those who had charge of them, and he took their address and their songs, their poetry and their exquisite expression of delight to be the reflection of the spirit that pervades the institution where they are trained. Therefore he thanked the holy sisters who were set over the children, that they should be to them all that a parent would be, and more, by a life of tenderness, sympathy and solicitude. In speaking to parents he spoke as one of the priesthood, to whom their children were children indeed. The same God who gave parental love to fathers and mothers, in the order of nature, gave it to the sisters, in the order of grace. They reared the children in mind, spirit and character, that the little ones may be pure in spirit, in undefiled virtue, breathing holiness, models of the great Christian female character. He admonished the children to love the sisters; to attend to their books, and to the behests of their teachers. They came not only for intellectual training, but for that which will excel and perfect it—moral training, of mind and heart, thoughts and sentiments, which will govern all their actions through life; that they may learn to walk the earth with their conversation in heaven, always remembering that this earth is stained by sin, and that every step must be guarded, lest any defilement touch their souls; that they may be images of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who is the model of Christian female character for all time. The Sisters would bring them to the highest type of Christian excellence of character. Under the name of the Virgin they (the Sisters) had pledged themselves to emulate her virtues and holiness. He would therefore urge the children to learn from their books all that belongs to secular knowledge and mental preparation, that they may not be behind any other section of society in the things that belong to social and domestic life. But they should strive to show that they have learned far more,—that they are held in subjection to a Higher Power. They should observe the Sisters in their demeanour, their sincerity, their chastity, their orderly ways and precision, their early rising and continued prayer, their zeal and patience in labour, their regularity in life, their tenderness and solicitude for those under their care, their whole life of disinterested labour for the glory of God. Look upon their faces, and see what a Christian female should be. The Church placed before the children a model of Christian female life, that they might get it into their minds and hearts before the experiences of the world. He trusted no child present would go out and do anything mean or disgraceful. They should observe their deportment: striving to let every one see the spirit of Christianity developed in them. It was related in the life of St. John Chrysostome that in his youth he was committed to the care of a learned pagan philosopher to be taught the art of rhetoric, which in those days was the passport to high places and power; and his mother was so careful to teach him obedience and reverence to his pagan master, that the latter was led to remark amongst his brother philosophers, "Oh, what wonderful women these Christians have!" And to-day the virtue, modesty and gentleness of Christian women are a wonder to the world. The children, if taught properly, would grow up in this mystery of female character, fitting for the things of the next world, and of this, which is only a preparation for the next. In imitating the faith, gentleness, kindness and moral character of the Sisters, the children would learn to brighten up the path of others. They should learn both from books and from example. The female should be pure as the sunbeam, brightening, and cheering and warming the household, and assuaging the miseries of this world's darkness and sorrow. She should represent the holiness of heaven reflected upon earth, after the example of the Blessed Virgin. He would say to the children: read well; write well; learn to cast up accounts; to write a good letter; to project maps, study the geography and history, first of your own country, then of other lands; perfect yourselves, if possible, in music, drawing or painting; but, above all, attend to the formation of your minds and hearts, and study to subdue the passions of this wretched human nature. He accepted with pleasure their address, and their boquet; and above all he admired the lily which surmounted all the other flowers which God had drawn from their garden, by the brightness of the sunbeam and the daw of the night, and which represented the purity that is the crowning gem of the Catholic Church.

The visitors present were then presented. On the introduction of the Mayor, His Lordship stated that the Mayors of the towns he had visited, though Protestants, always met him at the schools. This he took to be an acknowledgement of their interest in education. The Mayor expressed his pleasure at being present, and his thanks to the sisters for their invitation. The Bishop had a pleasant word for all, and securing from the Superior a whole holiday for the school, departed bearing the loving wishes of the pupils.

THE SUNDAY SERVICES

were well attended, the Church being comfortably filled in the morning, and so crowded in the evening that many could not gain admittance. After mass the Bishop addressed the congregation upon matters of religious duty, with particular reference to the training of the children; and after vespers he spoke of his visit to Rome, and delivered many admonitions upon practical christian life.

VISITING THE SCHOOLS.

On Monday His Lordship again visited the Convent, administered mass, conferred with the teachers, trustees and the priests, as to the condition and conduct of the school, and gave some further sound advice to the girls on the necessity of careful attention to learning in their youth. He then drove to the Separate School, taught by Mr. Lynch, and carefully inquired into the state and working of the institution, giving sound views of conduct to both teacher and pupils. An address on behalf of the school, was read by Edward McFadden; and in reply, His Lordship thanked them for their kind expressions; expressed his great interest in education, as that which prepares the boy for manhood and helps one generation to properly take the place of another. He trusted the boys would grow up just, honorable, truthful, honest, pure, industrious and persevering, giving to the trustees the comfort hereafter of being satisfied before God that they have done their duty. He would feel it an honor to hold the position of trustee, and would be proud to point to a man trained in this school, as a good citizen and a good Catholic. The boys should remember that they will not have a chance to learn much more after leaving school, and should strive to so act as to be able to cheerfully recognise in after life the gentlemen who took such an interest in them when young. In conformity to the request of the address the Bishop gave his blessing to the school; after which he stipulated with the teachers for a holiday and dismissed the happy urchins to their play.

In the afternoon a like visit was paid to the school taught by Miss Hurley, in the lower part of the town. Here, also, an address, read by Mary Ann Kelly, was presented to the Bishop, who made a reply full of meaning for the young, and also for the elders in charge of the schools. In his visits to the schools, His Lordship was accompanied by the Trustees, who will doubtless take a livelier interest, hhenceforth, in the institutions of training, over which they are made lay guardians. Later he received a number of persons at the Presbytery and showed his interest in all matters relating to the parish.

On Tuesday morning His Lordship took leave of Peterborough, and was driven to Keene and then to Hastings, being well received and reluctantly parted with at each place. From Hastings he set out on his return to Kingston.

Bishop Cleary is seemingly little over fifty years of age, well preserved and hearty in appearance, of medium height, and easy in movement. His robes sit well, and not oppressively, upon him. With an open countenance, expressive of Hibernian good-humour, mobile features, and natural adaptation of gesture, his speech flows readily; his voice, low, yet distinct, falls in pleasing and persuasive tones upon the listening ear. Indeed, in the matter of oratory, he seems to have taken for his model that saint of the golden mouth to whom he made reference in his address to the convent pupils. He speaks with sincerity, and his straightforward utterances and easy rapport with the feelings of others, while making him a model Bishop, at the same time proclaim him every inch a true man. With such a chief pastor great things may be expected from the Roman Catholics of the Diocese of Kingston.

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 9, 1881.

The East Durham Election.

The political contest in East Durham, to fill the vacancy in the Ontario Legislature, caused by the death of the late Mr. John Rosevear, is "coming to a head." Both parties have held conventions, and nominated candidates, a "dark horse" drawing to the front in each case. The Conservatives seem to have had greater difficulty in fixing upon a man than the Reformers. This indicates that the Liberals of the Riding have become alive to the folly of throwing the game into the hands of their opponents by internal dissentions; and encourages the hope that they will make a thoroughly united effort to place their candidate, Mr. W. H. Russel, of Millbrook, at the head of the poll.

The Liberal choice is a good one; for Mr. Russell has proved himself a constant and consistent Liberal, in the best acceptation of the term. He is no hot-headed blusterer, impatient and impertinent; and has therefore earned the respect of opponents as well as adherents of his party. Pursuing a quiet and useful life in the midst of a rural community, he has always striven to advance the interests of the people among whom his lot is cast, in the main particular, of agriculture, in which they are interested. Though he has not been aggressive, he has been fairly active in political matters, upon which he holds a rational grasp, by the power of a quick intelligence and a practical mind. His nomination by the party is perhaps the very best that could have been made. At least, it is a recognition of worth of which he is deserving.

In a scramble among sectional aspirants, and against a dead-lock between two rival claimants resident in Cavan Township, the Conservatives were finally forced to make choice of a candidate who has hitherto been unheard of in politics, Dr. Brereton, of Bethany, a professional man of some local reputation, but little known a score of miles from home. His selection doubtless depended on the knowledge that he will be a very obedient servant to the demands of the party leaders; for it certainly does not arise from any acquaintance with his fitness as a representative man for the Riding. Whether the party will rally to his support remains to be seen; though Conservatives are not generally backward in voting for any candidate set up for their suffrages

The Liberals certainly have the advantage in the matter of a candidate; and if they unitedly support him at the polls, there is a reasonable hope that they may manage to "redeem" the constituency from Conservative rule. However, considering the influence of the past on the spirit of parties, they may make up their minds to work hard and diligently, if they would score the desired victory.

Peterborough and Railways.

It is now positively known that the Grand Junction road has passed into the hands of the Midland Railway Company, which took formal possession on Monday; and that the line from Peterborough to Belleville and to Madoc is now being worked under the control of the officers of the Midland road. The junctions of the two roads, at Auburn and at the head of George street, are being so improved as to permit of the ready running of trains all over the common Midland system; and a time-table covering the whole of the ramifications will be issued in a few days. All trains will leave the present Midland Railway station, in this town. The point now principally being aimed at, is the insertion into the system of the "missing link" between Peterborough and Omemee, by which means all the immense traffic from the important harbour, docks and elevator at Midland City will be brought by way of this town, thus conferring an immense advantage upon it. The citizens of Peterborough will now look more eagerly than ever to the beginning, building and operating of the Omemee link, and it is desirable that steps be taken by those interested, to secure the immediate construction of this portion of the line north. The energy of the President and Directors of the Midland Railway in thus successfully struggling for the great prize to which the efforts of all eastern-bound lines are now looking, is worthy of commendation on the part of those to be even indirectly benefitted, and of the admiration of rival corporations.

In the light of future benefits to all the companies concerned, it is to be conjectured that the Toronto & Ottawa, Toronto & Nipissing, Whitby & Port Perry, Grand Junction, Midland, and the Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie roads will eventually form a consolidation for power and practical advantage in the conveyance of the enormous trade of the North-West, much of which would thus come by way of Peterborough.

Unhappy Ireland.

The present condition of Ireland is indeed deplorable. The policy of combination and passive resistance, so charming in the mouths of Parnell and other agitators, has become in practice an active resistance to the carrying out of the law as it now stands. And while wrong, rage and vain encounters with the police and military are consuming the people, those who pretend to sympathize with them are doing all in their power to obstruct legislation in the direction of improving the position and prospects of the Irish tenantry. Such men don't appear to consider that their bluster in the House of Commons tends to increase the flow of violently-spilled blood in Ireland. Each "hot debate in the British Parliament" has its hot disturbance in some corner of Ireland: and so long has the warmth been kept up that the country is ready to burst into a blaze at almost any moment. A rising of the peasantry will only be suppressed, without any outcome of good; but with the accompaniment of all that is evil. The Land Bill of the Gladstone Government deals more directly with the amelioration of distress and poverty in Ireland than any other measure that has ever been proposed; and it is not likely that a government, satisfied with having taken all possible care, even to the length of extraordinary legislation, to better the condition of the Irish people, will yield to the outcry of those who bring passion, not reason, to their aid in opposition to the Bill. The Liberal Government, while trying to do what it can to advance the Bill, can also do something in the way of "passive resistance" to those who would force it to abandon the measure or so amend it as to make it inoperative.

For the vacancy in the House of Commons, caused by the resignation of the late Minister of Justice and member for Pictou, the Liberals have brought out as their candidate, Mr. J. W. Carmichael, and are determined to make a big fight in the centre of the territory which was to have been benefitted by the coal tax. The Government candidate is Mr. John McDougall, of Westville. In Colchester, which was considered by the Government safe to return the new Minister, Mr. McLelan, the late Senator and would-be Commoner, will have a sharp struggle for election, if, indeed, he do not miss it entirely. Mr. Charles N. Cumming has come forward to oppose him, and is so strong a candidate, that the ministerialists are not so confident as they were of Mr. McLelan's election in his old county.

North Ontario.

The resignation of the late member for North Ontario, to assume the Shrievalty of the county has resulted in the loss of a Ministerial seat in the Legislature. The election to fill the vacancy took place on Saturday last, when Mr. F. Madill, the Conservative candidate, was elected by a small majority over the vote polled for the Liberal nominee, Mr. Bigelow. This is a surprise which should carry a lesson to the Liberals of every constituency in the country, and lead them to perfect their organization in such a way as to leave no part of the party vote unpolled through carelessness or over-confidence, as is so often the case. While Liberal voters are prone to rest on the expectation that other men will be drawn to the polls by the same intelligent influences which take them there, the opposite party does not fail to "work the oracle" in every possible manner so as to swell the number of Conservative ballots cast. North Ontario, an admittedly Liberal constituency, is thus lost to that party for a time, not so much because of the number of Conservative votes cast as of the number of Liberal votes which were not polled. The lesson conveyed by the issue in North Ontario on Saturday should stimulate to the utmost the efforts of our Liberal friends in East Durham, who are about to enter upon a contest for a Legislative seat admittedly hard to gain for a Reformer; and where their opponents will be somewhat encouraged by the result in North Ontario. The Liberals of North Waterloo will do well, too, to have a care that their present Sheriff is not also succeeded in the Legislative Assembly by an Opposition member.

The Conkling-Platt dead-lock in the Republican party of the United States, now removed to the New York State Senate, continues unbroken. The President remains quietly firm in his assurance that the bulk of the Republican party will support him in the difference, rather than the "strutting turkey-cock of Oneida County," who originated the quarrel. It is said that Vice-President Arthur is working the "Machine" in the interest of Conkling; also that the baffled ex-Senator is calling in the help of his "very dear friend," ex-President Grant. The whole affair is a pretty severe commentary on the condition of politics in the neighbouring Republic, especially as there is no knowing yet just how it will end.

PETERBOROUGH COURT OF REVISION.

Since our last report all the remaining cases have been disposed of, as follows:—

I. H. Brock is assessed as a member of the Times Printing Co., and released from statute labor requirements.

W. B. Morgan's assessment for $1,000 income being in error, is struck off.

The Poole estate assessment is reduced to $700.

The Hall estate assessment is reduced to $4,000.

The assessment of the Midland Railway was confirmed on eight parcels of land, and reduced on seven other parcels by $750, making the total assessment of the company in this town $24,200.

The Scott estate assessment is confirmed; as are also those of Orlando Giles, the Grand Junction Railway, Robt. Walton, Florence McAuliff, and C. J. Nicholl's.

The Peterborough Club's assessment is reduced to $2,200.

Thomas Bradburn's assessment on income is confirmed; his personalty reduced by $500; while in the matter of his realty the assessment of seven parcels is confirmed and that on six others reduced by $3,200; making his total assessment $53,800 on real property, $100 on personal property and $2,000 on income.

The Roll, as corrected and amended, has been confirmed by the Court, subject, of course, to appeals to the County Judge for further revision.

THE WHEAT ROBBERY.

(Toronto Globe, June 2nd.)

The attention of farmers and holders of wheat is directed to the state of the market. Yesterday the prices of No. 2 spring wheat at Toronto and Chicago stood as follows:—

	Toronto.	Chicago.	Toronto highest.
June 1 ...	$1 17	$1 10¼	8¼c.

Apparently, another great upward movement has been commenced in Chicago. According to the Tribune, certain large capitalists have come to the conclusion that the prospects of the wheat crop in the States are bad enough to justify their "holding for a rise" all the wheat they can purchase. As on the occasion of Keene's great corner, all the inland American markets follow those of Chicago, and those persons who have wheat to sell will get the benefit, but in consequence of the N. P. the Canadian markets do not follow those of Chicago. As an instance, we quote the Buffalo and Toronto prices, on May 31, of No. 1 spring wheat, the only grade for which we can procure the figures:—

	No. 1 Spring.
Buffalo	$1 25
Toronto	1 19
Buffalo highest	6 cts.

The Buffalo figures are from the Courier, the Toronto figures from the Mail. If anybody thinks the wheat tax is doing him any good, we would be obliged if he would explain the reasons for this difference.

If the Chicago movement is sustained, Canadian farmers will have a repetition of their experience in 1879-80. They will again have the felicity of standing by and watching American farmers at the same distance from the seaboard receiving several cents per bushel more than can be obtained here. For a whole year after the N. P. came into force, the prices of Canadian wheat were at least ten cents a bushel less than they would have been if there had been no N. P.

It is rather too much that the Government should suffer to continue in existence a tax which not only does not aid the persons whom it was intended to aid, but which actually oppresses them.

MANUFACTURERS of Reapers, Mowers and Threshing Machines prefer "Castorine Machine Oil" to any other. It will outwear Lard, Seal or Elephant, and is guaranteed not to gum. 1-ly

PETERBOROUGH, June 8, 1881.

There is not much doing in grain, but rather more wheat offering, and the price has declined, to $1.10 to $1.12. Oats are steady at 35 to 36, and offerings are fair. Peas are selling from 62 to 65, with small receipts. In barley there is nothing doing. Hay is dull, at $8 to $9, the receipts not being large. Wool is not moving freely, but is firm, at about 23c. Prices being low, farmers are holding back. On the market there is very little doing. Saturday's market was fairly attended. Potatoes were in large supply and created a glut hard to move at 25 to 30 per bag. Some of them remained unsold. Butter at from 12 to 14c., was in very good supply, but met with slow sale. Eggs brought 10 to 10½, and were not greatly in demand. No meat is offering, except veal, which brings 5c. for hind quarters.

SCHOOL BOARD

At a meeting of the Board of School Trustees held at the usual place on Tuesday evening, there were present, beside Mr. Jas. Stevenson, the chairman, presiding, Messrs. Denne, Robinson, Rutherford, Sawers, Stratton, Toole and Wrighton.

The minutes of the special meeting of April 12th, being read, were confirmed.

The Chairman reported that Mr. James had been engaged as teacher of Modern Languages at the salary fixed by the Board.

Mr. Rutherford asked if the discontinuance of the senior Matriculation class by the Principal of the Collegiate Institute, had been made with the consent of the Board or the Chairman? The Chairman knew nothing about it; but presumed that the Principal exercised his judgment in the matter of classes.

A bill from the Times office, for printing, $1.50, and advertising, $3.30, was ordered to be paid.

Reports of attendance at the Public Schools were presented for April and May. That for April, showed at the Central School a roll of 541, and average of 404; at the South Ward School—roll, 205; average, 158; at the West Ward School—roll, 171; average, 102. Total—roll, 917; average, 694. The return for May, showed:—Central School—roll, 517; average, 399; South Ward—roll, 214; average, 166; West Ward—roll, 180; average, 141. Total—roll, 911; average, 706. The Chairman stated that the returns for the Collegiate Institute had been mislaid.

Applications for the position of teacher from Misses Lizzie Keele and Sarah McLeod, were formally received.

A letter from Mr. J. E. Metherell, of Seaforth, was ordered to be answered by the Secretary, with the statement that a Principal had been engaged,

A report from the Steam Users' Insurance Company was read, stating that the boiler in use in the School buildings had been inspected when showing a pressure of 35 inches; that the valves were free; the fixtures in good order and the boiler in good condition.—Received.

A letter from Mr. John Braden, principal of the Public School, asked, that in order that he might attend properly to the inspection and examination of all the classes in the School, that he should be relieved of the regular instruction of his department occasionally; say about an average of one day per week. On motion the request was granted and Miss Lizzie Keele was appointed to act as his substitute, not more than one day per week, at $1.25 per day.

A communication from Principal Dixon, called attention to the fact that Inspector Buchan commented unfavourably on the reading of the pupils in the Collegiate Institute; stated that the services of Mr. Burk, an instructor in elocution, had been secured by the teachers and Literary Association of the school, at an expense of $150, of which over $110 had been contributed by those availing themselves of Mr. Burk's lessons; and asked the Board to make up the balance. To a motion of Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. Toole,—that an order be drawn for $40, to meet the balance due Mr. Burk, an objection was taken by Mr. Rutherford, on the ground of irregular procedure. The School Inspector was heard in the matter, and stated the particulars of Mr. Burk's engagement, on his recommendation. The engagement was made in the hope that the Board would make up the balance. Mr. Dixon had asked advice from several members of the Board. He could confidently say the engagement was a wise one. Mr. Toole favoured the payment, as did also Mr. Denne, until Mr. Sawers stated that all the children of the School had not been admitted to the instruction of Prof. Burk, when Mr. Denne began to consider the case from a new stand-point. Mr. Sawers raised a point of order to prevent the voting of the money; and the mover of the resolution introduced it as a notice of motion.

A letter from Mr. James Howden, claiming that his children should not be charged non-resident fees, as he paid taxes in the town, called up the old case of Henry Sheris, upon which a report was prepared and adopted by the Board, embodying the principle that non-residents are chargeable with fees in both the High and public schools.

A communication from the Education Department, asking that the particulars of the Kidd whipping case be sent to the Minister of Education, was left in the hands of the Secretary, with instructions to send a copy of the evidence taken at the Police Court.

A deputation asked the Board for the mineralogical specimens, now lying unused in the school building, that they may be placed in the museum of the Mechanics' Institute. The matter was referred to the Property Committee.

Mr. Robinson stated that Mr. Rose wanted to remove his boy from the South to the West Ward School, as he was not doing well since the whipping affair. The Inspector being heard in the matter stated that he had enquired into the case, and found the boy Rose willing to remain under Mr. Kidd, who was anxious to do all he could for him, and that any impression that had since arisen with regard to differences in the instruction given to this lad and any other, had, on examination, proved wholly groundless. The boy Rose appeared to be somewhat influenced by a school-fellow, named Vinette, who also wanted to be transferred, but who would not feel the need of removing, were he a good boy. It was a bad thing to remove boys from one school to another, unless on very serious grounds; and he was decidedly of opinion that the lad Rose would do better where he was, than if sent elsewhere. The matter was left in the hands of the Inspector, and the Board adjourned.

PIC-NIC.—It is the intention of the people in S.S. No. 9, Chvan, and 4, North Monaghan, to have a pic-nic on Friday, 17th.

PERSONAL.—Mr. T. Wright was visiting old friends in this neighborhood last week. He is looking well.

ENNISMORE.

WEATHER FOR MAY.—The month closed has been one of the hottest on record. The lowest temperature was on the morning of the 3rd, 54°, and the highest on the evening of the 11th, the glass standing at 75°, making the aggregate for the month 54·19 degrees. These registrations were taken at sunrise and sunset, in the shade; but on the 12th the thermometer stood at 81° in the shade at one o'clock in the afternoon. Rain fell on ten days, making a total depth of 6¼ inches; but owing to local showers during summer it would not correctly give our average rainfall for the country.

SELWYN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

CROPS.—Fall wheat promises a most abundant harvest. Spring crops have been "drowned" on low, flat land, but the prospect at present is most encouraging. Hay meadows are looking exceedingly well.

"THE HUM" has began in real earnest, the lively mosquito causing increased activity both in man and beast.

THE METHODIST CHURCH foundation is being dug out.

SELWYN GRANGE store has gone down, one correspondent says, for "lack of intelligence," but this reason is scornfully rejected. Perhaps it would be nearer the truth to say that the site was badly chosen, it being unhandy to get the goods in, and very inconvenient to find storage for them after they were brought.

HARVEY.

Harvey Court of Revision reduced the assessment on Benedict & Son's' mill property $5,000, and added lot 18, con. 18, to W. H. Clurton's assessment on the resident roll. The Council has remitted taxes to Robert Lytle, $6.53; and to John Carnegie, $10.20, for 1880; and passed orders in favor of Wm. Irwin, salary as Collector for 1880, $60; postage, $5.00; over-payment to Treasurer, $2.00; James Wolf, Assessor's salary and expenses, 1881, $44.60; Isaac Arscott, work on Gerrard's hill, $12.00; John Clarkson and George Oliver, inspecting roads, each $3.00; John Barr, inspecting roads, $1.50; R. B. Rogers, surveying and expenses, $92.75; Charles McIlmoyle, work on Oake's hill, 1880, $10.00, and helping Surveyor Dickson in 1879, $2.00. A. McMartin is appointed Deputy Returning Officer for polling sub-division No. 3 at municipal elections for the current year. Two days are to be allowed by Pathmasters for each day of a man and team on the roads. A grant of $500 is made for roads in Harvey, and John Smith, sr., and James Goodenough are appointed Commissioners, and paid five per cent., to expend the money by contract. The Council next meets at Scott's Mills, on the first Monday in July.

SMITH TOWNSHIP COUNCIL.

Smith Township Council met on the 30th May, all the members being present. The name of James Stewart was erased from Road Division, No. 10, and placed on Road Division No. 88. The statute labour of P. Linster, John Linster and Wm. C. Linster was ordered to be performed on Road Division No. 33. The Council agreed to pay Mr. Stephen Nichols the sum of $100 for the land taken off his farm by the Buckhorn road, through the 15th Con. The Treasurer was instructed to pay to John B. Fowler the sum of $7.97, being expenses incurred in burying Alex. Delay. The Clerk was ordered to notify Irwin & Boyd, Robert Davidson, James Baptie, Henry Carver, Wm. Young and James Freeborn, to remove their fences off the roads; also Jno. McDonald, overseer of highways, to remove fences and open his road division to the river. The sum of $8.36 was ordered to be paid to John Young, in full for support of George Parsons till 1st June, 1881, and in addition to the weekly allowance for support, $1 per month was ordered to be paid Mr Young for the purpose of providing absolutely necessary attendance. The timber on the 15th Con. line, from Little Mud Lake to Buckhorn Lake, was granted to Mr. Lewis Davies, who is allowed three years to remove it, providing he opens up the line as a sleigh road thereon. The Clerk was ordered to have 100 copies of the By-laws, "to fix the height of fences, and restrain certain animals from trespassing and running at large," printed in pamphlet form. The Treasurer was ordered to pay to Mrs. Phalen $3 for medicine and attendance for James McDermitt, and $8 to T. B. Clementi, for running line in 15th Con., between Lots 27 and 28. James H. Mann was appointed overseer of highways instead of W. B. Kelly, resigned. The Council adjourned till the last Monday in August.

COURT OF REVISION.

The Council as a Court of Revision disposed of the appeals presented, as follows:—Francis and Baptiste Ayotte, E. ½ 39, in 13 Con., assessment reduced $100; Henry Stabler, pt E. ½ 22, in 10 Con., assessment reduced $100; Thomas McIlmoyl, B, 15 and 16, in 9 Con., assessment reduced $500. Some changes were also made in property which had changed occupants since assessment.

GEORGE PAPE.—General Grocer, Wine and Spirit Merchant, Market Block, two doors north of the Review office, having taken out a liquor license, has just received a prime new stock of Old Rye and Malt Whiskeys, Brandies, Wines and Ales, including Davis' celebrated Canadian Ale, which he is prepared to supply at the closest possible prices for cash. Also a full assortment of family groceries and provisions. A call solicited.

NORWOOD.

(From our own Correspondent.)

POTATO BUGS.—This pest is again to the fore, and commencing business with unusual activity.

THE COUNCIL had but little business of consequence on Monday. The doings of this body do not cause much anxiety in our well-ordered village.

THE EXAMINER CALENDAR BLOTTER has been received here with much satisfaction, and is looked upon as a piece of enterprise highly creditable to the proprietor of the paper.

BUILDING.—Messrs. H. Drain and J. D. Ackerman are about to commence the construction of a large brick building on Peterborough street. It promises to be a handsome one, and is to be fitted up with the latest improvements and the popular Mansard roof.

CEREALS.—Cereal crops in our neighborhood are in a most thriving condition, and farmers are quite jubilant over the the promising prospect of a remarkable harvest. The rye crop especially, never was in so advanced a state of growth at this time of year, and indications are that a heavy yield will be forthcoming from cereals.

PERSONAL.—The Rev. Mr. Mowat, Prof. of Hebrew and Oriental languages, Kingston, and brother of the Hon. Oliver Mowat, Premier of Ontario, conducted the communion service in the Presbyterian churches in Norwood and Hastings on Sunday last. He preached both morning and evening, and delivered two masterly and elegant sermons, and his large congregations were particularly pleased with him.

FROST.—On Sunday night last a heavy frost visited this section, and left its mark to a considerable extent. Young and tender plants in quite a number of gardens were injured and destroyed. The potato crop in the neighboring townships suffered severely, one farmer in Dummer losing an entire quarter of an acre of potatoes, said to be in a very advanced stage. Fortunately the day following was cool and cloudy, or no doubt the damage done by the frost would have been much greater. The cold weather continues and causes many to sigh for the comfort of the cheering fire.

MAGISTRATE'S COURT.—J. P. Pearse, held a Magistrate's Court, on Saturday last to try a singular, and, fortunately, an uncommon case. Thos. Newall, a young man about twenty years of age, was arraigned for using profane and obscene language on our public thoroughfare, but failed to appear. He was fined $10 and costs, $6.50, or thirty days in gaol. Newall is now evading the constables, and no doubt will give some difficulty in his capture. A few days previous to the trial, his brother, Wm. Newall, was also arraigned before the same Magistrate and fined $10 and costs, for striking a young man named John Hendren, of this village.

IMPROVED.—The drill shed has been undergoing some necessary improvements, having been allowed by the military authorities to fall into a dilapidated condition. All the windows have been re-glased, and substantial shutters provided for their protection from boys addicted to making "cockshots" of them heretofore; and many other repairs have been made that have added to the appearance and comfort of the shed.

M., occumpied the chair, in the absence of Rt. Wor. Sir E. J. Scott, the Supreme Grand Master. On Monday the session was resumed for election of officers &c.,

The Grand Orange Lodge of British America assembled on Tuesday at 2 o'clock p. m. The Grand Master, and Sovereign Most Worshipful brother, Henry Merrick, M. White, D. G. M. O. W., presented Bro. Thos. Keys, Past Grand Secretary of the lodge, with an address and a gold watch and chain, as a slight token of the esteem in which Bro. Keys is held. Bro. Keys replied in suitable terms.

LACROSSE.

At the Convention of the Amateur Lacrosse Association, held in Montreal, on Friday last, changes were made in the rules, to the following effect:

All answers to challenges must be sent by post, registered, addressed to the Secretary of the challenging club.

The principles laid down in the championship rule shall also govern what are known as "Local Championships," unless they are originated under special rules, in which case they will be governed by the latter.

A club cannot be compelled to play more than three championship matches during the season, six weeks to intervene between the matches.

The jurisdiction of the umpires shall last during the match for which they are appointed.

No player shall in any way attempt to influence the decision of the umpire, whose ruling shall be final in all cases, without appeal.

In the event of any dispute between the field-captains as to an injured player's fitness to continue the game, the matter shall at once be decided by the referee.

The penalty for fouling shall be discretionary with the referee. For ordinary fouls which in no way affect the game he shall simply caution the offender for the first offence; if repeated the referee may suspend him for the rest of the game (not match) in which such fouls take place. For deliberate fouls, which occasion injury to opponents or affect the result of the game, for the first offence the referee shall have the power to suspend the player committing it for the rest of the game (not match) in which such fouls take place. For a second offence the referee may remove the offending player and compel his side to finish the match short-handed.

Any club wishing to appeal to the Council must do so within ten days from the time at which the matter of the complaint took place.

THE POEM OF LIFE.

The more heroic strain let others take,
Mine the Pindaric way I will make;
The matter shall be grave, the numbers loose and free.
It shall not keep one settled pace of time.
In the same tune it shall not always chime.
Nor shall each day just to his neighbor rhyme;
A thousand liberties it shall dispense,
And yet shall measure all without offence.
Or to the sweetness of the sound, or greatness of the sense.

Farm Hints.

Keeping hogs in orchards to eat up all early fallen fruit will certainly have a most beneficial effect in the destruction of myriads of insects, causing the fruit to be less knotty and imperfect. A man whose trees, as usual, bore more apples during three-fourths years than he could make use of, chief in the chief year most enough—with a long pole went to work and gave his trees a thorough beating on the south side, when the apples were about as big as hickory or hazel nuts, knocking off all the apples on that side he could see, and breaking the little twigs as well, and the result was that his trees for many years bore full crops annually on alternate sides.

There is a difference in the value of the milk of cows of different ages. The milk of cows from six to ten years old will produce a much larger per centage of cream than the milk of their offspring two years old, and the specific gravity of the milk of old cows is 3 to 10 per cent. less than that of the milk of two-years-old heifers, the animals being fed and treated alike.—American Dairyman.

Lambs for Fall Feeding:—From that part of the report of the Agricultural Commission relating to sheep-farming is selected the evidence of Mr. Hopkins, who buys lambs for fall feeding and who testified as follows:—"I generally take 200 lambs and upwards for fall feeding. I feed them largely on rape, and also on oats and turnips when the weather gets bad. They paid very well last year; the increase in price at which I sold them was about $2 a head. The average weight at which they were sold has been a little over 100 lbs. The last lot I sold on the 12th December averaged 107 lbs. The land on which the rape is raised I summer follow, but do not manure. The manure of these sheep is valuable, and an important consideration in feeding them. I usually sow the rape during the first damp weather after the haying begins, about the first week in July. I sow it with a drill and ridge it, though I think it is fully better to sow it on a flat. I keep sowing it thinner every year. I would not sow more than three quarters of a pound to the acre; the smaller quantity you sow the better. I usually have in view a partial cleaning of the land at the same time. I vary in the number of acres which I sow in rape. I usually sow from ten to twenty acres; sometimes as many as thirty acres. I generally have a very heavy crop of rape. I very commonly use plaster on the land, and I believe, taking one season with another, that 150 lbs. of plaster will double the crop of rape.'

A correspondent of a Hamilton paper, writing from England, says:—"I was in a Liverpool office the other day, when I heard a conversation on horses between two gentlemen connected with Canadian interests. One of them said: 'I have had a man travelling in England and Ireland the last three months, at my expense, endeavoring to pick me up a pair of carriage horses, but in vain. I myself went to Yorkshire last week, and I am going to Manchester to-morrow, but with little hope of success. I don't mind what I pay, if I get what I want. The class of horse I require is half to three-quarters thoroughbred, sixteen hands high, dark brown in color, and with good action and five or six years old.' The other gentleman, who is noted for having some of the finest carriage horses in England, thereupon remarked: 'I wish you may get them. I am prepared to buy 100 pairs of the same stamp as you describe for friends of mine, and will give 500 guineas ($2,625) a pair for them.' Now, many of your readers are under the impression that any color will do, but the fashion here is dark browns or liver-colored chestnuts, and fashion in this respect is as exacting as it is in that of ladies' attire. Good bays with black points, but no white, are also in favor, but sorrels would not be purchased at any price, and I regret to hear that there is a large proportion of that color in Canada.'

Curious Information.

William Gavin, of Prince Arthur's Landing, Ontario, writes: "We have no potato bugs in this locality, owing, I believe, to a wild sort of petunia which grows in uncultivated places. It it believed that this plant is very poisonous to the bugs, they being very fond of it. I think the petunia belongs to the same natural order as the potato."

The plan of raising carrots with onions is considered a great improvement by many who have adopted it, as the yield of carrots is thought to be clear gain, diminishing but little or none the yield of onions. Carrots are planted in two ways; one by sowing them in drills between every other row of onions, and the other, which is considered an improvement, on the Long Island plan, by planting the onions in hills, from seven to eight inches from centre to centre, dropping a number of seeds in each hill, and from the 1st to the 12th of June planting the carrot seed between these hills in two rows, then skipping one, and thus on through the piece. The onions, as they are pulled, are thrown into every third row, the carrots being left to mature.

Household.

To produce a walnut stain on wood, take one quart of water, one and one-half ounces of washing soda, two and one-half ounces Vandyke brown, one-fourth ounce bichromate of potash; boil for ten minutes and apply with a brush in either a hot or cold state.

As the wife is the home-keeper, it is natural that her influence in making or destroying domestic happiness is greater than her husband's. By her management of small sums her husband's respectability and credit are erected or destroyed. No fortune can stand the constant leaking of extravagance and mismanagement; and more is spent in trifles than women would easily believe. So look well after the pennies. Then there are other matters equally important. An unwashed cruet-stand, a missing key, a buttonless shirt, a soiled table-cloth, a mustard pot with its old contents sticking about it, are really nothing; but can raise an angry word or cause discomfort. Depend upon it, there is a great deal of domestic happiness in a well-dressed mutton-chop or a tidy breakfast-table. Men grow full of beauty, tired of music, and are often too wearied for conversation, however intellectual; but they can always appreciate a well-swept hearth and smiling comfort. Domestic tasks may frequently become irksome; but, rather than run the risk of losing your husband's love, submit to them cheerfully.

To Clean Lace.—Upon the leaf of a large book sprinkle magnesia, place a strip of lace upon it; add more magnesia, repeating until all the lace is packed; place a weight upon the book and let it remain twenty-four hours, then gently rub the magnesia out. If the lace is badly soiled, it may require a second packing.

John E. Roberts writes to the Southern Poultry Journal that he keeps fowl free from vermin with menhaden oil. To one ounce of oil of menhaden put five or six of sweet oil, and apply a small quantity to different parts of the body of the fowl, selecting those points where the vermin would be most apt to hide.

A cure for hacking cough, sore throat or mouth, is to take a teaspoonful of salt in a half-cup of water, and gargle three times a day before each meal.

The English papers report that some of the large agriculturists of that country have been trying the experiment of substituting cold tea for beer as a drink in the harvest field, and claim that it is a good substitute. It seems to be overlooked that tea is a stimulant as well as beer. It is, in fact, true that a pint of tea, as usually made, contains a larger percentage of stimulating elements than an equal quantity of beer.

To Sponge a Black Silk Dress.—Sponge the black silk lightly, on both sides, with a perfectly clean sponge dipped in spirits of wine; then, with a moderately warm iron, smooth the silk on the one side; not the side that will form the outside when re-made. If the selvedges are too tight to allow the silk to become smooth, they will require snipping at intervals.

To Clean Black Lace.—Scald some bran with boiling water, and dip the lace up and down in the bran and water when warm; and when clean squeeze the water out and shake the bran off. Lay it out, and pull out the edges, etc. Iron it between linen on a blanket, so that the iron does not glaze it. Or if lace is dipped in cold milk, and frosted in the same way, it will be found to clean it as well.

Rough Towels.—A traveller writes as follows to the Christian Union:—May I suggest to the housekeepers that there ought always to be a rough towel in the spare-room? There are so many of us who are accustomed to take a morning bath and want a good rub-down after it is over—and the number is happily increasing—that to leave a guest with nothing but a towel as smooth as a pocket-handkerchief is to deprive him of a luxury which is almost a necessity.

Preserving Eggs.—A writer in Cassell's Magazine calls attention to the following process for preserving eggs:—It has been proved a perfect success by many and careful experiments. On removing the eggs from the nest they are coated with butter in which two or three per cent. of salicylic acid has been dissolved, and then they are placed individually in a box filled with fine and absolutely dry sawdust. Care must be taken that the eggs do not touch each other, and that they are completely enveloped in sawdust; and should these precautions be strictly observed, they will keep fresh for several months, possibly for more than a year.

The Poultry Yard.

One of the most profitable, yet the most neglected, stock on the average farm of Ontario is poultry; and such neglect renders it the least remunerative. Success depends on the care bestowed. It must be borne in mind that fowls, like every other kind of live stock, will not pay with neglect, inattention, or parsimonious treatment. To make poultry pay requires also good judgment. Poultry will pay; and that at the rate of 400 per cent. A hen worth 25 cents, if properly fed and attended to, will pay for her food in eggs for the year, and produce $1 worth besides for her owner's profit. In many instances this has been exceeded by returning $2 profit. The care and attention are very easy and light, requiring but a small amount of manul labor, so it is often carried on by women and children. The necessary requirements for success are a good dry and warm poultry-house, good, solid and substantial food, clean, pure and fresh water, every day, with a change of diet, as regular as man would be inclined to ask for himself. In the winter when they cannot get grass to feed on, fowels must be supplied with either apples, potatoes, turnips, cabbage, onions, or any vegetable, as green food; also have within reach old mortar, sand, or fine gravel, to grind their food with.

Chaff.

A married lady who was in the habit of spending most of her time in the society of her neighbors, happened one day to be taken ill, and sent her husband in great haste for a physician. The husband ran a short distance and then returned, exclaiming. "My dear, where shall I find you when I come back?"

While A. U. S. Supreme Judge was recently staying at Paris, he went to visit a French professor. The Frenchman asked him a number of questions, and among the rest—"Where do you live?" "In California." "Well, asked the rude Gaul, "what is your occupation?" "I am a Judge of the Supreme Court." "Oh, ah!" returned the Frenchman, "then I need not ask your name—it is Lynch, eh?"

A little Swedish girl was walking with her father on a starry night, absorbed in contemplation of the skies. On being questioned as to the occupation of her thoughts, she replied, "I was thinking if the wrong side of heaven is so glorious, what must the other side be?"

The debt of Nature is paid by the most impecunious, but yet it is not a preferred debt.

At Quebec, recently, a woman hanged herself with a strip of false hair, and thus died the victim of a misplaced switch.

"Why is it," asked a lady, "that people lose their interest in church-going now-a-days?" "Because they have lost their principle," was the reply.

Every sphere of work, no matter how lowly, has a ministry of its own, and every honest laborer, if not a reverend, is to be revered. There is a ministry of the press, for instance, just as sacred as that of the pulpit. Science, too, has its ministry. Art, literature, philanthrophy, have also their holy offices, ministering and administering to mankind.

A medical man says: "The ideas cannot flow freely when the waist is squeezed." Perhaps not; but on Sunday evening they don't care a cent whether the ideas flow freely or not. They only have one idea in common at such times, anyhow.

"Now, Sammy, have you read the story of Joseph?" "O, yes, uncle." "Well, then, what wrong did they do when they sold their brother?" "They sold him too cheap."

"You don't know how it pains me to punish you," said the teacher. "I guess there's the most pain at my end of the stick," replied the boy feelingly. "I any rate, I'd be willing to swap."

Mr. Trout, Granton school teacher, was married a short time ago. It is proposed to have his wife fined for taking trout out of season.

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 6-1y.

People tormented by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are this nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for biliousness and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all druggists

Not the slightest affinity exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It combines the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results. Invariably relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tattering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

From the Hub.—There is perhaps no tonic offered to the people that possesses as much real intrinsic value as the Hop Bitters. Just at this season of the year, when the stomach needs an appetizer, or the blood needs purifying, the cheapest and best remedy is Hop Bitters. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, so don't wait until you are prostrated by a disease that may take months for you to recover in.—Boston Globe. 22-2t.

At the Chancery sittings in Belleville last week, was heard the case of Mrs. D. Roblin, against her husband who had not lived with her. Seventeen years ago the parties were married by a justice of the peace in the United States, and the defendant alleged that the woman and her friends had made him drunk, and had the ceremony performed when he was in that condition. Vice-chancellor Proudfoot held the marriage to be valid, and gave a decree in the wife's favor.

Woman's Wisdom.—"She insists that it is of more importance that her family shall be kept in full health, than that she should have all the fashionable dresses and styles of the times. She therefore sees to it, that each member of her family is supplied with enough Hop Bitters, at the first appearance of any symptoms of ill health, to prevent a fit of sickness with its attendant expense, care and anxiety. All women should exercise their wisdom in this way."—New Haven Palladium. 22-2t

Brennan, of Norwood, and contest the following events for $20 a side—on four week's notice:—1st, standing jump; 2nd, running jump; 3rd, running hop, step and jump. Weights to be allowed. A Norwood man who is willing to make a match for a 100-yards foot-race with any of the flyers in Hastings, with a preference for the gentleman who was so anxious to stake $100, has his $10 forfeit already deposited. James Anderson and Malcom seem to be dissatisfied with the result of the double-scull race on the 24th. James is anxious to bet $10 that he and Malcom can defeat the winners, P. Howard and A. Nelson.

Orillia Mechanics' Institute closed its year with a cash balance of $205.10. The library contains 546 volumes, and the issues of books for the year numbered 1175. There is also a reading-room; classes have been conducted in Mechanical Drawing and Chemistry; and a Literary and Debating Club has been formed in connection with the Institute. In regard to the circular from the Education Department, it was resolved, "that in the opinion of this Institute, the sums proposed to be expended on a reading-room and classes respectively are larger than can be judiciously expended in towns of this size for these objects, and form a larger proportion of the total grant than is calculated to promote the best interests of a Mechanics' Institute such as we have established; and further, that we are of the opinion that the sum of $50 Government money, and $25 of local funds would be a sufficient amount (exclusive of all expenses for rent, fuel, etc.,) to devote to evening classes and reading-room respectively, leaving a balance of $200 Government money, and $150 local funds, to be expended on the Library and necessary expenses."

Horatio Hill, aged 22, engaged as a labourer with John Buckley, a Clarke farmer, and engaged in love-making with his master's daughter, aged 16. Buckley objected, and warned Hill to leave; but Horatio wouldn't without his year's wages, and so was kept on till Christmas. Then he got work on an adjoining farm. On Bessie a close watch was kept till a few days ago, when both parents went to Uxbridge. Bessie then joined her Horatio; and, repairing to Rev. D. C. McDowell, they were married. So eager was Horatio to procure the license that he hastily made oath and subscribed to the affidavit presented him, which stated that the lady in the case was 18, and that she was marrying with her father's consent. Now, old Buckley has proceeded against his enterprising son-in-law for perjury, being more considerate for his own vengeful feelings than for the happiness of his daughter. Horatio has been committed for trial, but admitted to bail.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

First:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

Second:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

Third:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

A Great Cause of Human Misery

In the Loss of

MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

SPRING CLEANING is finished at the Town Hall and offices, which look much better for the scrubbing, white-washing and repairs to plaster. They were decidedly dingy before.

Ming, Principal of the Paisley Public School, who has been ailing for some time, was taken with a spell of bleeding from the lungs, while walking along the street, and stepped into a store, where he died in a few minutes from suffocation.

POLICE COURT business this week, though active, has resulted in but few convictions. The assault cases fell through, because none of the complainants appeared, and when Constable McGhee went to look one of them up, it was found he had left town. Beauvais, for striking another boy, named Gilbault, with a stone, was required to pay $2 (fine and costs) or go to gaol for ten days.

It was a new thing to see this joint use of the Grand Junction and Midland tracks.

A MUSICAL TREAT.—The music-loving population of Peterborough will be pleased to learn that there is now in contemplation the presentation at Bradburn's Hall, shortly, of the dramatic cantata in the scenes of Belshazzar's Feast, or the Fall of Babylon, and that those who are to appear in it have their parts now in preparation. THE LIBERAL CANDIDATE.

The Reform Convention met at Millbrook on June, 2nd. There were about 100 delegates present. H. Burnham, of Port Hope, was elected President of the Central Reform Association, and George Wilson, of the Port Hope Guide, was elected Secretary. R. Bedford, of Port Hope, and Capt. STOP THAT COUGH, or it will terminate in that dreadful disease, consumption. We are aware that a prejudice exists among many persons against medicines which profess to cure a cough or cold when bordering on consumption, or even when the lungs are affected, but we can assure our readers that Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry will do this; and in making this assertion we speak from experience, having suffered for months from a cough, which after using many remedies without any relief threatened to terminate seriously. We were, however, so fortunate as to secure several bottles of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, and are now entirely rid of the cough, and restored to our former health. To those suffering in a like manner we recommend this excellent preparation. John G. In fact, we should not be surprised to learn that such an arrangement forms one of the provisions of the lease under which the Grand Junction is now being operated by the Midland.

Many of the remainder are quite young. Sir Hugh, absent in Europe, was at once telegraphed the sad news.

Immediately on the conclusion of the evidence in the inquest into the cause of the Victoria disaster, the manager of the boat, George Parish, and the captain of the ill-fated vessel, were arrested by county constables Schram and Pope on a charge of manslaughter. The information was laid by Robert A. Jones, of London West, storekeeper. He charged the defendants with the manslaughter of Eliza Jones, daughter of the informant. When arrested both defendants took the matter lightly, and were allowed to go in charge of the constables to procure bail, which was accepted by John Peters, J. P., Parish himself in $2,000 and one surety in $1,000; Rankin found security himself in $2,000 and two sureties in $1,000 each.

Among recent alterations in the Municipal Act is the following:—"That municipalities and officers thereof are to be protected from actions arising from mistakes in opening original road allowances, or allowance for road, when acting in good faith, and using reasonable means to ascertain the true line; in actions brought against counties, towns, townships and villages, for negligence, the municipality to tender or pay into court such amount as it may consider the damage sustained, and in the event of the non-acceptance thereof by the claimant of such tender or amount so paid in, and the action being proceeded with, and a verdict obtained for a less amount than that tendered or so paid, the cost of suit shall be awarded to the defendant, and set off against any verdict which should have been obtained against it."

BRITISH AND FOREIGN.

One hundred amendments to the Land Bill have been withdrawn.

Apprehensions are felt in France for the success of this season's crops.

The report of the State Bureau of Agriculture says that a large percentage of the wheat area of Illinois has been ploughed up, and the crop will be deficient.

The French policy of securing a leading influence in Northern Africa is being steadily and energetically pursued. France has purchased a port in Abyssinia.

The anniversary of the one hundredth birthday of George Stephenson, the originator of the railway locomotive, was celebrated with enthusiasm in Britain and on the continent of Europe.

Roustan, the French Ambassador to Tunis, has been entrusted by the Bey with the direction of the relations of the Bey's Government with foreign Governments. The announcement of this arrangement was received with evident distaste by the Italian Consul.

The effect of the rejection of the Scrutin de Liste Bill by the French Senate will be that the coming general elections will have to take place under the present somewhat defective election law. The action of the Senate will probably precipitate a struggle between Gambetta and Grevey.

J. H. Earl, West Shefford, P. Q., writes:—"I have been troubled with Liver Complaint for several years, and have tried different medicines with little or no benefit, until I tried Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which gave me immediate relief, and I would say I have used it since with the best effect. No one should be without it. I have tried it on my horse in cases of Cuts, Wounds, etc., and I think it equally as good for horse as for man."

GREAT FIRE AT QUEBEC.

One of the most disasterous fires with which Quebec City has been afflicted commenced last Thursday night, between ten and eleven o'clock, in a stable on St. Olivier street, near St. Mary's street. The flames at once spread to the surrounding buildings and two streets above and below St. Olivier, Latourelle, St. Marie and Richelieu streets, were quickly a mass of fire for some hundred feet of each in extent; the flames from other side-streets, overlapping in the middle and closing them to all traffic. The scenes common to all great fires were readily discernable at this stage. Half the people seemed panic-stricken, and three-fourths of the others were only adding to the general confusion, by running against others, and assisting in the destruction of property, in the solemn belief that they were rendering relief in saving it. Parents partially clothed hurried along in every direction with infants in their arms; some appeared in bedcloths, and leading others by the hand. Cows and horses let loose from burning stables rushed half maddened through the crowd, or stood dazed with the scene by which they were surrounded. Crockery, bedding, trunks, clothing, stoves, sofas, pictures, and every conceivable article of furniture was thrown or dragged about, often into places of greater danger than where they were taken from. Even the police and firemen was to a great extent demoralized. Daring robbery was carried on freely in the full sight of everybody. Liquor stores and private dwellings attacked by the flames were ransacked for liquors, which were openly drunk by the specimens of the lowest degree of society who are common to the locality in question, and who frequent the low hovels whose destruction is one of the least regretted features of the disaster. Seven lives are reported as being lost. The sparks which flew from the burning wooden buildings were themselves a terrible source of danger to the rest of the city. It was no uncommon sight to see men's coats and hats ablaze from the burning pieces of shingles which lighted upon them. The wind blew from the north and drove the fire rapidly in the direction of St. John's Church; which for a long time withstood the flames, but ultimately its tall steeple tottered and fell with a crash, and the building soon became a prey to the fiery element. The church was valued at $1,000,000 and was insured for $10,000. Over 1,500 families are rendered homeless. The distress is great in consequence of the greater part of the sufferers being working people. The subscription list in aid of the sufferers has been opened by the Governor General giving $500, the Mayor $100, and the Archbishop $10, and aid has been pouring in from all directions. The total loss by the fire is estimated at one and a half million dollars. The insurance will probably cover about $950,000 of that sum. The number of houses destroyed is about 675.

THE "VICTORIA" INVESTIGATION.

THE VERDICT OF THE CORNER'S JURY.

The verdict in the Victoria investigation is:—"We do find that the capsising of the Victoria was caused by water in the hold. We believe that the water leaked in through a hole stove in the bottom from some unknown cause. We suppose that this injury was caused by coming in contact with a stone or snag in the river. We are also convinced from the evidence adduced that the boiler was not securely fastened, and that the stanchions supporting the promenade and hurricane decks were of too slender a nature, and made chiefly of pine and not properly braced. We are also of the opinion that the engineer was guilty of great negligence in the discharge of his duty in not seeing that the hold was clear of water and in not conveying in person to the captain the dangerous condition of the boat. We think that the captain was to blame in accepting the dual position of captain and wheelsman, which prevented him from giving his undivided attention to the proper management of the boat. We are also of the opinion that he was to blame for leaving Springbank without making a proper examination of his boat, as there was undoubtedly water in the hold at that time. We are further of the opinion that the manager did not do his duty in not employing sufficient hands to man his boat. He should have had the boat inspected, and a certificate for the same. The jury think that the Government Inspector deserves blame for the manner in which he inspected and passed the boat Victoria last year, as from the evidence her upper construction was not fit to carry a large load of passengers, and we would strongly urge upon the Government the necessity of making more stringent inspection and regulations in regard to passenger steamboats.

A London special to the Globe says:—The Directors of the Grand Trunk Railway have issued a prospectus for the issue of two million five hundred thousand pounds sterling, being the balance of the ordinary stock at 25 per cent. in provisional certificates exchangable when fully paid up for certificates of ordinary stock ranking pari passu with the whole issue. In the memorandum accompanying the prospectus the Directors emphasize the point that the money is asked for to enable them to proceed immediately to increase the carrying capacity of the road and consequently its earning power. The objects of the issue are (1) the laying of double tracks on important sections of the railway, constructing additional sidings, and lengthening other sidings to facilitate the passing of crossing trains; (2) providing additional engines, freight-cars, passenger carriages, and other vehicles to meet the increasing traffic exchanged with the Chicago and Grand Trunk and other allied railways; (3) providing additional terminal facilities, grain elevators, and other appliances necessary for the generally increasing business of the railway with affiliated lines.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.—For the speedy cure for Consumption and all diseases that lead to it, such as stubborn Coughs, neglected Colds, Bronchitis, Hay Fever, Asthma, pain in the side, and chest, dry hacking cough, tickling in the throat, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, and all chronic or lingering diseases of the throat and lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery has no equal and has established for itself a world-wide reputation. Many leading physicians recommend and use it in their practice. The formula from which it is prepared is highly recommended by all medical journals. The clergy and the press have complimented it in the most glowing terms. Go to your druggist and get a trial bottle for 10 cents, or a regular size for $1. For sale by all druggists.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 16, 1881.

Water-Works.

The meeting on Friday evening last, of which a report will be found elsewhere, was evidently unanimous in acknowledging the great benefit water-works would be to Peterborough. But so far the case does not differ from that of the penniless visionary who lies in the shade of the wayside trees, builds mental castles, and sighs, "If only I were rich!" It pleases the poor tramp, and helps him for a time to forget his misery. So with the reiterated cry, "If we only had water-works in Peterborough!" The popular imagination is tickled for a little with a vision, which, however, soon fades before the palpable demands of stern facts; as do the beggar's chateaux en Espagne when his matter-of-fact stomach calls him back to his real condition.

"If we had water-works," carries with it the corollary, "But we have not water-works." We can have water-works only on certain conditions. "We will have water-works," pre-supposes an overcoming or yielding of these conditions. The desirability of procuring a good system of water-supply for Peterborough needs no argument; its feasibility is easily demonstrated; but its accomplishment rests on the energetic application of mind, muscle, and money to a definite purpose. The term "water-works" is too vague on which to base practical suggestions. They may be great or small; good, bad or indifferent; limited or comprehensive in purpose. For that matter, the town now has a system of supply for watering the streets; and the works may be seen in all their glory near the river bank at the foot of King-street. But they are only for the supply of the business streets; or rather, the supply of a waggon to sprinkle the business streets. Something more than this is demanded. How much more? That is the question which must be settled before any advance can be made. Even the present system, insignificant as it may appear in comparison with the non-crystallized ideas of many of our citizens, is a standing reproach to them, and a practical illustration of what must be done on a larger scale. Even the water-cart could not be supplied as it now is without a clear idea of the purpose and necessary capacity of the present Peterborough water-works. The man who put in that pump at the foot of King-street understood beforehand just what was wanted, and thus knew what he was doing; wherein he had a decided advantage over those who advocate a more extended system.

The present system, for street-watering, has also an important bearing on the subject of extension in another way; as it is a proof of the acceptance by the town of the principle that the business portion of the town shall pay for the supply of water to that part alone. The substitution of pipes for the team and waggon is a mere question of improvement with those who now benefit by the present system; and those who do not get any direct accommodation from a partial system have a perfect right to insist on the continuation of the principle laid down in regard to street-watering—the only point bearing on a water-supply to which the popular verdict has yet been applied.

What Peterborough needs is a comprehensive system of water supply, both for fire protection and domestic use; for in laying pipe provision for both purposes will cost no more than the supply for one, and the source of revenue from households using the water must be regarded as an important item in meeting the cost. Pure water, then, is a necessity. Where can this be found? Not in the lower reaches of the Otonabee, surely, with its accumulations of saw-dust, poisonous refuse from the Auburn woollen-mills, and other dead matter, both vegetable and animal. The source of supply must be above the range of manufactories; or dammed on a basin for thorough filteration. The tapping of Mud Lake has been suggested; but the expense of excavation through the height of land is an objection. The proposition for the utilizing of the waters of the creek that constantly flows through the town is worthy of examination, in order to ascertain if the supply really be inadequate, as represented by those who demand a supply of water for fire protection only. That the creek never runs dry is pretty fair evidence that it contains good spring water, fit for all purposes; and those who have examined it, not only declare that a fall of one hundred and thirty feet to George-street may be procured, but that the volume of water is more than adequate to the demands of the population for domestic purposes, and for the extinguishing of fires as well.

The committee has taken the only sensible plan open to them, of procuring definite information upon some definite plan; but to this end it will be necessary to secure the opinion of thoroughly reliable experts upon the capabilities, cost and relative advantages of the different schemes proposed. As it is, people are groping in the dark, and vainly endeavoring to materialize a vision.

The suggestion that a company be formed is a good one; for there can be no doubt a company will be freed from many of the trammels which beset a popular committee. But even a company cannot be allowed to do just as it likes; and must be made amenable to conditions defensive of the public interests in streets, and of the all-important question of sewerage. The sanitary aspect of the water-works question, above all others, demands the most careful consideration.

MR. BLAKE'S RECORD.

(Irish Canadian.)

Political grist is scarce in the mill of the chief Tory organ, and the sound of the grinding is low. At least such is the logical inference to be drawn from the manner in which the Mail mauls about the dry bones of the dead past in search of a Sampsonian weapon wherewith to smite the talented leader of the Opposition. It has taken the trouble of reviewing in a perfunctory, though vindictive, manner, Mr. Edward Blake's career since his advent to public life. We are too honest a friend of that gentleman to pretend that his record presents no vulnerable points. Only parasites and flatterers are capable of assuring a great man that he has no faults. He cannot be a man without possessing a man's weaknesses; and certainly he could never have achieved greatness had he never taken those risks through which mistakes and their consequences come.

When the organ dilates upon the sin of inconsistency it puts its own leader in the pillory. The man who never changes his opinions never has any opinions to change. Change is the characteristic of mental as well as physical growth. But Mr. Blake has not altered his fundamental opinions. He may have made mistakes, or have modified his judgment as to the sufficiency of means to ends; but he has never been found associated with those who would make freedom of speech a crime, or call into action the machinery of sectarianism for the suppression of independence of thought.

It is just possible that the writer in our big contemporary is only flogging Mr. Anglin over Mr. Blake's shoulders, as we have the old story of Mr. Anglin's contract with the Government rehashed, the rehash being spiced with one nasty insinuation and two vulgar witticisms. From the enmity with which Mr. Anglin is pursued one might fancy that he is the only man who ever did any printing for the Government at a profit. There is at least one member of the present House of Commons, who has thousands of excellent reasons for knowing that such is not the case; and there are several others in only a less delightful degree of enlightenment. The Mail is not likely to attain its darling object of crippling Mr. Blake by the publication of distorted versions of musty political history.

THE LATE JOHN THOMPSON.

(From the Orillia Times.)

Mr. Thompson was born in Haddingtonshire, Scotland, in 1831. In 1854 he came to Canada, and settled at Peterboro', going into the mercantile business. He soon afterwards engaged in the square timber trade, and in 1867, with Mr. Melville Miller as partner, he came to Longford and established the lumber business now so well and honorably known in every lumber market on the continent. With other lumbermen he went through the deep waters of the depression, and manfully and successfully struggled against the difficulties in that period. Having carefully and laboriously built up one of the finest and most profitable properties of the kind in the Province, he had already contemplated retiring from business, and it is now an open secret that at the time of his death he was in negotiation with a company for the purchase of Longford at a price that would have enabled him to live the remainder of his days in affluence and free from every care. Mr. Thompson was a pronounced Liberal in politics, and at the recent convention in North Ontario was offered the unanimous nomination of the party as their candidate for the Local Legislature. We are in a position to state that had he accepted there would have been no opposition to his election.

Mr. Thomson leaves a wife and seven children to grieve over the loss that is yet imperfectly realized. It is impossible to conceive of a more united and affectionate family. Last January Mr. and Miss Thomson visited Scotland and England, the latter remaining over with an uncle in Manchester, with whom it was intended to spend the summer. That was the first and only break in the family tie, and so strong did Mr. Thomson feel it, that it was with difficulty he was persuaded against returning to Manchester before sailing, and bringing his daughter home with him. She is now on her way to Canada, alone, sad and grief-stricken.

It will afford a great deal of satisfaction to many friends at a distance to be assured that Mr. Thomson's business affairs were left in good shape, and that his death will not interfere with nor complicate the management of the immense concern he had built up and conducted so successfully.

The funeral was the largest ever seen in this part of the country. Every place of business on Mississaga street was closed at twelve o'clock, and many of them heavily draped in mourning, including the leading hotels. Shortly after one o'clock the Lady put out from the warf here with between two and three hundred on board. Mr. Sauson also ran the Carlisle. Arriving at Longford it was found that a large number had already assembled. The employees, to the number of about one hundred and fifty, had provided themselves with badges of mourning, and were named together to take their place in the procession. Many of those who arrived by boat took advantage of the opportunity to view the remains. The line of procession was formed, and the large assembly of mourners and friends slowly wended their way to the warf. Between five and six hundred returned on the boat. At the Orillia wharf an immense concourse had congregated, the larger proportion on foot, but many in carriages. The members of the corporation attended in a body. Here the procession was again formed, probably the most striking and suggestive feature of it being the horse and phæton used by Mr. Thompson in driving to and from the mills, led by the faithful Hughey. The pall-bearers were Messrs. R. D. Ewing, J. B. Smith and Capt. Wm. Pell, of Toronto; Robert Thompson, of Hamilton; Wm. Hamilton, of Peterborough; Jas. Macpherson, of Rama; and Dr. Corbett and Melville Millar, of Orillia. The lumbering interest was largely represented. The Rama Indians turned out in large numbers.

OVER THE RAILS TO MIDLAND.

On Thursday, 9th inst., the Midland Railway authorities ran a special train over their road from Port Hope and Peterborough to Midland, to give an opportunity to a numerous class of influential residents along its line, as well as a number of Toronto capitalists, to inspect the harbor and other fine terminal advantages of the Midland at the picturesque inlet on the shore of the Georgian Bay. It was chiefly to accommodate a long-cherished wish on the part of the Toronto gentlemen, that the excursion was undertaken, their ultimate object being to secure to that city, a share of the trade which the excellence of Midland harbor brings to that locality.

The special train bearing the invited guests, left Port Hope about six o'clock on the morning in question, the contingent from the "city of bricks" consisting of Messrs. Lewis Ross, Director; T. M. Benson, Q.C.; Col. Williams, M.P.; C. Stewart, H. H. Burnham, W. B. Ferguson, Superintendent; W. Garnett, E. A. Powers, Coun. Barrett, W. T. R. Preston, of the News, and George Wilson, of the Guide.

At Millbrook a party from Peterborough and Hastings County boarded the train, consisting of President Cox, and Messrs. A. White, Thomas Bradburn, J. F. Dennistoun, G. M. Roger, A. Morrow, John Bertram, H. H. Smith, Mayor; Jno. Carnegie, of the Review, J. R. Stratton, of the Examiner; Dr. Kincaid, Dr. Coulter, M.P.P. for North Hastings; and Mr. W. Wills, Treasurer of Hastings County.

At Lindsay the party was reinforced by Messrs. Jas. McKibbin, Clerk of the Division Court; C. F. Taylor, Mayor; J. R. Dundass, Director Midland Railway; Judge Dean, L. Maguire, Henry Walters, Capt. Ross, C. F. Barr, of the Post; E. Flood, of the Warder; C. Porteous, of the Bank of Montreal; S. McMurtry, and Col. Deacon.

At Woodville Junction the Toronto delegation boarded the train. That it consisted of "solid men" is obvious from a perusal of the subjoined names, and in regard to the wealth represented by not only them, but other members of the party, it was conceded that on no previous occasion had so vast a capital been represented by the passengers on any train in Canada. The Toronto delegation consisted of Messrs. J. G. Worts, William Gooderham, Jr., Henry Cawthra; James Cawthra, Edward C. Wragge, General Manager Toronto and Nipissing Railway; G. W. Rarker, Manager Bank of Montreal; D. R. Wilkie, Cashier Imperial Bank; J. B. Smith, Walter S. Lee; Jno. Leys, John H. Mason, W. B. Hamilton, President Board of Trade; W. D. Mathews, Jr., Wm. Hamilton Merritt, H. Gooderham, D. Robertson, Civil Engineer; J. Duncan, Superintendent Toronto and Nipissing Railway; Jas. Robinson, Director Toronto & Nipissing Railway; Rev. Mr. Bygrave; Alderman Mitchell, Aldermen and Harbor Commissioners Walker and Davies.

Arrived at Midland about one o'clock, the party dined at the Gladstone House, after which a tour of inspection was begun, which comprehended the extensive and costly docks, yards, and especially the well-advanced work on the Company's new elevator, which, when completed, will have a storing capacity of a quarter million bushels.

A steam yacht was placed at the disposal of the party, by the Georgian Bay Co., and a sail over the "magnificent waterstretch" formed by the harbor followed. The result was the creation of a most favorable impression among those who had not formerly visited the place, as to the value and extent of the advantages accruing to the Midland from its unrivalled harbor facilities. As one of the results, also, it is stated the Toronto & Nipissing road will at once adopt the standard gauge and be prepared to connect through to Lake Huron in time for the Autumn grain trade. The Midland Company will also construct the link from Peterborough to Omemee as soon as possible.

The excursion started southward about five o'clock, arriving here about ten, after disposing of the different delegations along the line.

WATER-WORKS.

Details to be Obtained and an Estimate Furnished.

At a meeting of the Councillors and other citizens forming the Water-Works Committee, in the Council Chamber, on Friday night last, there were present a goodly number of those most deeply interested in the construction of water-works for purposes of fire protection.

The Mayor being called to the chair, referred to the efforts to establish water-works. A scheme had been voted down, probably on account of the cost. The promoters had again gone to some trouble, and he hoped it would not be voted down, as before.

Councillor Rutherford stated that his reason for bringing the matter before the Council was that the steam fire-engine was very defective, and might give out at any moment. The cost of new tubes would be a serious item. The cost of water-works as now proposed would not be so great as under the former scheme.

The Mayor explained that the town would get more money from the Midland Railway mortgage than would pay the interest on the debt, and called on Mr. Carnegie for a statement of the finances.

Mr. Carnegie referred to the Act passed some years ago placing the Railway debt and Municipal Loan Fund account in the hands of commissioners. At present the debentures held on the M. L. Fund sinking fund amounted to $17,000. Last January the cash balance held on that account was $1,224. The principal money due from the railway was $66,800. This made a total of about $86,000; while the outstanding M. L. Fund debentures amounted to $72,000, making a surplus of about $13,000. As the Sinking Fund debentures and those of the railway bear 6 per cent. interest, and the M L. Fund debentures only 5 per cent., the surplus will be increased from year to year, by the addition of $14,000 interest. But as these funds are adapted to a special purpose by legislation, further legislation would be necessary to allow of any part of them being diverted. He did not suppose there would be any trouble in getting that power.

Mr. James Stevenson said he happened to be at the Council meeting when Mr. Rutherford brought the matter up, and it struck him that the Councillors did not feel the responsibility resting upon them as they should. All around were evidences of the need of protection from fire. If anything gave way in connection with the fire-engine there was no remedy. He had seen the engine go wrong at a fire. Every man in town who had anything at stake should try to meet this hazard. The spread of the late fire at Quebec was said be owing to the demoralization of the brigade; but he was told that the water-work there are so insufficient that while supplying water to one part of the city they cannot play on a fire in another part. The only system he knew of, for really effective use was that established at Port Hope. Montreal is the only place where really effective pressure is got from a reservoir, with a head of 300 feet. In Port Hope there is no fear of fire; neither in Lindsay. In the latter place the recent fire was extinguished when the buildings were half burnt. The reason that the full presure was not promptly got on was that the care-taker was half deaf. He recommended those interested to go down to Port Hope and see the system there at work. Port Hope pays $250 per year for power, while here the town is offered the power for nothing. Fire protection costs Port Hope $700 a year; Peterborough, $2,000. Two or three years ago Mr. Carnegie got up a map of a system with 10-inch mains along George, McDonel Water, Charlotte, Hunter and Murray streets, and 8-inch branches extending, the estimated cost of which was $18,000. Or the supply of George-street alone with twenty hydrants was placed at $12,000. The cost of the buildings, pumps, etc., would be the same in either case, so that the average of cost would be smaller in the more extended system. He had got two estimates at that time; but the rise in iron had interfered with the scheme. Then pipe was estimated at $56 per ton at Philadelphia; now it could be laid down at Port Hope at $36 per ton. Then 7 per cent. debentures sold at par; now the town could sell five per cent. debentures at par. One thousand dollars would pay the interest on the first cost. All that would be necessary at first would be to furnish a system for the central part of the town; then as extension was needed the pipes would be there to be used. Power could not be got without pumps; but with them a pressure of 400 lbs. per square inch could be obtained. The pressure in Lindsay, less than that in Port Hope, would easily break a window. The establishment of such works would be a saving to the town; for if Port Hope secured protection for $700, paying $250 for power, surely Peterborough could get along with the same expenditure, getting power for nothing. In Port Hope the people were perfectly satisfied with their system. Mr. Hazlitt offered a free lease of power for 21 years; but the speaker did not think he would confine the time.

Mr. G. A. Cox thought it desirable to adopt water-works for fire purposes for the business part of the town at least, and so that they can be extended; but did not think it would be well to at first include more than the business portion, on account of the cost. He had a very favorable impression of the Port Hope works, and would like to have gentlemen go down some evening and see them in operation. He would provide a passage there and back, by train. He did not quite follow the proposed way of getting the money. The Midland Railway claim he hoped to get town day. The town could keep the stock. He thought that, with a bonus, a company would have no difficulty in getting private stock to build water-works, which could afterwards be extended as found necessary. Then the town would know just what it had to provide for. The town might give a yearly grant of at least as much as it now pays for the fire company, engine, watering streets, etc.

Mr. Clarken said a former scheme had been defeated by those who preferred the purchase of a steam engine. But, now that was found insufficient, and he thought the feeling was more general in favour of water-works. The Holly system was the proper one. It would be a good plan to go down and see the Port Hope works. We should, when getting works, see that they are good. He was not in favor of too cheap a system. Works could be built by a private company, with the assistance of the Town Council, without high taxation. The mistake of having them too small should be avoided

Mr. J. F. Dennistoun judged that there was an agreement that the present protection is insufficient. The agitation for water-works commenced more than ten years ago. A number of people had come to the conclusion that they were not only desirable for the protection of property, but, also, as an investment, as the saving in insurance would largely cancel taxation to pay interest on the outlay and cost, for maintainence. The impression then was that instead of this being made a town matter, it would be better to have it entrusted to the enterprise and energy of a joint stock company, to protect the business portion of the town, and extend the system as desirable. There were present representatives of a large portion of the property owned on George street; and he was justified in believing them interested in the protection of their property and the saving of insurance. There should be no difficulty in such men at once subscribing an amount of money sufficient to provide the necessary works. The proposition some years ago was for a local tax. If the Municipal Act does not provide for that, new legislation could be got, and the fund in the control of the Commissioners might be utilised. Unless the scheme is for the whole town at a great cost—perhaps not justifiable—then persons not interested in the business streets, have a special interest in saying, "you have no right to thus use this money"; particularly as it is within the reach of these gentlemen to have water-works which will pay them well. Referring to the large scheme of Mr. Romaine, he said there had always been a tendency to divide up into parties; so that what one party proposed was bound to be opposed by others. This was avoided by leaving the matter in the hands of private parties. He did not see why gentlemen of property, like Messrs. Stevenson, Cox, Clarton and others, could not come down with a business proposition to supply water as gas is supplied. If the town proposed to build the works, there is no reason way, instead of touching the railway debt, the town credit, which is good, should not be negotiated. But a private company could build works cheaper than the corporation.

Mr. Bradburn did not think a joint stock company would do. He was in favour of having the works all over the town and paid for by the town.

Mr. Cox didn't think a local tax quite fair, as the steamer would have to be kept for the protection of the outskirts, and the central portion of the town pays most of the general tax. It might be possible to adopt the frontage tax system, under which each street pays in proportion to improvements made. If certain blocks were in that way set apart, he thought it could be worked out very well.

Mr. Dennistoun declared that the people in the north part of the town had no protection by the steamer, as it could not be got there in time to check a fire. All the protection they had was by insurance; and if water-works were established the town might sell the engine, so far as the northern section was concerned.

Mr. Cluxton argued that, though George street pays the principal taxes of the town, the taxes there collected are not expended on that street. It is the business of George street that makes the town. He didn't think it reasonable to tax that part in addition for the protection of the property within it. He didn't think a private company would feel disposed to spend money to build water-works; but if $13,000 could be loaned to a company, then the town could get water-works.

Mr. Stevenson said in 1867 a proposition to form a company broke down; for they could not get the Council to say how much the town would give. If a fire caught in a house and the company did not provide water, it would be thought hard. If the Council say, "we will give you $1,200 or $1,300 a year," they would find money to build water-works. He didn't know of any place in which the frontage tax is in force. The second Ward pays nearly one-half the taxes of the whole town. Some years ago he could have got stock taken; but Mr. Fairbairn gave a legal opinion to the effect that the proposition could not be carried out. George street is very compact; and water could be made effective for extinguishing fires within a thousand feet. The saving in insurance would pay the interest. We have no power in law to make a local tax.

Mr. Cox considered that the first requirement was to get an estimate of the cost. The Fire Brigade and watering streets, cost $2,000. For an additional $1,000 he would get money to build water-works which would be effective form Queen to Read street and down George street to Hamilton's foundry. It is of the utmost importance that the town should have water-works, especially as they can be made self supporting.

Mr. Dunnistoun thought if we had local taxation George Street would pay more than at present, as that part of the town got the benefit of the police, streets and bridges, gas, &c. If a company were formed and the water came to his house he would understand he would have to pay for it.

Mr. Cluxton held that the stores were a benefit to all the people of the town. If the merchants were given the taxes they pay, or a part of them, they would construct water works. The interest on $25,000 at 6 per cent. was $1,500, whereas the town now pays $2,000 for water and fire protection. It was a pity, there should be one part of the town pulling against another.

Mr. W. H. Moore thought a local tax or a private company would prove a failure. It would not be fair to make George street pay the whole cost. He found the total assessment of the town was $2,600,000; that there were 1800 ratepayers on the roll, and that the average tax paid by each was $17. To meet an estimate of $20,000 would require an addition of only half a mill on the dollar, not only to pay the first call, but to also provide a sinking fund for 20 years. The average assessment was $1,500, but those on the out-skirts did not pay so much as those of the centre. The system should extend to the outer limits. The greater expense would be in laying mains, as the branches, being smaller would cost less. A larger estimate could be reckoned on the same scale as he had calculated on for $20,000.

Mr. Clarken said though all seemed in favor of water-works, when it came down to details the trouble began. He still believed in a company. It was for the town to say where hydrants were wanted and how much more it would pay per year. Then men could go into it as a business venture. If the town went into it, the first thing was to settle how far the supply was to extend. The extensive scheme of some years ago was estimated at $40,000. In any case mains should be laid so as to provide for extension. If George street were to be burnt up it would be a bad thing for the town. In considering a sectional division of taxes everything to which they go should be considered, and he thought the centre of the town did not get so much for schools as the outskirts. The town should not go into the supply of water for domestic purposes, arrangements for which could be better made by a company. In that case pressure must be kept up to a certain extent, constantly. Lay down where pipes are wanted, and then an estimate can be made.

Mr. Stevenson said the Port Hope works cost between $16,000 and $17,000.

Mr. Cox suggested that the section where pipes were to be, should be determined, and an estimate made. If too much for the town to go into, the territory could be reduced.

Mr. Trout had gone into the matter pretty fully two or three years ago, and had estimated the cost of works for the whole town to be $40,000. The scheme was for all purposes, the supply for extinguishing fires being arranged by an automatic attachment. A company could look at the matter in a business-like way. Good water could be got for every purpose at very little additional cost by digging in the valley of the river at almost any point at as high an elevation as the stream. Other places have, in that way, got water for all purposes.

Mr. Stevenson declared it would take all the water in the creek, and the mill-owners would be suing for damages.

Mr. Dunsford thought if works were constructed at the bridge at Hunter street, Ashburnham could be induced to share the cost. There was room to put up buildings there. Pipe could be laid to and along George streets as far as necessary. Instead of letting the surplus lie in the hands of the Trust Commissioners for forty or forty-five years as it would do, he would like to see the town get some immediate benefit from it. Let an estimate be made for the area proposed to be covered, and get the necessary portion of the locked-up money to pay for water-works, and keep the rest for outsiders. Spend six or eight thousand dollars to build the works as far as wanted, and afterwards extend as needed. At the end of forty-five years there will be $30,000 in the hands of the Commissioners. There was an act passed last year under which any street, or streets, may pay taxes for all improvements on them, and be exempt from all charges of similar nature elsewhere; but that only applies to the usual work on streets.

Councillor Cahill thought the residents in the outskirts had no objection to a frontage tax, if their streets were first put in as good condition as those in the centre, to which they have been paying for years. Of the $2,000 spent this year in streets and bridges, but a small portion went beyond the central part of the town.

Mr. Cox declared the special tax for street watering an outrage, while the centre paid so largely to the general tax as well.

Coun. McNaughton didn't agree with Mr. Cox. The merchants on George St. accommodated the people in order to gain paying custom; and as they gained all the benefit, they should pay for the work.

Mr. Stevenson declared water-works were wanted, and for George street. He therefore moved:—"That this Committee request the Council to take the necessary steps to enable it to obtain legislation, so that the carporation may be enabled to assess locally for the construction of water-works.

The Mayor stated that he had last session laid a draft Act before the Attorney-General, who had then said the session was too far advanced to deal with it, and that a general Act would be introduced next session for the purpose.

Mr. Dennistoun seconded Mr. Stevenson's resolution.

Mr. Edmison thought if the meeting was of opinion that the town should go into the construction of water-works it should express that opinion; then go into the question of extent. The system should be a rather extensive one, to protect the town from epidemic; for there is not a well in the corporation which is not poisoned already. He thought the system of local taxation rotten to the core. Every one was interested; if not directly, then indirectly. The resolution proposed was something like a six months' hoist.

The submission of the resolution was greeted with cries of "No, no!"

Mr. Carnegie considered such a resolution unfortunate at this stage. A large pipe should be put down George-street, so as to provide for extension beyond the local limits. General extension should be considered before anything.

Mr. Cluxton considered the general opinion was that works for a part of the town would not meet with public approval. He thought a good system would not cost more than the town is paying at present, and be more effective than the engine. He moved, seconded by Mr. Cox,—That, in the opinion of this meeting, it is of the utmost importance to the town that an efficient system of water-works should be supplied as soon as possible; that the present seems to be a desirable time to go on with the enterprise, material being cheap; that the saving in the cost of the fire brigade, fire engine, etc., and reduction in the cost of insurance, all are important matters, and would more than represent the cost to the town, as this meeting believes from information now before it; that the necessity of providing pure water to the central part of the town has become a duty which should be met by some suitable means; that such system should be made to cover the whole of the town as far as practicable, and that the whole town should contribute thereto; that detailed information is required with a view to further action, which can best be collected by a committee.

Mr. Cox, in support of the resolution, said the only difference appeared to be as to the extent and manner of payment. The chief point is to get a correct estimate, and if that comes anywhere near the amount suggested by Mr. Trout there should be no difficulty in going on.

The resolution on submission to the meeting was carried nem. con.

Mr. Carnegie then moved, seconded by Mr. Cox,—That Messrs. Trout, Belcher, W. Hamilton, Rutherford, Dennistoun, Cluxton, Moore and Stevenson be a committee to decide on the portion of the town to be covered, and make an estimate. Three to be a quorum.—Carried.

Peterborough Examiner

PETEBBOROUGH, JUNE 16, 1881.

A Town Park.

The desirability of a town park, or pleasure-ground, for the citizens of Peterborough has frequently been mentioned with a great degree of popular approval; and not long ago the matter was referred to a joint committee of the Town and County Councils. The proposition includes the sale of the old cemetery grounds, which are considered as being too near the Court House Green for necessary park purposes, and the investment of the money so secured as part payment for another property in some less favoured locality. Whether the sale so suggested be made or not, the advisability of having further breathing space for the people is apparent; as is also the wisdom of procuring property for the purpose as speedily as possible, before the march of improvement makes further encroachments on the open spaces in the neighborhood, and enhances the value of property so far as to make its future purchase a question of greater expense. There is said to be a possibility of procuring at a reasonable rate thirty-five acres at the south end of the town, well adapted for the purpose of a pleasure and health resort, agricultural ground, etc. One great advantage of the location is that it is approached directly by the principal street, and is thus readily accessable from the business portion of the town, while lying without it. Among other natural advantages it has a number of second-growth trees, such as those which have so readily helped to the immediate beautification of Little Lake Cemetery, and which to a large extent will save the trouble and expense of planting. It is probable that the question of the purchase of these or some other grounds for a park will come up at the approaching session of the County Council, and it will not be amiss for our citizens to inform themselves on the subject, that they may be intelligently qualified to uphold the hands of Councillors on a matter of such importance to the present and future interests of the town, and through it of the county of which it is the chef-lieu.

The "Missing Link."

It will be pleasing to the citizens of Peterborough and residents of all points of the Grand Junction Railway line, lately acquired by the Midland management, to learn that the latter Company has finished the survey of the "Missing Link," between Peterborough and Omemee. A profile of the line has been prepared, which shows that though the route is up a pretty long grade from Peterborough it is on the whole a good one. It is the intention of the Company so to construct the road that the stiffest grades upon it will be considerably easier than those between Belleville and Peterborough, or from Omemee to Midland. To accomplish this a considerable amount of cutting will have to be done, and heavy embankment built; but the future requirements of the line, with so much of promise in them, must not be disregarded at the outset, even though the original cost of building be largely enhanced by their judicious consideration. The rise from Peterborough towards Omemee is of the less consequence, as the bulk of heavy traffic will be in the downward direction; therefore the chief care to be observed is the lessening as far as possible of steep ascents toward Peterborough. The profile presents no difficulties that cannot be readily overcome by going to the expense of proper excavation and banking; and the pressing necessity for this connection is an earnest that the work on the line will be vigorously pressed to an early completion, and the "Missing Link" be no longer missing. Belleville is rejoicing over the prospect of receiving the immense traffic from the west that this then completed route will pour into her lap, from the magnificent harbour of Midland. Peterborough has no less reason to look eagerly for the the opening of the "link," which will at once become part of the main line, through from lake to lake. Not only so. The finger of fate pointing to the future indicates that Peterborough will one day become the centre at which a second through line from west to east will cross the existing line from Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario. This Belleville has to fear; whereas Peterborough can look forward to her "manifest destiny" with comfortable assurance; for sooner or later, these things must be. As the operation of one line for traffic will hasten the other, it will certainly be a high day for Peterborough when the "Missing Link" is opened for traffic.

The Liberal Defeat in North Ontario.

Our surmise that the election of the Tory nominee for the Ontario Legislature in North Ontario was due to the supineness of the party which should have elected the Ministerial candidate receives ample confirmation from the official returns of the voting, and from the remarks of the papers published in the county. In order that we cannot be accused of drawing from sources partial to Mr. Bigelow we select from Tory journals. We find that the late vote stood:—2,041 for Bigelow, and 2,044 for Madill; and that at the election in 1879 the figures were: 2,048 for Gillespie, (Tory,) and 2,250 for Paxton, (Liberal.) Also, that the highest Tory vote ever polled in the constituency was 2,159, in the exceptional case of Gibbs, for the Commons, in 1880. The full Liberal vote of the Riding is counted at 2,500.

The Port Perry Observer says:—"The "village of Uxbridge—Grit to the core "—which ran up its majorities over the "100 for Grit candidates, now comes "down with its beggarly 38. Mr. Wheler, "the Grit candidate for the Dominion "Parliament, received the gushing support of Mr. Bigelow and his friends in "Port Perry, who rolled up for him a "majority of 47 under very unfavorable "circumstances, and now that village goes "back on its record and offers Mr. Bigelow a shabby 38."

The Whitby Gazette, which frantically supported Mr. Madill, reports Liberal losses in nine municipalities; and it admits that the result "has taken the Re-"form party by surprise, they having "from the first looked upon the contest "as 'only a matter of majority.'"

Although the majority is only three, and the Tory rejoicings may yet be numbered among the proverbial shoutings before the woods are left, by the recount which has been demanded, none the less should Liberals learn, that over-confidence of victory, and inattention to the polling of the full party vote in every contest is a fault to be overcome. A candidate, his friends and his party will never be disappointed by too large a majority in his favour; but a defeat by a narrow difference of three votes is decidedly annoying, especially when it might easily have been averted with the help of several hundred votes allowed to remain unpolled. It is to be hoped the rebuke will not be lost upon other constituencies beside that of North Ontario, where every Liberal who failed to vote in the late contest has reason to be thoroughly ashamed of himself.

East Durham.

The wait for a new election in East Durham fixes the nomination for Wednesday next, the 22nd inst., and polling for the Wednesday following. Both parties are indulging in the usual confident assertions of victory for their respective candidates; and are endeavoring to heal the breaches in their ranks in order to make good their predictions. There can be no doubt that the retired farmer, Mr. Russell, with plenty of time at his disposal to devote to public affairs, would make a far better representative of the Riding than Dr. Brereton, who, even his supporters say, must suffer great business sacrifices if sent to Parliament. In kindness to the Conservative nominee himself, in kindness to his patients, and in kindness to East Durham, which cannot be fitly represented by a medical man, the Doctor should be elected to stay at home. About the most absurd reason for his election we have seen, is that advanced by the Millbrook Messenger, which looks to it as an insurance of the seat in the House of Commons, to Lieut.-Colonel Williams. The member for the Dominion elective House has indeed lost ground if his chances of re-election depend on the success of the present candidature of Dr. Brereton. The cry is a palpable attempt to make the personal esteem in which Col. Williams is held an inducement to his friends to vote for Brereton, lest haply their contrary vote might be taken as an indirect condemnation of the M.P. However, the Conservatives should have a care how they drag in the Commons member, for they cannot well do it without bringing with the man the broken pledges to the farmers, and the bad faith to the Province of Ontario, of the party leaders he supports.

Without a full knowledge of the internal working of the parties in the Riding, of which we are not fully informed, we cannot, of course, attempt to predict the result of the contest, which promises, happily for the electors, to be short and sharp; but, judging from the open issues on which the decision should turn, it seems that the Liberals of East Durham never have had such favourable promise of sending one of their number to represent the constituency in the Legislature of Ontario. With anything like unanimity of action and earnest work in getting out the full vote, they should be able to score a victory now, or never.

The Late Dr. Geo. Burnham.

The community has been surprised by the sudden death, on Tuesday evening, of Dr. George Burnham, an old medical man, well known throughout this section of country for nearly half a century. Without any premonition of impending dissolution, he died while sitting and peacefully smoking his pipe at his own home. He was born on a farm between Port Hope and Cobourg, on the 4th September, 1814, and was consequently at the time of his death in his 67th year. He was a son of John Burnham, who came to Canada from the State of New Hampshire. He was educated at Port Hope Grammar School, studied medicine with Dr. McSpaddin, and at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York; and in 1838, two years after his settlement in Peterborough, was granted a license to practice by the old Board of Medical Examiners, since superceded by the College of Physicians and Surgeons. He maintained an extensive practice till three or four years ago, when failing vision compelled him to retire and live upon the ample fortune he had amassed in a long career of shrewd business application. He was for many years an active member of the School Board, and for a considerable time occupied the position of Chairman. He frequently delivered lectures on educational and scientific subjects. He was a Freemason, and at one time was Master of Peterborough Lodge. He attended Christian worship in the Baptist Church, of which he was a member. He married in January, 1847, Miss Adeline Humphries Spalding, of Haldimand, Ontario, by whom he had eight children, four being still alive,—George H., a practicing physician; Helen S., married to Dr. R. P. Boucher; and a son and a daughter unmarried. Their mother died on the 17th October, 1869, and now they are deprived of their father also.

The funeral, this afternoon, will no doubt be largely attended.

A GOOD DEAL of surprise has been occasioned by the conduct of the Council at is last sitting in displaying "how not to do it" in the matter of an application by the Fire Brigade, for a grant toward the celebration of Dominion Day. Instead of manfully receiving it, and discussing it on its merits, they suffered it to drop "under the table," without even the grace of a bare recognition. This is scarcely the way to treat a body like the Firemen, who, in their turn are expected to act on every sudden alarm, for the benefit of the citizens, and that too, without the chances of deliberation granted to the "corporation Fathers." It would certainly have been no more than seemly to have rejected the Brigade's application with some expressed reason, instead of treating it contemptuously. The request was not an uncommon one; for such grants as that applied for have been formerly made in this town, and this year other towns and villages have voted sums toward the proper observance of the Birthday of the Dominion. Even the village of Lakefield has given $100 toward the patriotic observance of the day there, and other Municipalities have done likewise. Why Peterborough Councillors should fear to be as patriotic as those elsewhere, is not explained by themselves; therefore the cause can only be surmised. There may be a reasonable explanation; but, if so, it should have been called forth by the presentation of the request. The Fire Brigade surely deserves that public recognition at the hands of Councillors. Private apologies now, for so open a snub, will hardly suffice.

Sir Richard Cartwright is expected in Prince Edward County next week, to address one or two meetings on public matters. Would it not be well for the Liberals of Peterborough County to arrange for meetings to be addressed by one or more of the party leaders, some time during the summer or autumn? The small trouble and expense of such a desirable arrangement, should be a delightful duty rather than a task.

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald. Agents.—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

A NEW INDUSTRY.

Sperry's Shingle Mill at the Locks.

In these times, when it is the fashion with capitalists to ask municipal aid for any manufacturing industry they may project, greater credit and honor is due to those who go about their business enterprise and carry it through, without attempting to secure any public gratuity. The very highest recommendation any place can have as a good location for manufactories is the free employment, without the inducement of a bonus, of local capital in such channels; and the man who on purely business grounds establishes a factory in a town does more to establish the industrial reputation of the place than would half a dozen bonussed concerns.

Of such sterling character is the enterprise of Mr. Andrew Sperry, in building a complete and thoroughly-fitted shingle-mill at the mouth of Whitelaw's creek, just above the Locks' Bridge. Only last fall a tract of about seventeen acres along the left bank of the Otonabee, stretching both above and below the Locks, was purchased by Mr. Sperry, and was then in an uncleared condition. Now it has assumed a civilized aspect, and contains a busy mill, and two very well built dwelling houses, still unfinished. The mill is a strongly-framed building of two storeys and a half, with a one-storey engine-room at its southern side. Though there is any amount of water-power just below, the position of the building and the use of steam are probably chosen because it the better adaptation of the reach of river above the Locks to the purpose of booming logs, the raw material from which shingles are produced. The timber is bought from jobbers up the river, floated down from points as high as Stony Lake, and boomed at the mouth of the creek, just beside the mill. The logs, as required, are drawn from the water up an incline, to a platform on the level of the lower floor, by a chain working on a cylinder driven by steam. Each log as received is placed on a travelling way, working under a cross-cut saw, with "V" teeth, by which it is sawn into blocks of the requisite length, being steadied during the operation by a clamp and "dog." As each block comes from the saw it is placed at the bottom of an incline so as to be drawn up by an endless band with cleats placed across it at intervals, and discharged upon the floor above. Blocks are sawn from an ordinary two-feet log at the rate of about one a minute; and the hauling in of logs, their sawing, and the despatch of blocks upward keep two men busy. As the blocks reach the upper floor a man splits from them the new growth of wood, and then at a large circular saw making about 700 revolutions per minute, neatly quarters them, and throws them backward for further operations. If any of the blocks now happen to be a trifle long, a section is taken off the end by another circular saw with appropriate gearing. It is then ready for the shingle machine, in which it is placed before a swift-revolving saw, between two rough cylinders, which, while tightly holding the ends, at the same time, by a simple arrangement of wedges and cog-pulls, move it outward as it goes to and from the saw, so as to cause a thicker cut to be made alternately at the top and bottom. In this way shingles are sliced off at about the rate of one every second; and as soon as one block is used up another is substituted. One man feeds and works the machine, while all the while two men are seated close to it at circular saws, busily dressing the edges, throwing the refuse one way and the accepted shingles another. About 75 per cent. of the shingles, those of the first class, are cast upon a platform immediately to the right of the dressers; the remainder, or second-class shingles, being dropped into a spout through which they descend to the lower floor. Thus there is no danger of the superior shingles being mixed with those of lower quality. The shingles are immediately taken by boys and arranged in presses in which they are bound into bunches of a quarter thousand, ready for shipment. A tramway, with car, conveys them to a little wharf on the river bank, where they can be loaded on boats for conveyance to the town or to any point on the river. Another tramway, on trestles, runs from the second floor some distance to the eastward of the mill, for the conveyance from the building of refuse cuttings, buttings, edgings, &c., which are sold for fuel. The saw-dust is carried by endless bands to the boiler room, and there used for firing. The boiler is bricked in and the furnace rendered as safe as possible. Water is drawn from the river and supplied to the generator by a force pump. The engine, of 75 horse power, is run to about 30 or 40 h. p., and with a band to a single shaft on the lower floor drives all the machinery of the mill, the capacity of which is safely placed at 40 M shingles per day.

The cost of this mill has been about $5,000, exclusive of the purchase of the property on which it is situated. The houses being finished will be occupied: one by Mr. Sperry and the other by his foreman. The buildings give the neighborhood of the Locks quite a hamlet-like appearance, and the improvements of the grounds about them add to the appearance of the locality. Mr. Sperry certainly deserves success in his enterprise.

THE CITY OF THE DEAD.

Little Lake Cemetery is being steadily improved and beautified by the energy and tasteful attention of Mr. John Kelly, the caretaker. The plot on the lake shore (just below the caretaker's house), laid out and planted last spring, is looking finely. Most of the maples, basswoods, and willows look well. Those which failed to grow have been replaced by others, and some evergreens and shrubs have been added. The flower-plots, too, have received decent attention. For the proper support of this projecting part of grounds, as well as for the enlargement and better formation of the front of the cemetery, the Company should acquire a portion of the field at the other side of the gates, and, by clearance and improvement, make an advantage of what is now an eye-sore to the approaching visitor. The plot within the gates is glorious with a display of geraniums and foliage plants, while the terraces and carefully-clipped cedar hedges, display a pleasing freshness of verdure, backed by the darker green of the evergreens and older native trees of the locality. The picture is improved by the lighter tints of monuments, vases and hanging baskets, interspersed with the rich dyes of flowers of brilliant colors. Through the green vistas also show the gleam of the massy white flowers of the "snow-ball," along-side neatly gravelled walks, bordered by belts of greenest grass. Around the edge of the pine thicket to the left of the entrance, has been set a new cedar hedge, and further along toward the point which projects into the river, a thick growth of scrubby pines has been cleared away, the ground cleaned up and partly graded. The stumps have been built into the river bank, as a sort of breakwater. The trees left standing, for shade and ornament, comprise the cedar, maple, oak, birch, poplar, wild cherry and bilberry. This promises to be the prettiest part of the grounds, if the result be similar to that part known as "Section K.," which, though only reclaimed from utter wildness last year, now shows one of the most admirable groves of young maples to be seen anywhere. Considerable improvements are being made in the "flat," in the way of grading, bedding, sodding and planting. Only one new monument has been erected this spring; but some of the old ones that had been badly weather-stained, have been cleaned so as to appear new; and there has been a pretty general endeavour to beautify the plots of ground in which lie the remains of "loved ones gone before." The tasteful decoration of "God's Acre," is a beautiful expression of regard for the dead,—an example to be followed by those who have suffered the final earthly separation, and commended by all. The degree of civilization reached by a community may be measured by an examination of its public cemetery. Judging thus, Peterborough is far from barbarism.

A CANADIAN MILITARY HERO.

UNVEILING OF THE DESALABERRY STATUTE.

On Wednesday of last week, a statute to the memory of Colonel deSalaberry, "the hero of Chateauguay," was unveiled at the little village of Chambly, on the bank of the River Richelieu. There was a great gathering of military, and civilians as well, to do honour to the name of one in whose deeds Canadians may well feel proud. The ceremony of unveiling the statute was performed by His Excellency, the Governor-General, and Stevenson's Field Battery thundered a salute, the Sixty-fifth firing a feu de joie. Colonel Harwood then delivered the oration of the day, in the course of which he recounted in glowing terms the deeds of the hero whose statute looked down upon them. Mr. Dion, Sec'y-Treasurer, followed much in the same strain.

The gallant deSalaberry was in May, 1812, appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the celebrated Voltigeurs, and in November was sent forward by Sir George Provost with 400 Voltigeurs and some Indians to dispute the entrance of General Dearborn, with ten thousand American troops into Lacadie, near St. Johns, and did his duty so promptly and thoroughly that Dearborn decamped on the 23rd of the same month. One year later, General Hampton, father of Wade Hampton, the present distinguished Senator from South Carolina, made an attempt on Montreal, with 7000 men. Col. deSalaberry opposed his entrance at Lacadie successfully, and Hampton, unwilling to risk an engagement in the woods, retired to "Four Corners," where on the first of October, deSalaberry, with 50 Voltigeurs and 150 Indians, surprised his camp. Hampton was desirous of forming a junction with the Commander-in-chief, Dearborn, and with Wilkinson, commander of another division, believing his way to Chateauguay open, but deSalaberry ascended the left bank of the Chateauguay River, and choosing a good position threw up four lines of defence. On the 25th October, Hampton, with 7,000 infantry, 400 cavalry, and 12 pieces of artillery attacked the Canadian camp, defended by only three hundred men—Voltigeurs, Fencibles and Indians. The affair lasted four hours, and ended in the defeat of the Americans and their retreat across the frontier as far as Plattsburg.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

Farm Notes.

The raising of cattle, sheep and poultry for the supply of our village and city markets, is every day becoming a matter more deserving of the attention of the agricultural community. The demand is becoming more and more difficult to supply, as larger quantities and finer qualities are being continually sought for.

Sweet corn for winter forage and early feed is becoming better known and appreciated, and it will gradually gain until every live farmer will find himself providing it as regularly for the denizens of the barn yard, as the mistress does for the table.

Temper in cattle is hereditary as well as in man; it is not desirable to breed from a vicious sire.

The healthiness of sheep in Ontario has been noticed. Where fatality occurs, it is usually traceable to some specific and local cause or to mismanagement. Overfeeding previous to lambing has been mentioned as causing occasional loss to the breeder in some cases. Staggers is a form of complaint not altogether unknown; and goitre in the neck, in one flock mentioned, while other neighboring sheep were healthy, was pretty clearly traceable to the character of the water. And, as the exception sometimes proves the rule, so in one instance the appearance of foot rot some nine years ago, and of foot and mouth disease since subsequently in one district was mentioned, but only accompanied by the further information that with ordinary care and remedies both were soon stamped out. There is nothing to foster either in the dry, healthy, bracing atmosphere of Ontario. Our farmers, then, should by all means devote more attention to advanced sheep farming.

When lambs bring such sums as occasionally have been mentioned—$7 to $8 a head—farmers can hardly be blamed for disposing of them, but the ordinary prices are much lower. Three dollars to four dollars and a half will be nearer the mark. The farmer will occasionally be obliged to sell his lambs, but the better the farmer the more he will strive to retain them, to bring them to the highest pitch of excellence both in wool and mutton, and to improve his farm while he is improving his sheep, thus rendering it every year capable of sustaining a larger flock. The most profitable time for farmers to sell their sheep is after they have taken the first wool. This wool of the first clip is usually of the finest quality. What the shearling or its wool will be worth, is, of course, dependent upon the breed and feed. It is not intended to argue that a common sheep with a 4 lb. or a 4½ lb. fleece and bringing 4 or 4½ cents live weight at the highest is a profitable animal anywhere.

Mr. Adam Scott, a prominent Maine sheep breeder, last winter fed 330 wethers, and to discern how rapidly they were gaining in flesh, secured two, which he weighed every month. On the 12th of January they weighed respectively 120 and 130, and continued to grow steadily up to the 12th of April, when they weighed 150 and 170. They were fed one and one-fourth pounds daily, with all the hay they could eat. The total cost for feed being estimated at seventeen cents per month—an increase of about twenty cents per month for each sheep over the value of feed eaten.

Garden Notes.

CURCULIO.—These little pests of the plum trees are already at work. Tarring the trees after spreading some cotton below is the most efficacious way to destroy them, but a great many can be caught in a woollen rag wrapped round the trunk just below the limbs. The injury to the fruit is most destructive when the germ is just emerging from the blossom, as then the boring reaches the centre, where the stones should form.

An exchange says that if plum-growers will place a hen and small chickens under their plum trees soon after the fruit begins to set, and jar the trees two or three times a day, (say morning, noon and night), they can raise plums. Very small chickens are the best, as they do not go far from the coop, and will pick up every insect that falls from the tree. It is better to keep the ground free from grass or weeds under the trees, so that the insects can be readily seen by the chickens as they fall to the ground.

An old and successful fruit-grower says the most successful curculio preventative he has ever tried, is to plant tansy at the roots of the plum trees, or hang branches of the plant on the limbs of the trees.

Among our sweet summer flowers there are very few more desirable than the sweet pea. It gives us all colors, from dark purple to white, and several colors on the same flowers, and for cutting for bequets we know of nothing better, though they do not last very long.

Soot contains more fertilizing material in proportion to its bulk than almost anything that is applied to the soil. It is an excellent material to apply to soil in which rose bushes, squashes, tomatoes and melons are planted. But, if applied in too large quantities it may prevent seeds from germinating and cause the death of very tender plants.

The following is recommended by an English gooseberry grower:—Three parts of powdered quick lime to one of hen manure thoroughly mixed, and applied early in the morning in the centre of the bush where the branches start from. We use about a teaspoonful to each, which falls down the stem and dresses the roots. The mixture should be applied on a quiet day; it not only destroys the caterpillar, but nourishes the bush.

J. T. Chandler states that he has adopted the following method of raising squashes, and that since practising it he has never in a single instance failed of a good crop:—He first digs a small hole for each hill, into which he puts a liberal quantity of manure and covers it to the depth of an inch or two with soil. The whole is then covered with coal ashes, with which the hole is filled, and the soil and the manure covered. The seed is planted or plants set in the ashes directly over the manure. At each hoeing a fresh supply of ashes is scattered around the plants, which are thus kept entirely free from grubs, while in his experience every hill planted without ashes will be destroyed.

The borer of the peach and apple tree should be looked to. There is no surface remedy after the borer has gotten its way into the tree. The only effectual means of reaching the borer is with a knife and probe. Use the knife as little as possible, simply to open an entrance for the probe of wire or whalebone. If the young tent caterpillars are taken in hand at the right time, it is an easy matter to dispose of them. Just so soon as the nests or "tents" are large enough to be seen, they should be removed and burned. If they are taken off in early morning they can be more easily found, covered with the glistening dew, and the inmates are "at home" during the early hours. Delay with this pest means trees stripped of their foliage and no fruit. The curculio is most active depositing its eggs in the young plums while the flowers are falling and for a few days after. The time to catch them is early in the morning while they are sluggish; spread a large cloth under the tree and give the tree a few sharp jars, when the insects fall upon the sheet and can be swept from it into the fire.

Household Information.

Cold tea is one of the most refreshing and satisfactory summer drinks, provided it be not spoiled by the addition of milk and sugar. It ought to be made early in the day, and left to stand in a stone jar until thoroughly cool, and should then be flavored with slices of lemon. Milk and water, toast and water, curd and whey, or lemonade made in the good old fashion are also to be recommended.

LEMONADE.—Four quarts of water, one and one-half pounds of loaf sugar, juice of eight lemons, the rubbings of one; strain it ready for use.

The following is recommended as making a whitewash that will not wash off by rain. Slack one peck of lime in five gallons of water, in which one pound of rice has been boiled until it is all dissolved. The rice water should be used hot, and the mixture covered closely until the lime is slacked. Then add one pound of salt. Have the wash heated to boiling when applied.

The simplest and most effective way, and, indeed the most economical, to preserve eggs without imparting to them any foreign flavor, or rendering them unfit for hatching, the Ploughman says, is to use the patent stopper glass jar, with vulcanized India rubber joints to make it perfectly tight, like the jars for preserving fruits. As soon as the eggs are collected, put the jars into hot water, and when thoroughly warm so as to rarify the air, put the eggs in the jar, the pointed end upwards, and pack them with paper or something to prevent them from breaking, then close the jar before taking it out of the water. If the work is skilfully done and the jar is tight, the eggs will keep for many months and be quite for the breakfast table as the day they were laid. It is said they will be fit for hatching also a year after they are so packed.

The N. Y. Tribune says neither soap nor anything that contains caustic potash or lime should be used in cleansing tin milk vessels. The first is nasty, and all corrode the tin. For scouring, use salt; for disinfecting, use sal soda; for cleansing, wash first in cold water, and drain without rinsing or wiping. Infection from a wiping-cloth may undo the effect of scalding.

An old lady who had been reading the health officer's weekly reports, thought that 'total' must be an awfully malignant disease, since as many die of it as all the rest put together.

"Uncle, what is the hardest lesson you ever had to learn?" asked a young lady of a veteran statesman known for his strong prejudices. "That the man who differs with me, not only in opinions, but in principles may be as sincere and honest as I am," was the reply.

A poor beggar woman, repulsed from door to door, as she solicited alms and quarters through a village in Annandale, asked, in her despair, if "there were no Christians in the place?" The hearers answered, "Na, na, woman, there are nae Christians here; we are a' Johnstones and Jardines."

The late Bishop Wilmer, of Louisiana (the cousin Joe), and Bishop Wilmer, of Alabama (the Cousin Dick, of the following anecdote), being in Italy together, the latter was enthusiastically pointing out to the former the architectural beauties of a ruin, when his Louisiana reverence, rather wearily protested, "It's all very fine, cousin Dick, but, nevertheless, a cheerful field, fragrant with new-mown hay, would please me better." The Bishop of Alabama replied, "Well. Cousin Joe, there is this in favor of your view of it—there is not an ass in all Italy that would not be of the same opinion."

A blacksmith was summoned to court as a witness in a dispute between two of his workmen. The judge, after hearing the testimony, asked him why he did not advise them to settle, as the costs had already amounted to twice that sum. He replied: I told the fools to settle, for I said the clerk would take their coats, the lawyers their shirts, and if they got into your honor's court, you'd skin 'em!"

A Governor of Williamsburg, in the time of British rule in America, returned the salute of a negro who was passing. "Sir," said the gentleman present, "do you condescend to salute a slave?" "Why yes," replied the Governor, "I cannot suffer a man of his condition to be better mannered than myself."

"Charles, I hate this horrid surf; it makes me keep my mouth shut." Charles sarcastically—"Take some of it home with you, my dear."

A pretty good story is related of one of our gallant volunteers. When he first presented himself en militaire to his wife and little daughter, the latter, after gazing at him for a few minutes, turned to her mother, and exclaimed, "Why, ma, that's not a real soldier—it's pa!"

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized.

THE ALEMBIC OF THE BODY.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wondrous chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it is vigorous the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation go on uninterrupted, and the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organism becomes weak and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disastrous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the supreme stomachic and aperient, NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which reforms a disordered and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes biliousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent re-action prejudicial to the general health. Far perferable is it to the ordinary nauseous drugs used to produce a similar effect, but which are frequently ineffective as well as unpleasant; nor is it a cheap and valueless medicine, puffed into existence. It is used for dyspepsia, biliousness, affections of the blood, kidney complaints, famale weakness, lumbago, &c., and in all blood diseases it is unequalled. Price, $1,00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A SUMMER'S WOOING.

Out beneath the fair birch roofless of the cedar and the old fir-tree,
That knit their kind wildness shading to the forest path and glade.
Did we wander thro' the moonlight or the softly silver moonlight:
Conversing of sweet nothings as we on together strayed.

Oh, I loved her like a brother, and I felt that none other
Could be ever quite so precious as my Amy unto me:
And I often let her know it, for I quoted every poet
That I knew of who o'er wrote of love, or faith, or constancy.

Ah! how often I caressed her, and how lovingly I've pressed her.
As I stole some truant kisses in the good old-fashioned way;
And whenever then I'd greet her, she would make them seem still sweeter
By the coy reluctant manner that she'd turn her head away.

In our boat upon the river we would sit and watch the quiver
Of the struggling rays of moonlight gleaming o'er the gland old trees.
While its shadows lent a harbor—sometimes o'er the old grape arbor
Gave the solitude we sought for, that we two alone might be.

But the world is changing ever, and the ties that bind us never,
Just as summer dies to autumn and the golden tints decay;
And the hectic hues and flushes that enrobe the world in blushes
Only tell of bloom soon coming that will sweep them all away.

When in autumn we two parted—I was left nigh broken-hearted.
But my fleeting bird of passage sang as blithely as before;
When I saw no fond regretting, I expected but forgetting—
'Twas to her a summer idyl while it lasted—nothing more.

Fair and fragile, sweet and fleeting, breaking like two wavelets meeting;
Woman's faith and woman's fancy dwell not long in peace together:
Unto her a summer's wooing, unto me my heart's undoing.
With its fairest buds of promise sere and dead in autumn weather.

PROF. BRUSH gave an exhibition here last week. Quite an interest was taken, and a large class met to receive instructions.

Mr. T. W. Casey delivered a very interesting and instructive lecture in the Temperance Hall on Tuesday evening. The lecturer at considerable length compared the working, &c., of the Dunkin Act with the Scott Act, much to the advantage of the latter. Mr. Marsh followed in a short and very pointed address, also on temperance.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

THE COURT OF REVISION confirmed the assessment of the Midland Railway and of James Campbell. The name of James Gordon was put on the roll for part of lot 12 in the 12th con., and that of William Randall for south ½ of lot 1, in the 7th con.

THE COUNCIL at its last meeting ordered the payment of a Review printing account of $4.00; and of $5 each to Councillors Brealy and Brownscombe, $4 each to Councillors Dunlop and Foster, and $30 each to the Assessor and Clerk, as salary. The sum of $20 was granted to be laid out on the Concession Line between 8 and 9, by Mr. George Hooey as commissioner. Mr. Andrew Young was authorized to grade and gravel the Gravel Road from Newhall's corner northwesterly; work to be done at Mr. Young's discretion; the sum to be expended not to exceed one hundred dollars. Mr. Fred. Poulson was granted the sum of $11, to be laid out on his beat. Mr. Thomas Armstrong was granted $30, to be laid out on quarter line on the 10th concession. Mr. M. J. Johnston was granted $10, to be expended on the road lying between lots 5 and 6 in the 11th concession. It was resolved that the River Road be opened from Mr. Geo. Howden's corner to the locks for public traffic, and that the Clerk notify all parties affected by such opening to have their fences removed at once off said road. The Reeve was instructed to take legal proceedings against Mr. John McBain and Mr. Wm. Spilabury, to cause them to move their fences off the public highway. A By-Law was passed for the opening of Annie street, from the boundary line between the town of Peterborough westerly to Frederick street.

"THE GREY MARE IS THE BETTER HORSE."

A gentleman having married a lady of considerable beauty and fortune, but whose domineering temper and disregard of marital authority on all occasions made his home wretched, entreated her father to take back his daughter, and her dowry into the bargain. "Pooh, pooh!" said the the old gentleman, "you know not the world. All women govern their husbands, and it is easily proved. Harness the five horses in my stable to a cart, in which I will place a basket containing 100 eggs; leave a horse in every house where the husband is master, and an egg only where the wife governs. If you should find your eggs gone before the horses, you will not think your case so uncommon; but if your horses are disposed of first I will take my daughter home again, and you may keep her fortune." At the first house the son-in-law came to, he heard the wife, in a snrill and angry voice, bid her husband answer the door; here he left an egg without any enquiry. He visited a second and a third with the same result. The eggs were nearly all gone when he arrived at the seat of a gentleman of position in the county. Having asked for the master, who happened not to be yet stirring, he was ushered into the presence of the lady. Humbly apologising for the intrusion, he put the question of obedience; and on the lady replying she was proud to obey her husband in all things, the husband entered the room and confirmed his wife's words, upon which he was requested to choose which horse he liked. A black gelding struck his fancy, but the lady desired he would choose the grey mare as more fit for a side-saddle. Notwithstanding the substantial reasons given why the black horse would be more useful, the wife persisted in her claim for the grey mare. "What!" said she; "and will you not take her, then? But I say you shall; for I am sure the grey mare is much the better horse." "Well, well, my dear," replied the husband; "just as you please, if it must be so." "Oh," quoth the gentleman carter, "you must now take an egg, and I must take all my horses back again and endeavor to live happily with my wife."—[Notes and Queries.

Belleville Intelligencer:—By the extension of the railway wharf the accommodation for vessels here has been very largely added to and when it is considered that lumber and grain can be successfully carried hence to Oswego by barges, the imaginary superiority of Port Hope vanishes, as lower rates can thus be secured on lumber and grain from Belleville to Oswego than from Port Hope to Oswego. The Company are about proceeding with the erection of a large elevator here—a fact which is ominous for the grain trade of Port Hope, and with the construction of the direct line from Peterborough to Omemee, it is only reasonable to assume that a large quantity of lumber which would otherwise be shipped at Port Hope will be brought to Belleville. It is to the interest of the lessees to keep the Grand Junction fully employed, and as Mr. Cox is noted for his shrewdness and energy, we have no doubt that he will give to the customers of the line under his control the very best facilities possible. Therefore we have no doubt that the trade of this city will be materially increased by the Grand Junction under his management.

A ROMANTIC MARRIAGE.

About a year ago Rev. A. W. Marling, a young man well known in Toronto, went as a missionary to the Gaboon mission, on the west coast of Africa. For a year or two previous to setting out for this distant coast, Mr. Marling had studied theology at Princeton, where he met Miss Janet R. Cameron, his future wife and helpmate. Under the auspices of the American Presbyterian mission, Mr. Darling and his affianced set out for Africa. Some time after their arrival they were about to celebrate their marriage, when it was discovered that in Gaboon, which is under the French law, no marriage is valid unless sanctioned by the documentary consent of the parents of the contracting parties. When the jour de noce was set for a particular day in the immediate future, how were the parties to write, the one to Toronto, the other to Princeton, to obtain their parents' consent? Such a proceeding would have delayed the marriage for half a year. The dilemma was got over in the following way: A steamer conveyed the parties to a point more than three miles from the coast, where they were out of the dominion of the French law and its documentary requirements. There on the high seas Rev. W. Walker, senior, of the American Presbyterien Mission, performed the marrage ceremony. Is is said the ring was the workmanship of a black African, made from native gold melted in a Liberian crucible. The young missionary is a son of one of the High School inspectors and a graduate of Toronto University.—

OPPRESSION AFTER EATING.—Many persons after an ordinary meal, feel a sense of weight and discomfort in the region of the stomach, the sure sign of an imperfect digestion, and probably the forerunner of a settled dyspepsia. Nothing will relieve this oppression like the Peruvian Syrup, by the stimulus it gives to the digestive powers. Sold by all druggists.

HEADACHE.—Why become a suffering martyr to Headache, when Burdock Blood Bitters will surely cure the cause of all varieties of either Sick or Nervous Headache, cleanse the System, regulate the Secretions, relieve Constipation of the Bowels, Purity the Blood, renovate the Liver and tone up the Nervous System, and distressing headache will be unknown? Sample Bottles 10 Cents, Large Bottles $1.00. 24-3t

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam is composed of the most healing balsams and gums. The Balsams which enter into its composition, were used by the natives when America was first discovered, and are combined with other vegetable tonics, so blended together, that it is a specific for all affections of the throat and lungs. Thousands of bottles are used annually, and it is considered one of the standard preparations of the day. 24-3t

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes o adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

A Great Cause of Human Misery

In the Loss of

MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

MIDLAND RAILWAY traffic returns for week ending June 7th, 1881:—Passengers and Mails, $1,857.15; Freight, $5,870.80, total, $7,727.95, compared with $6,101.51 for the corresponding week of 1880, an increase of $1,626.44. Aggregate traffic, $124,725.72, an increase of $9,511.22 over 1880.

A LACROSSE MATCH will be played here on Dominion Day, between the Peterboroughs and the Independents, of Toronto. As the Independents, in their record of three years' play, have been but once defeated, the local club will do well to practice hard and diligently for the coming contest, if they would score the second defeat of their alert opponents. The flags won by the Independents last year at Niagara, will be exhibited on Saturday in Mr. LeBrun's store.

HYMENIAL.—One of those pleasant and doubly interesting cermonies which break the monotony of bachelor life, occurred yesterday, in the city of Toronto, being the union of Mr. Robert D. Hamilton, of Peterborough, and Miss M. C. Park, of Toronto, in the holy bonds of matrimony. On Tuesday afternoon the employees at the agricultural works presented Mr. Hamilton with a handsomely designed and beautifully chased silver ice-pitcher, goblet and cruet, costing over $100. The gift was accompanied with an address expressive of former good-fellowship and future good wishes. Mr. Hamilton returned thanks in a neat impromptu reply. Mr. Hamilton and his bride have the best wishes of a host of friends for their future happiness, and the EXAMINER wishes them all the wedding compliments.

DOMINION DAY.—The anniversary of Confederation will be celebrated this year in Peterborough with more than usual eclat by the members of the Fire Brigade, and arrangements are already completed and announced by mammoth posters, which, if carried out, bids fair to outstrip anything yet attempted in this district. About 12.30 o'clock a grand Industrial Procession, numbering over sixty vehicles, and representing the trade and commerce of the town in operation, will proceed through the principal streets, headed by the Mayor and Councillors, members of the learned professions, and representatives of the different societies of the town, in carriages, and the Fire Brigade in uniform. At 2.30 p.m. burlesque sports will commence in the Agricultural Grounds, for perfectly fabulous prizes. In the evening a Promenade Concert and acrobatic performance will be given in the Drill Shed, after which a grand display of fire-works will be given. Further particulars will be furnished by programmes to be issued in a few days.

OCULIST AND AURIST.—Dr. J. D. Stewart, the celebrated Oculist and Aurist, will visit Peterborough, and may be consulted professionally at the Caisse House from Monday the 6th until Monday the 20th of June, inst. 1-t

THE CENTRAL PRISON has received, for six months, the form, including the deft fingers, of George Fisher, the man who celebrated the 24th of May in Peterboro', by cutting harness and stealing martingale rings.

ANOTHER EXCURSION to Peterborough over the Grand Junction Railway is being arranged by the Bridge-street Methodist Church, of Belleville. A committee was in town yesterday making arrangements.

PASTORAL CHANGES.—It is understood that the final report of the Stationing Committee of the Methodist Conference assigns Mr. Harper to Barrie; Rev. John Shaw, of Whitby, to Peterborough; Mr. Starr to Winnipeg, and Rev. G. C. Workman to Mr. Starr's present location.

THE CHEAPEST GLOVES on the market are to be found at Fairweather & Co's., where good kids are selling at the unprecedentedly low price of twenty-five cents per pair. The other day a lady who was shown the stock, immediately purchased seventeen pairs, and considers herself enriched by the prompt transaction.

A PIC-NIC got up by the Roman Catholic Church, of Campbellford, took place yesterday. The Grand Junction carried passengers at half-fare. About a hundred went from Peterborough, and a less number arrived at Campbellford from Belleville. But the surrounding country sent in crowds to the extent of about a thousand people, and the affair proved a complete success.

A CRICKET MATCH—one innings—between senior and junior teams of the local club, was played on Saturday, resulting in the close score of 79 to 70 in favour of the seniors, who adopted slow, under-arm bowling for their youthful antagonists. The double figures were those of Hilton, 24, and W. Hartley, 19, for the seniors; and W. Stratton, 18, and E. Stratton, 12, for the juniors.

PROF. HOTCHIN, of Albion, N. Y., has been at the Huffman House this week, treating cases of hernia, and has had much success. One patient, in response to his advertisement in THE EXAMINER, came twenty miles to see him. The Professor defies the production of a hernia he cannot hold. His next visit will be in the winter; and he will announce his coming through the columns of THE EXAMINER.

The Intelligencer says:—Belleville will gain more than will Peterborough by the traffic which it believes will pass through that town, in as much as the grain from the west will doubtless be forwarded to New via Oswego, and will be transhipped here. It also seems probable that much of the grain for England via Montreal will also be shipped in barges here for transportation to the ocean part.

THE EXAMINER'S VALUE as an advertising medium is again demonstrated in the case of Mr. Tighe, Janitor of the Collegiate Institute, who, in response to an advertisement in these columns, concerning a stray mare, received information of the animal's whereabouts from Mr. Cameron, of Westwood. There is scarcely any loss which cannot be retrieved by properly advertising in a good paper.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE for July has an abundant supply of highly interesting, edifying and entertaining reading matter. The articles are particularly noteworthy and finely illustrated. Lovers of poetry will be especially delighted by the quantity and quality of the poems—many of them being beautifully illustrated. Yearly subscription $3.00; single copy, 25 cents. Address Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

THE ECLIPSE.—The total eclipse of the moon on Sunday morning was watched by a good many citizens. It was a very beautiful spectacle. The moon during the eclipse had the appearance of a great ball of dull, livid flame—something of the color of smoke lit up by fire. The shadow of the earth first made its appearance on the moon's disc about twelve o'clock, and it covered the whole surface a few minutes past one.

A DENIAL has been requested through THE EXAMINER of a report of the death, under painful and somewhat scandalous circumstances, of Mr Wm. Coulter of Rapid City, Kansas, and formerly of Peterborough. The report was published (not by the EXAMINER,) on the strength of a street rumour beginning with one who while travelling heard of the death of a man of that name in Kansas, in the manner stated. We congratate Mr. Coulter's friends on the speedy vindication.

GEORGE POPE.—General Grocer, Wine and Spirit Merchant, Market Block, two doors north of the Review office, having taken out a liquor license, has just received a prime new stock of Old Rye and Malt Whiskeys, Brandies, Wines and Ales, including Davis' celebrated Canadian Ale, which he is prepared to supply at the closest possible prices for cash. Also a full assortment of family groceries and provisions. A call solicited.

A MUSICAL TREAT.—The music-loving population of Peterborough will be pleased to learn that there is now in contemplation the presentation at Bradburn's Hall, shortly, of the dramatic cantata in the scenes of Belshazzar's Feast, or the Fall of Babylon, and that those who are to appear in it have their parts now in preparation. The cantata is a grand and moving one, and as such is well worthy the close study of performers and the attentive ear of the public. 22-3ins

ATTENTION is directed to Mr. McFadden's advertisement in another column. He is offering very cheap croquet sets, and folding camp chairs and stools to the public. The stools and chairs are very suitable for camping and fishing parties, private houses, hotels, lawns, and verandahs. They are made of strong maple, with Brussels and Tapestry seats, and are capable of sustaining any person weighing 300 lbs. Call and see them. 24-1t.

CURIOSITY is rife to know the name of the Peterborough widow who, according to the Mail, has written to Mayor Campbell, of London, stating that she is about thirty-five years of age, and possessed of a heart which is "loving and true," and is willing, without hope of reward, to give her services to soothe the afflicted. She would not object to assuming the control of a household where there are one or two children, but she would prefer to tender to the wants of some "pure, kind-hearted man." The communication has, it is stated, been referred to a committee of one bachelor Councillor. But a "loving and true" heart should not be obliged to go so far afield to find a "kind-hearted" man. The "pure" is the difficulty; as in Peterborough, so, it is to be feared, in London.

MANHATTAN FEED is highly praised by those who have tried it for hastening improvement in the condition of live stock of all kinds. It is not, simply, a nutritive, but serves, also, as a relish for other provender, a digestive, a blood purifier, and takes a first rank among preparations known as "condition powders." Read the recommendations in our advertising columns; call on Taylor & Macdonald, corner George and Hunter streets, who are agents for the Counties of Peterboro', Victoria and Durham; buy a bag, and put it to the proof.

THE STORM of Monday evening blew down fences and signs, damaged shade trees and scattered whatever loose lumber lay exposed to its force. During its continuance the upper part of the southern gable of the South Ward school gave way and came "down and out" with a run, the wind probably catching the projecting parapet wall and pressing the brickwork outward. Pupils, working on the fears of their parents for the safety of the building, got a holiday on Tuesday. The Property Committee of the Board have examined the building, and will take prompt measures for the repair of the damage. In other respects the structure is quite safe.

A LARGE DRIVE.—One of the largest drives of saw logs which has ever passed down the Otonabee, is now on its way to Rice Lake. It consists of 220,000 logs, the joint property of Messrs. Ullyot, Sadler & Co., Messrs. Gilmour & Co., and the Messrs. Rathbun. The logs were started on the 28th of April, from Jack's Lake, where, for convenience and to expedite moving them to their respective destinations, the owners decided to run them in conjunction as one lot, and the result has been very satisfactory. Over 300 men are engaged upon the work. The first of the logs are now at the mouth of the river (Rice Lake), where the work of sorting them takes place, and which will occupy quite a time. The end of the drive is yet above Young's Point. It will therefore be some time before the river will be clear of logs, as nearly 100,000 pieces are yet to come down. T. Callaghan, agent for Messrs. Rathbun, and James Lynch, for Messrs. Ullyot, Sadler & Co., have charge of the work. They are evidently the right men in the right place.

GALLIC GALL.—The late row at the Montreal House has been the means of keeping the mill of justice grinding pretty steadily during the past week, with the result of the production of a goodly grist in the way of fines. First of all Gustave Bincette, Frederique Beauvais, and Zotique Beauvais entered a plea of guilty to the charge of fighting on the public street. Zotique also acknowledged an assault an Bincette; then another on Derique. As a set off Derique and Bincette were charged with assault on Zotique and found guilty. Ismer Beauvais turned up in the disturbance, and was charged by the hotel keeper, Jos. Brault, with breaking a chair in his house, and with destroying a shade tree in front of his place. On each charge Ismer was declared guilty. He was also arrainged and convicted on an old charge of assault on Fred. Garrett, nearly a year ago. Derique Beauvais laid information against Brault for selling liquor on Sunday, and the offence was clearly established. In all these cases Bincette was called on to pay two fines of $5 each, and $6 costs; Derique, a like amount on similar charges; Zotique, two fines of $5 and one of $1, with $6 additional as costs; Ismer, two fines of $5, and one of $2, with $14.35 added for costs; and Brault, $20 as fine, and $2 as costs.

A VISIT to Peterborough was made last Friday, by thirty-nine of the forty-one gentlemen composing the Northumberland and Durham County Council. They had issued forth from Cobourg, to inspect the old Burnt Bridge on the boundary line, with a view of getting Peterborough County to assist in rebuilding it; and to add pleasure to their business trip, they came on to Peterborough. They were accompanied by Mr. J. Vance Gravely, Mayor of Cobourg; E. H. Fogarty, of the Sentinal-Star; G. Pringle, M. Williams, N. N. Cole and wife, Mrs. Dr. Montgomery, D. Mallory, E. A. McNaughton, County Secretary and Treasurer; Andrew McNaughton, ex-Warden; E. Cochrane, ex-Warden; H. Holland and Joseph Ringlestein, of the Empire Hook and Ladder Co., Rochester, N. Y. The whole party was brought by Mr. J. R. Barber, superintendent of the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway, by rail to Harwood, and thence by steamer Isaac Butts. The visitors were received by the Mayor, the Police Magistrate, the Warden of the County, R. A. Morrow and Dr. Boucher, and warmly welcomed by all who came in contact with them. Dinner was provided at the Huffman House by the County of Peterborough, and the visitors spent a short time in seeing the sights, among others the hose tower, in view of the erection of a similar structure in Cobourg. The party re-embarked for home about three o'clock, amid many harty adieus. The Warden and several others accompanied them to the Locks, and Mr. Sanderson made an appropriate speech of good wishes, ending with "come again." The Mayor of Cobourg and the visiting Warden claimed an exchange visit, and pledged a warm welcome to the Peterborough County Councillors and their friends. It is not, therefore, unlikely, that during the approaching session, the County Council will take a day's recess and an outing as far as Cobourg.

Peterborough Markets.

PETERBOROUGH, June 15, 1881.

On Saturday a fair amount of grain was offered. Wheat was in fair demand, and sold from $1.10 to $1.12; average price being about $1.11. Oats sold at 34c. to 34½c.; quantity offering not large. Peas in light receipt, from 63c. to 65c. being paid. In barley nothing doing—season over; could find sale at 50c. to 55c. A good deal of wool changed hands at about 22c. On the market there was a falling off in the potatoe line; these not in demand—quiet at 30c. Butter was in good supply, but dull, at 12c. to 15c. Eggs were scarcer and in demand at 11c., with 12c. asked, but had to move at that. Chickens, old hens, roosters and turkey-gobblers were in good supply. Chickens and hens went slowly at 40c. to 50c. Gobblers not wanted; but good plump turkeys, not large, will sell readily at 60c. to 75c. The other sort had better be held for a colder season. Fresh meat in poor supply. Lamb would sell readily but is not offering. Veal is slow at 5c. Wednesday's market was poorly attended. Several loads of potatoe were offered, but were difficult to move at 30c. per bag. Butter, in fair supply, was slow, at 12c. to 15c. Eggs light; supply steady at 11c. Green peas made their first appearance on the market, and sold at 30c. per peck. In grain wheat advanced 2 or 3 cents. Sold at $1.14. Oats scarcer. Sold at 35c. Wool was slightly higher here; 23c. to 23c. being paid; but at the extreme figure it gets well culled, so it cannot be given as a fair quotation.

"CROWN JEWEL FLOUR"

NOTICE.

This Flour is made of No. 1 Hard Wheat by the new process, combined with the best methods and machinery in operation in the best Hungarian Mills, and will produce from 20 to 40 pounds more Bread per Barrel than the best superior wheat Flour. Therefore, the first cost though higher, is fully compensated in the increased yield of Bread as well as being a much better quality and more nutritious, having a much larger percentage of gluten and less of starch than ordinary wheat Flour. To those who may not be familiar with the use of this kind of Flour, we suggest mixing it moderately soft, which will require considerably more water than ordinarily used.

KNEAD THOROUGHLY, and bake with a strong heat and in such a manner that bottom and top shall be equally well baked.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN.

The U. S. steamer Alliance has sailed for a cruise in the Arctic region.

The British Government favours a patent law similar to that of the United States, as a means of encouraging inventions.

The United States census returns will give the average of crops between the years in which the general figures are compiled, thus preventing future misunderstanding from a low or excessive yield in census years.

The Italian Ministreal franchise bill confers the right to vote on all who pay taxes to the amount of twenty lire, and can read and write. An amendment proposing a tax limit of only ten lire, was lost on a vote of 212 to 173. Italy is advancing.

The official announcement is made that the Grand Trunk Railway directors never offered to purchase one million of new ordinary stock at 28, but only had the option to buy that amount at that price. The object the Directors had in view in issuing the balance of the ordinary stock is to strengthen the position of the Company. The Company is at present in a strong financial position.

From Michigan it is reported that the prospects are poor for a yield of winter wheat in that State. The damage to the growing crops in Iowa by hail may prove quite serious, as the wheat, rye, corn, and other crops are all beaten to the ground. In a few localities, in such cases rye will, of course, be a total loss, and wheat and oats may not recover, but it is the general opinion that the corn is very little damaged. The spring wheat crops show up very fairly in most of the States.

The French Government will not recede from its position in reference to the proposed commercial treaty. By the new French tariff law it is expressly provided that all new treaties shall be based on the principle of specific as against ad valorem duties. Under this system English goods will be practically barred out of France. The English free-traders think that as a fourth of the imports of France now come from England, the people will cry out against the tariff. The manufacturers and artisans in the north continue with growing strength and energy to clamour for retaliatory duties. The agitation is spreading into the Liberal fastnesses beyond Tweed, and it has already reached London. When the Irish question is out of the way, the campaign will begin in earnest.

CANADIAN NEWS.

Stirling cricket club has beaten that of Hastings by a score of 117 to 96.

The ship labourers of Montreal are on strike

The Canadian Wimbledon team sails from Halifax for England on Saturday.

Most of the convicts who escaped from the Grand Trunk train conveying them to Kingston have been recaptured. Some of them were quite seriously injured.

A Toronto (junior) team of cricketers is being organized to visit Whitby, Port Hope, Cobourg and Peterboro'. It will probably start early in July.

The new works on the Welland Canal are nearing completion, and there is some pardonable excitement regarding the approach of the opening of the enlarged shipway.

A mare belonging to Mr. Knight, of Sidney, ran away about ten weeks ago and broke one of its ankles. The fracture was reduced, and the animal has now been sent to pasture. Operations of this kind are of rare occurrence.

Durham Rifle Association has elected officers for the year and arranged for a match early next month. The Hastings Association has got a grant of $50 from the County, and has procured a championship cup, to be competed for at fortnightly contests.

The Cannington Gleaner says:—There are rumours of wholesale bribery having been practised in Thorah and Mara during the late (Forth Ontario) election by the winning candidate or his agents. It is quite probable that the election will be protested.

Dr. Farley has been appointed physician to the Hastings County gaol. The County Council have increased the gaoler's salary $100 per annum, and appointed a caretaker of the Court House at a salary of $100 per year. The Court House is to be repaired at an expense of $500.

The Reform Association of West York, has decided to hold a Grand Reform Demonstration on the 22nd of September. A large number of the most prominent men of the Dominion are to be present, among them Messrs. Blake, McKenzie, Mowat, Ross, Hardy, and others.

The following is an official statement of the number of houses destroyed and families rendered houseless and destitude by fire on the night of the 8th of June: 642 houses; 1,211 families, consisting of 6,028 individuals. Two-thirds of the above have lost all, and had no insurance on their property.

The new postal regulations, whereby all printed matter such as insurance papers, legal briefs, deeds, etc., can only be sent by mail at letter post rates, are creating considerable discontent among parties most interested. Lawyers and insurance men complain bitterly that the rate now charged is exorbitant.

It is stated that Mr. Rogers, Syndicate Engineer, who went to explore the Howse Pass, was stopped by snow in the Selkirk range of mountains, and had to retrace his steps and break up his party. He will make another attempt to get through shortly. It is believed the effort to find a new pass will fail, and that the Yellowhead Pass must be adopted.

Says the Toronto Telegram:—"The Garter is looked upon as being the greatest prize for which a public man can strive. It is the tip-top gim-crack, so to speak. It is not given to everybody to wear a garter, although anybody that likes can wear garters, and Lord Beaconsfield only secured the honor when he came back from Berlin. It would be odd if Sir John should come back as Lord John." The odd garter, we presume.

FARMERS AND MECHANICS.—If you wish to avoid great danger and trouble, besides a no small bill of expense, at this season of the year, you should take prompt steps to keep disease from your household. The system should be cleansed, blood purified, stomach and bowels regulated, to prevent and cure diseases arising from Spring malaria. We know of nothing that will so perfectly and surely do this as Electric Bitters, and at the trifling cost of fifty cents a bottle.—Each.—Sold by all druggists.—Ex. 25-1t

The London Advertiser puts the duty-on-grain situation into a nutshell, when it says:—In 1866 wheat was sold in Canada for $1.60 a bushel. We had then free trade. Now it sells in Toronto for but $1.16—42 cents below a free trade price. Every person with sense enough to manage his own affairs knows that no amount of duty put upon American wheat can help to the extent of a cent the Canadian farmers.

The lumbermen of Ontario, without distinction of party, are said to be indignant at the Dominion Government for disallowing the river and streams bill. They regard the disallowed act as eminently just in its provisions, and wisely formed to conserve all interests. Without its protection they feel that they are at the mercy of any rival lumberman, who, having made river improvements, is disposed to take advantage of the situation.

Telegram:—If it is a fact that the Pacific Railway Syndicate intend making Montreal, and not Ottawa, Callender or Brockville their eastern terminus, it will not be a good thing for Ontario. Ontario is the milch cow of the Confederation, and will have to provide the great bulk of the twenty-five million dollars of bonus to be paid to the company. If it has to pay this money to carry trade to Montreal, instead of Toronto and other Ontario cities, it will be cutting its own throat.

WOMAN'S TRUE FRIEND.—A friend in need, is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly those complaints and weaknesses so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend, and will positively restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste, and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists. 25-1t

On the evening of Saturday, 28th May, a sensation was created at Campbellford by the shooting of Richard Bonnycastle by Dr. Pettigrew, the alleged motive being undue familiarty with the wife of the last-named. On the following Sunday the officers of the law, acting on the usual authority, arrested Dr. Pettigrew and placed him in gaol in Cobourg. Bail was offered and he was released. At the County Court and General Sessions of the Peace, in Cobourg, the prisoner was brought before the Grand Jury. There was no evidence offered by the Crown, and the accused was discharged.

The Toronto World says:—"The Midland Railway, with its western terminus on a fine harbor, will in time get a good share of the western grain trade. It affords a longer water haulage than any one of the roads by way of Sarnia, Goderich, Owen Sound or Collingwood, and it gives a more direct line of shipment to the seaboard. The Midland cannot fail to be a good feeder to the Grand Trunk. With a deep and well-protected harbor at Midland city, accessible in all kinds of weather, and with elevators at either end of the road to handle grain, the Midland is in a position to do a large and profitable business. Besides—and this is no mean factor—its business is managed by one of the shrewdest railway men in Canada."

OTONABEE.

THE COUNCIL has accepted the tender of Mr. James Shearer, to rebuild the Keene bridge, according to plan of Mr. Ranny, Architect, for $1,050, travel on said bridge to be closed for the month of September. Corporation orders have issued to Toker, & Co. $10, for printing; G. Carlisle, relief, $3.00; W. Condon, expenses connected with burial of James Sullivan, $8.90; J. Lang, expenses re Keene bridge, and Ellis suit, $4.50; Donald Chisholm, expense of burial of Alex. Chisholm, $11.00; in settlement of Ellis suit, $8.00; G. W. Ranny, $35; J. J. Landy, for gravel, $3.36; W. H. Robertson, printing, $1.00. Statute labor is allowed for extra work last year, to Alex. OBrien, 2 days; W. McDonell, 2 days; Eugene Torpie, 1 day; James Petrie, 1 day; John Lynch, 2 days; M. Sullivan, 2 days; and John Moncrief, 1½ days. The resolution of Council passed in February, making changes in certain road divisions has been presented. By by-law overseers of highways, pound keepers, and fence viewers have been appointed for the current year. The Reeve is authorized to borrow $500 from the Miller estate to pay expenses of the Ellis suit, &c. The sum of $500 is appropriated for the improvement of certain roads; also $100 to Douro boundary road, on condition that Douro expend an equal amount. Three hundred printed copies of By-law No. 463, (for preventing and removing obstructions on roads and bridges), are to be circulated.

THE COURT OF REVISION has reduced the assessment of R. Prout $30, and that of W. Learmouth, $100, and has entered the following names for assessment on Resident roll, viz:—Wm. McBride, for Harris Island, owner; Stephen Thorn, for East half of Lot 13, in the 16th Con., occupant; Thomas Thorn, for the West half of Lot 13, in the 16th Con., occupant; Donald Cameron, for East half of Lot 23, in the 1st Con., owner; Patrick McNamara, for part of Lot 32 in the 8th Con., 7 acres, owner; Robert Hull, for North East corner of Lot 16, in the 3rd Con., tenant. Additions are made to the assessment of the following parties:—James McCann, for part of West half of Lot 13, in the 6th Con., 9 acres, $300, tenant; Wm. McFarlane, for West half of Lot 4, and for Lot 5, Con. 1, Keene, instead of Late Dr. Dean, $850, Tenant; Robert Girvan, for West half of Lot 27, in the 8th Con., $1,200, Tenant. With these changes the assessment is confirmed as far as this Court is concerned.

MAN'S NOBLEST WORK.—This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest inventions are those which preserve man's health and prolong his life, and among the greatest of these is Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Its effects are truly wonderful, and hundreds are happy to-day, who once looked forward to an early grave. For Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, loss of voice, Hay Fever, Hoarseness, Croup, or any affection whatever of the Throat, Chest or Lungs, Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure. We can cheerfully recommend it to all, and can unhesitatingly say it is the only sure cure for Throat and Lung Affections. Trial bottles ten cents; regular size $1. For sale by all druggists.

LAKEFIELD.

The School estimates are $1,150.

The steamer Cruiser makes trips on Mondays, Wednesday and Friday to Stoney Lake.

Lakefield cheese-factory is in active production. The May make was sold to W. H. Wrighton, of Peterboro'?

THE COURT OF REVISION had but two appeals entered, and that of the Midland Railway was withdrawn. Joseph Trotter's assessment was reduced $200. Adjustments were also made on the roll wherever necessary owing to property changes after assessment.

A proof of Indian civilization was lately shown at Lakefield. Two dusky braves, one of whom represented himself as Dr. Oronyatekha, the other an interpreter, gave out that they were sent by Government to relieve the afflicted with "much great medicine," made at great cost, and charged for accordingly. They succeeded in selling a good many bottles of their nostrum, and the purchasers at the same time.

THE COUNCIL has declined the proposition of Douro that Lakefield should share the expense of improving the 5th line, to Youngs' Point, and declared it inadvisable to spend money on roads in other municipalities. Corporation orders have been granted in payment of accounts to the amount of $70.25, distributed as follows: Isaac Watson, wages, $13.75; Geo. Freeborn, wages, $9.50; Wm. Batton, wages, $3.50; Edward Payton, wages, $6.50; Christ. Bell, wages, $6.75; T. A. Gordon, wages, $2.00; J. Fitzgerald, wages, $2.00; R. Thaxter, wages, 50 cts.; J. C. Carveth, hire of team, $3.75; George Preston, hire of team, $17.50; John English, work on Smith street, $4.50.

As the Rev. S. W. Muxworthy is about leaving the village for his new station, his friends, to the number of one hundred or more, met in the church at the regular prayer meeting, at the close of which Mr. John Hull, on behalf of the congregation, presented him with a purse containing $67, and an address expressing appreciation of his services as a Christian minister, and testifying to his success as such, the affectionate regard in which he is held, and the regret of his flock in parting with him; also conveying their hope for his continued prosperity, and the assurance of their prayers that God's blessing may be with him. Mr. Muxworthy, in reply, said the past year had been one of the most pleasant he had ever spent in his life. He had labored hard and tried to do his duty in the fear of God; and although he had often felt wearied in the work, he had never felt tired of it. He thanked his friends for the many kind expressions contained in the address, also for so large a gift; and he would pray that all might so live on earth as to meet in heaven, never to part again. The choir then sang, "Shall we meet beyond the river," and Mr. Muxworthy closed the meeting with prayer.

ALNWICK.

(From our own Correspondent.)

IDYL-WILD was on Saturday, 18th, the resort of a large number of excursionist grangers, per steamer Fairy, from Keene. Those from Peterborough and Otonabee were prevented attending on account of logs in the river.

ANTICIPATIONS run high concerning the celebration of Dominion Day, in Tapper's woods. A grand entertainment will be held in the evening in connection with the United Temperance Association, at their Hall in Fenella.

THE FRUIT, although not injured by the late frosts, will not be quite as good a yield as last year.

THE CROPS on the south side of the lake will in all probability exceed what was for a time anticipated. A few of the farmers look for a slight deficiency in spring wheat again.

THE RICE in the lake has been favourably affected by the growth of the season and the late refreshing rains, and it has been for some time a nuisance to the sportsman.

A SERIOUS LOSS.—Mr. D. Carstairs lost a fine brood mare a few days ago, which he purchased west of Toronto last year for $350.

TELEGRAPHIC CONSOLIDATION.

(From the Monetary Times.)

The situation of affairs at the present juncture is easily understood. Many years ago the Montreal Telegraph Company adopted a maximum general rate of 25 cents for messages, irrespective of distance. For some time after the Dominion telegraph company was started this rate was maintained, and the public were well served and well satisfied. The desire to increase its patronage induced one of the companies to lower its tariff to 20 cents, and the other was, as a matter of course, forced to follow suit. Both companies kept on extending their lines, and between the increase in the cost of working them, and the reduction in the tariff, serious inroads were made in the net earnings of the lines. Ultimately the Dominion company found it expedient to lease to the American Union company, that was started as the rival of the Western Union, with which the Montreal company have long had a friendly working arrangement. When the Western Union recently absorbed the American Union, the resulting combination, without any wish or purpose to inaugurate a war of competition with the Montreal telegraph company, found itself in possession of a system of Canadian lines, and bound by an engagement to guarantee to the Dominion Company's shareholders five per cent. on their stock.

Rather than give up their friendly alliance with the Montreal telegraph company, the Western Union have assented to a working arrangement between the two Canadian companies, which the directors appear to have provisionally agreed to, and which will soon be submitted to the shareholders. This arrangement has been effected through the medium of the charter granted last session to the North-West telegraph company, empowering them to make working arrangements with lines in any part of the Dominion, in addition to those they have already acquired in the North-West. Under this charter it is proposed to operate the Montreal and Dominion lines in conjunction, not in competition; each company, however, retaining its own name and organization. It is further proposed that the consolidated concern shall be placed on the footing now occupied by the Montreal telegraph company in relation to the Western Union, and the latter company, in consideration of this arrangement, guarantees eight per cent. to the shareholders of the Montreal company, and six per cent. to those of the Dominion

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 23, 1881.

The Late Shrievalty Appointment.

The resignations of Messrs. Paxton, of North Ontario, and Springer, of North Waterloo, to accept the position of Sheriff in their respective Counties, has given rise to some discussion relative to the presumed impropriety of appointing members of Parliament to offices in the gift of the Government. It is not surprising that the Opposition press should attempt to make a point against the Mowat administration, as well as to assume an analogy between these appointments and those of Sandfield Macdonald, which were deservedly denounced by Mr. Blake as a member of the Provincial Parliament; but when we see Reform journals accept the declared analogy without examination and begin to lament what they thus take to be Liberal inconsistency, the wonder possesses us that they know no better.

In the matter of patronage it is to be expected, and it is right, that a Government should give offices to those who will with a comfortable conscience execute its measures; certainly not to those who are the opponents of those measures, and who might too easily betray the confidence reposed in them. If the present Ministers of Ontario are to be blamed in the manner in which they have distributed the patronage at their disposal, it should be because they have been too ready to confer positions on political opponents, without taking ordinary trouble to discover if there were deserving members of their own party who would accept the vacancies, and who would, while being quite as competent, be more trustworthy. Neither the hungriest Tory, nor the most conscientious Grit will attempt to argue that the Shrievalties of North Ontario and North Waterloo should have been filled by opponents of the Provincial Government. Nor will many, if any, declare that the vacancies would better have been filled by men taken from beyond the Counties. But if filled by resident Liberals at all, they must have been filled by "friends,"—strong political supporters,—of Messrs. Paxton and Springer, who for long years have been the representatives of the constituencies. And the long, strong and continued advocacy of Liberal political principles by these gentlemen, should have freed them from any imputation of adherence to their party from any such motive as the hope of reward, or that their independent action in the House was affected by the promise of office. To make such an accusation applicable, the promise must be made to date back to the first entrance of these gentlemen to the House. Nor is there any evidence to warrent the belief that, even during the last session, they had any assurance of an offer of office. The administration seems to have chosen a decent length of time after prorogation in which to make the appointments. Not so were made the appointments denounced by Mr. Blake, and sententiously defended by Sandfield Macdonald's dictum, "We must support our supporters." Then, the friends, the near relations, of members were appointed to offices to pacify the demands and allay the threats of members during the parliamentary session; and it was well known that members sat and voted in the House virtually with their appointments in their pockets, or stumped the country in support of government candidates, in personal proximity to their assured and substantial reward. Surely such cases were vastly different to those of Messrs. Paxton and Springer, with which their party, the country and the Conservative opposition as well, have every reason to be satisfied. The Mowat administration is not so weak in the House that it must buy the support of any member, much less tried adherents like Messrs. Paxton and Springer; and, if such were the case, is it likely they would open the constituencies by the appointment of the members? Assuredly not. The interests of the Government, as regards [illegible] in another way, by the appointment of their fathers, brothers, sons, nephews, &c., to offices, as has been notoriously the case recently at Ottawa, and as was flagrantly the case at Toronto, where nepotism and the open violation of the independence of the House was so scathingly rebuked by the present able leader of the opposition in the House of Commons.

In the filling of the vacant Shrievalties of Ontario and Waterloo, there has not been the least reason to suspect a particle of interference with the independence of Parliament; by the appointment of old members of the House two worthy public servants are suffered to retire to well earned ease; every shadow of nepotism is dissolved; and a chance is offered to younger men to step into the Parliamentary arena and win their spurs. If the new members for North Ontario and North Waterloo will as worthily fill the position of representatives of the constituencies, and for so long a time, they will, in their turn, have weighty claims for appointment to offices of ease and emolument.

The Fate of the N. P.

After every general election, no matter what party may have gained the victory, the country soon hears of the "reaction," which inevitably follows the excitement of the campaign. After every contest at the polls a listlessness appears to prevail upon the issues of the struggle; and the indifference is usually in direct proportion to the excitement in different persons and different localities. Those who are most eager to elect a School Trustee or Municipal Councillor on some point of local bickering are the first to fold their hands and drop the matter forever from their consideration. The Dunkin Act, a drainage measure or a bonus by-law carried, the majority immediately settles down to utter indifference as to the fulfilment of its provisions; and in such cases the actual effect depends largely on those who were accused of being lukewarm, and occasionally on the watchful care of opponents. The same "reaction" is in some sort seen in the ranks of a victorious political party, both in Provincial and Dominion elections. The cries with which the electoral gudgeon was caught are dropped; and the principles they were supposed to have embodied are forgotten or flagrantly disregarded. The consequence is that those who were deluded by such cries, and the suppositions roused in their minds by attractive watch-words, are first disgusted, then undeceived, and finally decided upon "retaliatory measures." The reaction has now set in with a vengeance; and not only do the sold ones settle down with a firm determination to avenge the deception practised upon them; they also enlist the sympathies of the hitherto indifferent, who had been puzzled into inaction by the former glittering utterances of "promising politicians." The greater the glow and glamour which preceded it, the greater will be the reaction. It is not unnatural to suppose that this tendancy on the part of the electorate will, of itself, have the effect in 1882 of easily giving to the hands of the Liberals the many constituencies captured by the Conservatives in 1878, by very narrow majorities.

With the food on which popular disgust, discontent and indignation have at present to feed the prospect of a great reverse for the Conservatives is well up among the probabilities. The lavish promises made to the people, of all ranks, have been unfulfilled, as a matter of course; and, as a matter of course, those who were deceived by them are filled with dissatisfaction. In an especial manner is this the position of the agricultural, artizan and laboring classes, to whom the "National Policy" has been worse than disappointing. Even the manufacturers, who specially exerted themselves for the Conservatives, in the hope of great gains from a protective tariff, are not satisfied as a body with the returns they have received for their support; but are continually clamouring for "better terms." The danger of giving these stays the hands of those of whom they are asked, and there is division upon division in the Protectionist camp. Giving material benefits for political support is a precarious game on any scale; but when played with so large a stake as the gross revenues of the country it becomes utterly impossible to satisfy the demands of the hosts who with united voice, but divided purpose, cry "Give! Give!" The steady policy of the Reform party, in withstanding any unnatural strain on trade by a sudden change of tariff, will commend itself even to the judgment of those who have been the largest gainers by the wholly unnecessary increase of duties by the present Government; while its embodiment of the principle of sufficient duties for necessary purposes of revenue must satisfy every Canadian that the Dominion finances will not suffer by a change of fiscal policy. Any tariff must of necessity present fewer or more numerous anomalies; but that based on revenue requirement will naturally have less than the most ingeniously contrived Protective system, which, while giving to one interest, must rob another.

As heirship robs a family to enrich a single member, so Protection handicaps all other interests in a country for the undue advancement of the one or few. Our boast has heretofore been that Canada is a country of equal rights, equal privileges, and equal chances, to all who choose to exert their energies in the struggle for wealth and position. To this wholesome proposition Protection offers a direct "Nay.', Hence, Protection is against the genius and feelings of the Canadian people, to which it must give way. That the people are awakening to the true aspects of the "N. P." is evident on all hands; for while their [illegible] unintentionally aided by their participation, its most supporters have been forced to shift their ground from time to time, and those of them who have not utterly unmasked the delusion have to abandon the role of advocates to take up that of apologists. It is becoming more and more evident that "the 'N.P.' must go."

THE BURNT RIVER BRIDGE.

At the late session of the Victoria County Council, the Warden, in his address, referred as follows to a matter in which the County of Peterborough is alleged to have considerable concern:—

The question of re-building the bridge across the Burnt river at Kinmount and the responsibility of the County of Peterboro', in relation to the work, has occupied the attention of the special committee entrusted therewith during the recess. The committee have not seen their way clear to proceed with the work, and have therefore decided to place before you the reports of the county engineer and county solicitor, so that further and more definite instructions may be given to the committee.

The committee having in hand the reply to the Warden's address dealt with this paragraph in the following terms:—

With reference to the re-erection of the bridge, over the Burnt river at Kinmount, a bridge for years used by the County of Peterborough, and one of great interest to that county, your committee have to regret that any difficulty should arise between the counties of Peterborough and Victoria in the matter. It is to be regretted that anything vague should exist in the interpretation of sections 482 to 490 of the revised statutes of Ontario on this important subject.

In the opinion of your committee the word "not" in section 482, was inserted for the purpose of giving greater effect to the liabilities of the local municipalities for the due maintainance of the public highway and the non-liability for the erection and maintainance of bridges, but does not, in the opinion of your committee, relieve counties jointly interested from the maintainance of bridges on boundaries or lines used in lieu of boundaries.

As the report of the county solicitor gives very little hope of friendly and equitable settlement in this matter with the council of the County of Peterborough, your committee beg to recommend that on the expiration of the necessary time the case be referred for the decision of his Honor the Lieut.-Governor-in-council, as provided for in section 371, of the revised statutes of this Province.

PREPARED FOR SPRING.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, and all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopess, from Brazil, acts as a gentle purgative. It is just introduced into this country. The remarkable results of a few doses are most surprising. Ask J. D. Tully or T. Rustee for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopess, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Biliousness ever introduced in this country. 44-1y

The Hastings County Council received a communication from Mr. J. W. Langmuir, Provincial Inspector of Prisons, &c., requesting the Council to raise the salary of the Gaoler from $400 to $600. The sum now paid is about one-third less than that given to a similar official in any city of the Province. The Council compromised the matter by adding $160, and the additional duties of caretaker of the Court House grounds.

The Port Hope voters' list for 1881 has not been properly filed or revised by the County Judge, so that the list of 1880, containing the assessment of 1879 will have to be used at the coming election. As the 1881 list was used at the Municipal Election last January, it is claimed that all the Councillors, except the representatives of Ward 3, who were elected by acclamation, have not been properly elected, and that therefore all the proceedings of the Council have been illegal. It is stated that some of the cow owners are going to test the legality of the Cow By-law on that point.

The report of the committee appointed to investigate irregularities in the expenditure of road grants in Emily by Thomas Stephenson, when Reeve of the township, which report has been adopted by the Victoria County Council, winds up with the statement that the investigation revealed course of conduct on Mr. Stephenson's part that is by no means creditable to him as an expender of public moneys. The fact that moneys having been paid out, vouchers taken, and a report of expenditure made by him when no work whatever had been done in several cases, reveals a condition of affairs that is contrary to all ideas of rectitude and justice, and which looks like an attempt to defraud the public.

In a time contest of firemen and engineer, with the steamer, against the hose company, of Oshawa, an even start being made, as soon as smoke was seen issuing from the steamer, the engine commenced playing with 25 lbs. of steam in five and a half minutes, and the water passed through the hose in two minutes, making 7½ minutes from the start until a good stream of water was issuing from the nozzle. The hose company started with two hose carts, five men on one, fourteen on the other; the latter first laid 500 ft., and the former met them about half way. The hose, 1,050 feet, was laid, attached to the engine, coupling made in the centre of the line and the branch put on, in 3½ minutes. The distance covered by the company in going to the water and laying the hose was about 540 yards. Considerable time was lost in getting up steam on account of the material used for firing.

"An Irishman in a letter to the Montreal Herald exposes some of the abuses to which our system of "subsidiced immigration" is subjected by Yankee agents. He says he came out on a Government assisted passage, and was surprised at being met at Point Levis by United States agents, who pressed him to cross the line and reside there. 'Because he saw some twenty individuals go to the railway offices and thus procure Government tickets for places as far west as Manitoba, who subsequently sold them to ticket scalpers and then went to the States, he thinks the Canadian Government must be "very careless about obtaining immigrants," and it seems as if he were right. Though he informed the Minister of Agriculture, on his arrival at Montreal, of this state of things, the department was indifferent to his advice and virtually took no notice of the injustice.

The Lindsay Post says:—It is expected that Toronto business men will find it to their interest to have a connection with the Midland via the Nipissing Railway. The Nipissing is to widen its guage early in the fall, and has now purchased in England the requisite steel rails. Two new steel rails will be laid as far as Woodville, on the standard guage, and one of the present rails will be left for the use of the narrow guage rolling stock, and for the Lake Simcoe Junction and Coboconk sections. This will give not merely through lumber, grain and passenger trains from Midland to Toronto; but will lead to the establishment of a new eastern trunk line for passengers through the interior of the Province. The early construction of the section between Omemee and Peterborough, will enable the two companies to run trains from Toronto via Woodville and Lindsay to Peterborough, and perhaps further east.

Mr. Holden, Managing Director of the Whitby, Port Perry and Lindsay Railway, has been addressing the Ontario County Council on railway matters. The history of the Pacific Junction, its enforced abandonment after the formation of the Canadian Pacific Syndicate, and the adoption of the Sault Ste. Marie line, and the effect of that policy were all brought out with extreme clearness. The changes that had taken place and were likely to take place were all favorable to the County of Ontario. He referred to the efforts of the Syndicate and the Grand Trunk to obtain control of the small Ontario lines, but no matter which of these large and wealthy corporations controlled them, or whether either did or not, the favorable position of the County of Ontario was such as could not be overlooked. He gave credit to the Ontario Government for giving aid—the same aid that would have gone to build one hundred miles of road from Gravenhurst—to the building of 450 miles to the Sault—opening up so much more new territory, developing the trade and opening up the public lands for settlement. The prospects of the Ontario and Quebec line, which he said had killed off the Toronto and Ottawa, were referred to, and its probable location through the county mapped out. The recent sale of the Victoria line, the leasing of the Grand Junction by the Midland through the Grand Trunk, and the probable effect of these new arrangements were briefly passed in review.

DUMMER.

The Court of Revision has made the following changes in the assessment roll: John Gay put on in place of Charles Kilbank, for W. ½ lot 2, con. 12, and the land reduced $100. Lot 27, con. 12, taken from N. R. roll and placed to Geo. Grant, on resident roll. Thomas Webster's personal property reduced $30. Erwin Rorabeck's personal property of $160, struck off on his affidavit, that he did not own the chattels assessed. Robt. Bullock put on for lot 17, con. 1, in place of Wm. John Bullock, and the land reduced $200. Henry Myers put on in place of William Kidd, for lot C., west of South street, Warsaw. Forty-nine acres of the W. ½ lot 10, con. 7, taken from N. R. roll, and placed to David Kelly.

The Council has made an appropriation of $20, for boundary between Dummer and Asphodel, $45 of which is to be expended opposite the first 6 concessions, under Thomas Webster as Commissioner, and the Council of Asphodel is requested to meet Dummer with such an appropriation for said boundary as they deem fair and just. The Clerk is instructed to give a statement of the statute labor put on boundary to Douro Council; to put statute labor at the rate of 1 day for 80 cents against the parties who purchased timber off the road allowances in 1880, and were to pay for it in labor on the roads; to employ F. W. Wilkins, P. L. S., to locate the sideroad between lots 25 and 26 in 7th con., and request him to apply to Mr. Dean for instructions. A former motion of Council, allowing Alex. Waite to enclose that part of the boundary opposite his land on east part lot 12, con. 1, between Dummer and Douro, is rescinded; and the Clerk is instructed to give the legal notices that at a meeting to be held in the Town and Agricultural Hall, Warsaw, on the 12th of August next, the Council intends passing a by-law, for the stopping up and selling of a certain road on part of lot 12, con. 1, Dummer, leading from boundary to Peterborough road. Alexander Gardner is appointed collector for 1880, at a salary of $45. The Clerk is instructed to notify the Trustees concerned, that at the earliest time possible, the Council intends passing a by-law to detach the S. ½ lot 8, con. 1, from S. S. No. 1, and attaching the same to S. S. No. 3. Orders were granted:—To Samuel S. Spence, salary as assessor $40; Joseph Rusaw, for land for road $5; John Bertram, account $3.95. The Council adourned till the first Friday after the June session of the County Council.

EMILY.

The Court has appointed John Sanderson to the charge of the road between lots 4 and 5, con. 4, to Mrs. McGinty's corner, and Michael Mulcahey, pathmaster on road-division 38, instead of Patrick Flynn. The fence is to be moved off the road allowance opposite the north end of lot 7, con. 8. Township orders are granted in payment of the bills of John Calder, $6.46, and Edward Flood, $4 20.

The Court of Revision is called for Dominion Day.

THE GRAND JUNCTION.

The Monetary Times is, on the whole, favorably impressed with the new arrangement under which the Grand Junction is now being operated. It says: Under the new management the Grand Junction will have more resources at its command, and be in a better position to serve the public. The deficiencies in rolling stock and other particulars will require to be made good; and when this is done the road may be expected to serve the purpose which those who contributed towards the funds for its construction had in view. The Grand Junction and the Midland were competing lines, to some extent, when worked separately; but they will cease to be so now that they are placed under a single management. In this aspect, the public cannot gain, and may lose, by what seems a practical amalgamation. Mr. Cox, however, is a shrewd railway man, and will not be likely to do anything that might cause that public dissatisfaction which often leads to the construction of new rival lines. The Grand Junction is to be at once pushed on, we understand, to Omemee.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

The Hastings County Council received a communication from Mr. J. W. Langmuir, Provincial Inspector of Prisons, &c., requesting the Council to raise the salary of the Gaoler from $400 to $600. The sum now paid is about one-third less than that given to a similar official in any city of the Province. The Council compromised the matter by adding $160, and the additional duties of caretaker of the Court House grounds.

At the Victoria General Sessions of the Peace, Wm. John Ferguson was found guilty of procuring noxious drugs to be administered to Elizabeth Ann Sutherland, with the intention to procure abortion. The Port Hope voters' list for 1881 has not been properly filed or revised by the County Judge, so that the list of 1880, containing the assessment of 1879 will have to be used at the coming election. As the 1881 list was used at the Municipal Election last January, it is claimed that all the Councillors, except the representatives of Ward 3, who were elected by acclamation, have not been properly elected, and that therefore all the proceedings of the Council have been illegal. It is stated that some of the cow owners are going to test the legality of the Cow By-law on that point.

The report of the committee appointed to investigate irregularities in the expenditure of road grants in Emily by Thomas Stephenson, when Reeve of the township, which report has been adopted by the Victoria County Council, winds up with the statement that the investigation revealed course of conduct on Mr. Stephenson's part that is by no means creditable to him as an expender of public moneys. The fact that moneys having been paid out, vouchers taken, and a report of expenditure made by him when no work whatever had been done in several cases, reveals a condition of affairs that is contrary to all ideas of rectitude and justice, and which looks like an attempt to defraud the public.

In a time contest of firemen and engineer, with the steamer, against the hose company, of Oshawa, an even start being made, as soon as smoke was seen issuing from the steamer, the engine commenced playing with 25 lbs. of steam in five and a half minutes, and the water passed through the hose in two minutes, making 7½ minutes from the start until a good stream of water was issuing from the nozzle. The hose company started with two hose carts, five men on one, fourteen on the other; the latter first laid 500 ft., and the former met them about half way. The hose, 1,050 feet, was laid, attached to the engine, coupling made in the centre of the line and the branch put on, in 3½ minutes. The distance covered by the company in going to the water and laying the hose was about 340 yards. Considerable time was lost in getting up steam on account of the material used for firing.

"An Irishman in a letter to the Montreal Herald exposes some of the abuses to which our system of "subsidised immigration" is subjected by Yankee agents. He says he came out on a Government assisted passage, and was surprised at being met at Point Levis by United States agents, who pressed him to cross the line and reside there. 'Because he saw some twenty individuals go to the railway offices and then procure Government tickets for places as far west as Manitoba, who subsequently sold them to ticket scalpers and then went to the States, he thinks the Canadian Government must be "very careless about obtaining immigrants," and it seems as if he were right. Though he informed the Minister of Agriculture, on his arrival at Montreal, of this state of things, the department was indifferent to his advice and virtually took no notice of the injustice.

The Lindsay Post says:—It is expected that Toronto business men will find it to their interest to have a connection with the Midland via the Nipissing Railway. The Nipissing is to widen its guage early in the fall, and has now purchased in England the requisite steel rails. Two new steel rails will be laid as far as Woodville, on the standard guage, and one of the present rails will be left for the use of the narrow guage rolling stock, and for the Lake Simcoe Junction and Coboconk sections. This will give not merely through lumber, grain and passenger trains from Midland to Toronto; but will lead to the establishment of a new eastern trunk line for passengers through the interior of the Province. The early construction of the section between Omemee and Peterborough, will enable the two companies to run trains from Toronto via Woodville and Lindsay to Peterborough, and perhaps further east.

Mr. Holden, Managing Director of the Whitby, Port Perry and Lindsay Railway, has been addressing the Ontario County Council on railway matters. The history of the Pacific Junction, its enforced abandonment after the formation of the Canadian Pacific Syndicate, and the adoption of the Sault Ste. Marie line, and the effect of that policy were all brought out with extreme clearness. The changes that had taken place and were likely to take place were all favorable to the County of Ontario. He referred to the efforts of the Syndicate and the Grand Trunk to obtain control of the small Ontario lines, but no matter which of these large and wealthy corporations controlled them, or whether either did or not, the favorable position of the County of Ontario was such as could not be overlooked. He gave credit to the Ontario Government for giving aid—the same aid that would have gone to build one hundred miles of road from Gravenhurst—to the building of 450 miles to the Sault—opening up so much more new territory, developing the trade and opening up the public lands for settlement. The prospects of the Ontario and Quebec line, which he said had killed off the Toronto and Ottawa, were referred to, and its probable location through the county mapped out. The recent sale of the Victoria line, the leasing of the Grand Junction by the Midland through the Grand Trunk, and the probable effect of these new arrangements were briefly passed in review.

The Court of Revision has made the following changes in the assessment roll: John Gay put on in place of Charles Kilbank, for W. ½ lot 2, con. 12, and the land reduced $100. THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 23, 1881.

East Durham.

The contest for the seat in the Ontario Legislature left vacant by the death of the member for East Durham is drawing to a close; and next Wednesday the issue will be decided by the electors at the polls. Both parties are apparently working hard for the victory. The union of the Liberals upon Mr. Russell as their candidate is an encouraging sign; and with thorough organization for bringing out the full party vote there is reason to hope that he will be elected in preference to Dr. Brereton, the Opposition candidate. The charges of extravagance against the Mowat Administration with which Dr. Brereton and his supporters set out, have failed in their effect, owing to the knowledge on the part of the electors of the wise disposition made of the public funds, which as an idle surplus under the old Coalition government, were doing no good whatever to the Province to which they belonged, and for the benefit of which it is right they should be used. Outside of the outlays for works concurred in even by the Opposition in the House the charges on revenue for the maintainence of government have been far below those of any other Province in the Dominion. The people have simply accepted and enjoyed the benefits arising from their own money; and the wisdom of the course pursued is but exemplified by the proud position which Ontario holds as the most progressive and prosperous of the provinces which form the Canadian Confederation; and that, too, in spite of the burdens imposed upon her by Tory majorities in the House of Commons. Failing in their attempted misrepresentation of Provincial finances the Conservative speakers in East Durham have of late almost confined their labors to the raising of a sectarian issue in connection with the Orange Bills. Without explaining that these measures were usually for the purpose of giving the property of Orange Lodges into the hands, and consequent control, of certain officers of the Grand Lodge, the impression is sought to be left that they were defeated by Reform majorities out of simple opposition to the Orange body. This, however, is not the case; and in dealing with any similar Bill, on its merits, the Orangemen of East Durham will certainly have more to hope from in Mr. Russell, an independent supporter of the Government, than in Dr. Brereton, an avowed opponent. Likewise in other matters; for it will be remembered that the good claimed to have been accomplished for the constituency by its present member in the Commons was at a time when he was a supporter of the Mowat Government's policy. Even the late genial member in the Provincial House gave a fair measure of support to the Mowat Administration; as Dr. Brereton, notwithstanding his billigerent breathings, would be forced to do also, were he by election next Wednesday, forced to choose between the demands of his chief supporters and those of conscientious devotion to the interest of his county and country.

JUST RECEIVED.—New Black Cashmeres, Black Bunting Prints, New Tapestry Carpets, and Lace Curtains, New Boots and Shoes, also a splendid lot of New Tweed Suits for men and boys. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 20-tf

A Napanee Nursling.

The Napanee Standard calls our attention to the window-glass factory of that town, as an industry which owes its existence to the N. P. That is to say, it could not exist were it not for money placed directly in the hands of its propriety by fiscal regulation. Whence comes this money? Out of the pockets of the whole Canadian people, who are forced to pay 20 per cent. more for a necessity in every household, that one or two men, or a small company, at Napanee may get larger returns, from a concern, which they, admittedly, have not the business capacity to carry on without such a subsidy. And probably not with it; for a lack of the natural ability to conduct a business can never be made up by help from the "old man's" purse, or the national exchequer. The infantile weakness which depends for existance on pap cannot be expected to endure the rough realities of commercial competition, and if the Napanee window-glass factory rests its existence on nothing more tough and substantial than a twenty per cent. duty, its prospects are as brittle as its proposed product.

We do not feel assured that the concern in question is in reality the weak offspring of a degenerate politico-commercial system. We have only the Standard's assertion for it, as well as for the declaration that, but for Sir Tilley's help at the accouchment, the conception would have resulted in "bald lunacy." It is possible that the lunacy, as well as baldness of results, may yet appear, owing to the fact that the child's parents did it a very ill turn in burdening it, before it can yet walk, with shackles upon its limbs, in the shape of a duty on its machinery greater than that which ostensibly assists its efforts, and in making dear its necessary food and coal, which comes from the United States enhanced in price by a duty of 50 cents per ton. As the 125 factories in the neighbouring republic do not suffer from these causes, we cannot see that the twenty per cent. import duty is so great a kindness after all. But it may be gratifying to the dry nurses of the Napanee infant prodigy, to learn that some of the United States protected window-light factories have been forced to shut down; perhaps from fear of the coming Canadian giant. We do not know that Napanee is better situated for glass manufacturing than those places in which the fires of glass furnaces are being put out. Indeed we have an idea that the circumstances are less favourable to it. It may be in view of these matters that the concern is asking from Napanee a bonus of five thousand dollars; but may we not entertain the suspicion that the hope of such a local subsidy had something to do with the existence of this grand enterprise at that place.

As to the impossibility of the existence of such a concern before the N. P. was promulgated being just as feasible as it is now, with the added burdens imposed, we have some recollection that a glass-factory did previously exist in Canada; if not for the manufacture of window-lights, at least for articles equally difficult to make. That it went under is no proof that the present bottle-fed thing at Napanee will not do likewise, unless it gets further help, governmental and municipal, to prolong its existence. Other concerns similar to the cement works and woollen mill, mentioned by the Standard, did certainly exist, and prospered, prior to 1878. That these industries at Napanee do not owe their existance to the N. P. can be testified to by the tax-payers of the town, who have only to look at their assessment notices for the reminder that they pay the taxes of one and help to contribute four thousand dollars to the other.

These are only instances of the frauds being perpetrated on a long-suffering public by the payment of protective duties and municipal bonuses for the object of spreading manufactures in the country; wherein the true effect is an interference with the natural current of trade, a primary loss to the whole people for the enrichment of a few strengthening monopolists, and a secondary sacrifice by the withdrawal of money from legitimate enterprises, to be sunk in wild experiments, the most of which must of necessity come to grief, and their capital be hopelessly sunk, or fall into the hands of the people-plundering monopolies.

Editorial Notes.

THE COUNTY of Middlesex, for abolishing road tolls, and the city of London, for doing away with market fees, are being warmly commended on all sides. It is a good application of the principle of local option in the direction of free trade.

THERE is evidently a feeling among Tory M. P's at Ottawa, that their Parliamentary career will not be long; and, as rats leave a sinking ship, they are procuring superannuations of officials and thus making room for their own appointment to the vacant places.

TWO JOURNALISTS from Toledo, Ohio, have taken hold of the St. Thomas Journal—E. E. Sheppard, late of the Telegram, and W. R. Westlake, late of the Blade. The Journal is a good property, and, in the hands of two live newspaper men, will undoubtedly become better.

THE BELLEVILLE Intelligencer is wildly indignant, and heaps up columns of abuse of the Ontario Government, because the Inspector of Prisons, under Sec. 440, Cap. 174, R. S. O., required the increase of the salary of Hastings County Gaoler from $400 to $600. For a County of the criminal importance of Hastings, including in it the City of Belleville, $600 a year to an efficient gaoler is surely not too much.

THE PEEL COUNTY COUNCIL has asked the co-operation of other counties in declaring against the continuance of Upper Canada College. No doubt it will find many to follow its lead, without any particular consideration of what is to be done with the institution if its use as a Government school is to be abruptly ended. That is the chief difficulty with which the Government and the House of Assembly will have to deal in connection with the College, at the next session of Parliament.

IT WAS THE PROPHESY of some alarmist that Sunday last would end the easy career of "this terrestrial ball," which would be jerked clear out of its orbit. But from outward appearances no one would have known that at three o'clock in the morning all the planets, Uranus alone excepted, were arrayed in conjunction with the sun and moon against our little earth, or that directly in range with these planets was Alcyone, or eta Taura, the central star of the Pleiades, said to be the grand centre of the universe of worlds, and considered by some the location of the heavenly Paradise. The crisis is past; the Earth was "solid" for the occasion; and the nervous ones again breathe freely.

SIR HECTOR LANGEVIN, Minister of Public Works, visited Cobourg on Saturday last, to inspect the harbour there, which it is proposed to make a harbour of refuge. When the Conservatives of Cobourg heard he was coming, one of them, the Mayor, called a meeting of the Council and Commissioners, to arrange for a public reception to the distinguished visitor, and as a mark of respect to his public position to make him the guest of the town. There was to be no party display about this; but merely a recognition of the high official position held by Sir Hector. But when the public reception had been nicely arranged, at the public charge, the Tories then came forward with their little plan of presenting the latest Ministerial Knight with an address by the Conservative Association, in the evening, in order to give him a chance to make a political and party speech. The bad taste in which the whole small game was conceived did not deter the true followers of the hero of the $32,000 from thus getting up a party demonstration at the expense of the whole town, Liberals and Tories alike; nor was it to be expected that the pocketer of Sir Hugh Allan's dollars, would, on his part, object to this "spoiling of the Egyptians." The whole affair is entirely worthy of the plotters and their guest.

THE ELECTIONS in Pictou and Colchester have resulted in the return of the Conservative candidates. This has been heralded by the Ministerial press with great rejoicings, proportionate, no doubt, to the fears which before the event oppressed the minds of the Government's following. In the very centre of the coal industry, to which is given fifty cents per ton on its product, at the expense of the whole remaining population of the Dominion; in the midst of the iron industry, similarly subsidised; and in the face of all the influence which two governments could bring to bear on the vote, there is not so much of a triumph, after all, in retaining the party hold on these two constituencies. Particularly is this the case when the majorities are considered. In 1878 Pictou went Conservative by a majority of 316, and a few months later returned Mr. Macdonald by acclamation. Now it gives Mr. McDougall a majority of 208. Colchester in 1878 gave a Conservative majority of 376; now of but a trifle more, even though the candidate had the prestige of a Cabinet portfolio. Such a result, despite the efforts of Ministers and manufacturers, leaves the margin a narrow one for Tory pangs of triumph, and the attempt to sing them only shows upon what small mercies the Protectionists are willing to base loud strains of thankfulness.

J. B. Trayes, of the Port Hope Times, was in town on Tuesday.

TEAS! TEAS!
CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries,
SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and
THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes o adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:
Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald. Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

The Council for the County of Peterborough met on Tuesday afternoon at 2, p.m., there being present, M. Sanderson, Esq., Warden, in the chair, and Messrs. Auld, Golborne, Fitzgerald, Strickland, Burnham, Oliver, McCarty, Moloney, Collins, Pearce, McCliggott, Mansfield and Brown.

The minutes of the last day of the last session were read and confirmed, and the Warden read the following

ADDRESS:

GENTLEMEN,—I take pleasure in meeting you again, and congratulate you upon the promising state of the growing crops.

The June session being the most important meeting of the year, in which is performed the equalization of the assessment rolls, at all times one of the most important duties of the Council, I hope that it will be carefully attended to.

In the matter of supplying prisoners with food, acting on the recommendation of the Finance Committee, I advertised for tenders for good supplies in terms of the prison regulations. Only one tender was received, and that for meat, and no tender for the other food required. I therefore gave instructions that the furnishing of the provisions for the gaol be continued as heretofore for the present. It will be for you to decide what course is to be adopted for the future.

In the matter of repairs of the Otonabee and Locks Bridges, the Joint Committe of the Town and County met and advertised for tenders and awarded work on both bridges. The County Engineer will report to you on the progress of the work. The Committee also arranged for the planting of the trees in the Court House Park.

In accordance with the instructions of your by-law of last session that I should enquire whether the County of Peterboro' was liable for the repairs or construction of the Kinmount bridge; in company with Mr. Belcher, County Engineer, I visited Kinmount and made a survey of that part of the townships of Galway and Somerville, and found that the Burnt River, over which the bridge is situated, does not run through any part of the County of Peterborough; so much for that we are not liable according to statute. I have referred the case of the Kinmount bridge to Mr. James Dennistoun for advice. He advised me that we are not liable. His opinion will be laid before you.

In January last a resolution was passed by the Council instructing me to have an examination of the Lakefield bridge in company with Mr. Belcher, who inspected the same, and his report of such inspection will be laid before you.

On the same day we also visited Young's Point and Burleigh bridges. We found Young's Point all right. The Burleigh bridge will require tightening up. The bolts on the truss, and the bridge known as Avery's will require some new covering.

I examined the Buckhorn bridge, which requires a good deal of new planking, the iron rods tightened up, and some other repairs.

I also examined the Mud Lake bridge. There are some pieces of the railing broken off and the boom disconnected in several places, which will need repairing.

In the matter of the Grand Junction R'y., there is nothing new to report, as the Judges in the Court of Appeal have not given any decision in the case.

The estimates of the year and a statement of the assets and liabilities will be laid before you.

In the matter of the Trent Valley Canal, the persistent efforts of the Committee and Members of Parliament and others who have taken a warm interest in the scheme have succeeded so far that an appropriation of $8,000 has been placed in the estimates for a preliminary survey.

When the Council was in session last January it was moved by Mr. Stewart, seconded by Mr. Lang, and resolved,—"That a name a Committee to draft a memorial to the Minister of Education praying that the matter of Agricultural Instruction in schools be brought before the Legislature with a view of having this subject included in the programme of our Public and High Schools." Owing to the fact that this matter was only introduced on the last day of the session no opportunity was afforded to carry out the intention of the resolution. I therefore now nominate Messrs. Burnham, Collins, Lang, Moloney and Stewart, as a Committee to draft such memorial.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

M. SANDERSON,
Warden.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Rorke, the Warden's address was referred to a special Committee, composed of Messrs. Burnham, Strickland, Lang, Rorke, Moloney, Golborne, and the mover and seconder, to report to the Council in the morning.

The Council then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.

The Council met in session at 10 a.m., all the members being present.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Rorke, the Special Committee, to whom was referred the Warden's Address, reported as follows:—

1st.—That the conduct of the Warden with reference to supplying the Prisoners with food, be approved; and that the Clerk be instructed to forward a copy of that portion of the Warden's Address relating to this matter to the Inspector of Prisons.

2nd.—That the action of the Warden with reference to the Kinmount Bridge, it being in accordance with the advice of Mr. Jas. Dennistoun, be approved.

3rd.—That those portions of the Warden's Address relating to roads and bridges be referred to the Committee on Roads and Bridges.

4th.—Your Committee are pleased to learn that an appropriation has been made for the survey of the Trent Valley Canal route, and that the survey is about to be commenced by the Dominion Government.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. B. PEARCE, Chairman.

County Council Chamber,
Peterborough, June 21st, 1881.

The report on motion was received and adopted.

A petition was read from Wm. Anderson and others, of Belmont.

Moved by Mr. Brown, seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That the petition of William Anderson and eighty-eight others, residents of the township of Belmont, with reference to the establishment of the boundary line between the counties of Peterborough and Northumberland, opposite the 6th and 7th concessions of Belmont and the township of Seymour, be referred to the Committee on Petitions.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned into Committee, and remained discussing different portions throughout the day.

THE NEW NORTH-WEST.

A LETTER FROM FORT MCLEOD.

The following letter has been received by Mr. J. H. Walton, of Smith, from Mr. William Graham, formerly of Peterborough:—

I have made up my mind to try my luck here, in farming, and, if you will send me four or five pounds of your Russian White Wheat, I will deem it a great favour. The wheat that is sown here, comes from Montana, and is mixed so that you cannot tell what kind it is. If you think there is any better variety, be kind enough to send it; and as soon as possible, for I intend to sow it this fall. The wet season is expected soon. This is a very healthy country. In fact, you never see anyone with coughs and colds, as usual in Ontario; although we have to rough it pretty well. But the dry atmosphere is everything. You can stand cold much better. The land is splended and yields good crops of wheat, barley, oats and potatoes; but as yet there is a great deal of bad farming. Now settlers break their land and sow it the same season, when it should have time to rot and be cross-ploughed. I am satisfied now that stock-raising is the thing for a man who has means. I have watched a band of cattle all winter and spring, belonging to Mr. McFarlane. He milks alone thirty cows and had about that many calves (skim milk.) Here the climate is cold, the thermometer sometimes ranging as low as forty-six below zero, in the early part of winter; but there is what is called a chinook wind, which comes and takes the snow off nearly as fast as if it was placed in a hot oven. The wind comes over the Rocky Mountains from the Pacific, and appears to extend from about the boundary line (about fifty miles south of this) to Red Deer River, that is:—a distance of about two hundred and fifty miles; and then east about two hundred miles. This is as fine a stock-raising country as exists anywhere. This spring, my first here, there has been splendid weather since about the middle of February. I sowed some wheat for Mr. McFarlane, on the 23rd of March; and it could have been sowed ten days earlier. It was up early in April, and looks well, although we have had no rain since. In fact, the grass ripens into hay standing, and cattle have all they want. I weighed the kidney fat from a three-year-old heifer, killed in the middle of April, and it weighed twenty-five pounds, though she never was fed a mouthful by hand. I think this is going to be the country.

THE COBOURG HARBOUR OF REFUGE.

VISIT OF THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Sir Hector Langevin, Minister of Public Works, arrived at Cobourg on Saturday morning, and was met at the station by Mayor Unwesley and the members of the Council. After a visit to the Mayor's house the Minister drove to the Town Hall, where he was met by a number of prominent citizens and presented with an illuminated address, in which special reference was made to the desirability of completing the harbour works. In reply Sir Hector said that this was his first visit to Cobourg as a Minister of the Crown. The harbour works had been initiated while he was Minister of Public works, and if all that had been said to him since then as to the necessity for completing the works was well founded, he was afraid that if he had done something in the past in that direction he would require to do more in the future.

A visit was then made to the harbour, which was duly inspected. The Minister expressed himself as well pleased with the progress of the work now going on. The construction of the harbour will cost $80,000, of which the town has paid one-third and the Government will bear the expense of the other two-thirds. When the cribwork is completed it will form a basin of about 60 acres, with an entrance 400 feet wide, a depth at the mouth of 28 feet, and an average depth throughout of 21 feet.

After the inspection the Minister was entertained to dinner at the Arlington, and when the cloth was removed several toasts were proposed and responded to.

Messrs. Routh & Co's woollen mill and Mr. Crossen's car works were afterwards visited by Sir Hector, and at the latter an address of welcome was presented to him by the workmen. In the evening Sir Hector addressed a large meeting in the Victoria Opera House on public affairs, when an address was presented to him by the Liberal Conservative Association. He drove to the railway station accompanied by a large torchlight procession and a band of music, and left at ten o'clock by the train for the east.

DESPERATE DARING OF CONVICTS.

SEVEN OF THEM JUMP FROM A RAILWAY TRAIN.

On Friday morning thirty-three convicts from the St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary were placed on board a second-class Grand Trund Railway car to be transferred to the Penitentiary at Kingston. They were heavily ironed, with shackles rivited on both hands and feet, and were in charge of chief-keeper Cooper and five guards. At Montreal they began trying to break their fetters, but did not succeed in doing so. A little below Morrisburg one of the lot, who had very small hands, managed to slip the wristlets, which were of the old-fashioned type, but before he could get away he was caught, and secured with a pair of ratchet handcuffs. But though he was a small man he broke the new handcuffs in a second, and sprang out of the window. The train was stopped, and two guards chased him for half a mile, but they failed to catch him. By the time the train had reached Brockville four more had escaped, and the utmost confusion prevailed. A guard stood at each door of the car, and Mr. Cooper and the other three guards vainly tried to obtain control of the lawless gang. The prisoners wrenched the small brass bolts out of the window-fastenings, and using these for punches, and pulling off their shoes and using them for hammers, they knocked the rivets out of their shackles and fetters at a rapid rate, and then, as fast as opportunities offered, they flung themselves from the car windows while the train was going at full speed.

Between Brockville and Kingston two more jumped off, making seven escapes in all. The train was not stopped, as there were then over a dozen who were entirely free from irons, and only awaited an opportunity to jump. These, however, were landed in safety, and with the others lodged in the Penitentiary at Kingston.

The sentences of the convicts ranged from two to seven years. The irons were all of the old style, and rivetted on hands and legs. Mr. Cooper and some of the guards were slightly injured in their struggles with the convicts, but none of them received anything worse than a few bruises and scratches.

G. A. Dixon Frankville, Ont., says:—"He was cured of Chronic Bronchitis that troubled him for seventeen years by the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil."

THE HON. Edward Blake declined the dinner proffered him by a number of his friends in Quebec, on the ground that he would rather see subscribers to the dinner fund engaged in relieving the distress of those made homeless by the fire in that city than doing honor to him. The course taken by the honorable gentleman is a most creditable one.

FROM P. GUITTE, formely Proprietor of the Courier de St. Hyacinthe, Canada. "Several months since my daughter, ten years of age, was taken with whooping cough in a very aggrivated form, and nothing we could do for her seemed in any way to relieve her suffering. We at length decided to try a bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. It three hours after she had commenced using it, she was greatly relieved, and in less than three days was entirely cured, and is now well. I have since recommended the Balsam to many of my neighbors, who have used it, and in no case have I known it to fail of effecting a speedy cure."

50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by dealers generally.

The coughing and wheezing of persons troubled with bronchitis or the asthma is excessively harrassing to themselves and annoying to others. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil obviates all this entirely, safely and speedily.

Peterborough Markets.

PETERBOROUGH, June 23, 1881.

During the week receipts of grain have been light. Wheat continues firmer at $1.14 to $1.16. Oats steady, selling at 35c.; receipts light. Peas, steady, at about 65c.; small receipts. Rye and Barley, none offering. On the market there is not much doing. Eggs, firmer, and higher, selling from 12c. to 12½c. Butter, in better demand, at 12c. to 15c.; not quite so plentiful. In fresh meat there is nothing doing. Veal is about the only sort offering, and sells rather slowly at 5c. Poultry is plentiful for the season; a good deal of it not desirable; prices unchanged. Potatoes not so plentiful, but enough offering to fully supply the demand; they are rather better in price, bringing 30c. to 35c. per bag. Wool is moving slowly, selling at about 22c. The wool market in the United States has improved, and some grades have advanced; but coarse combings, such as we have in Canada, remain neglected. Apples are scarce, and will bring $1.25 per bag. Strawberries are plentiful and cheaper, selling from 10c. to 12½c. per quart. M. A. Carten is offering very fine ones at 10c. per quart.

CHEESE SALES.—At the cheese market last Thursday the make of Vereham and Downeyville factories, for May and up to June 10, sold to W. H. Wrighton at $8.60. The Otonabee Union Factory's make of 160 boxes sold to Geo. Grimson (of Hodgins & Son., Belleville) at $8.80. The same agent also bought on p. t. the cheese of Lewis Davis and part of the make of another factory, making his whole purchase about a car-load. The product of the North Dummer and Lakefield factories, and part of that of the Selwyn factory, was out of the market, W. H. Wrighton having bought it before on p. t. Another cheese market will be held next Thursday.

TO LIVE.

It is to bid the waking world good morning;
To say good night when evening drapes the earth;
To toil with brain and hand for gold and honor,
For some of these besides the household hearth.

It is to gaddle the specs of little children;
With strength, true arm to shield the aged form;
To kneel and pray, to twine the bridal roses;
To fold away the garments of the dead.

It is to walk abroad when leaves are starting;
To hear the birds sing,—tread the garden path;
To sow the seed and gather in the harvests;
To look on fields all rich with aftermath;

To feed the hungry, give the cup of water;
To break some chain and help some soul go free;
To mind our duties and to see them vanish;
To wonder when our ships will cross the sea.

It is to hunger with the heart, and, asking
For wine, get gall; for bread receive a stone;
It is to know that somewhere 'neath God's heaven
A loving, faithful heart is all one's own.

It is to sorrow, to sing, to serve, and never,
Even when patience its fair best has wrought,
To find the song, the subject, or the picture,
So fair, so true, so purging as the thought.

To live! It is to love, to long, to suffer;
To search for truth, to expend our souls for truth;
To look, to win, and sometimes win in losing,
And oftimes find our winning is but loss.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

Farm Hints.

MILLET.—Millet is a rapid and rank grower, and produces large quantities of green food, hay or seed; it may be sown in drills or broadcast. If sown broadcast for hay, 40 qts. of seed per acre will be required, but if in drills for seed, 8 to 10 qts. will be sufficient. It requires a dry, rich and finely pulverised soil, though it will grow on light, thin land, but like cereals, it does not so remunerative. The sowing should not be done until the weather is warm, say from the 15th of June until 15th of July. It ripens in 60 or 75 days if the weather is favourable. Frequently clover and grass become partially winter-killed, but whether they may be profitably left for meadow purposes is not always discernable until it is too late to prepare the ground for a cereal crop; if the grass or clover does not come up to the desired standard, after sufficient time has been allowed, if plowed up and the land well cultivated, a profitable crop of millet may be grown. A farmer who has grown millet each season for over twenty years, says, "It is ready to cut for hay as soon as it is evenly headed out. The development of the heads can be watched, and as soon as they exhibit a tendency to develop into the milk stage, cut immediately. The mistake is too often made of delaying the cutting until the seed has hardened, and of course the fibre of the stalk has become toughened. It is taken on a more unsuitable nature, and has as a consequence lost largely its feed value. Cut in the beginning of the milk stage of the seed. Well cured millet is superior to timothy, not only as a feed, but also in milk-producing qualities, and with no other hay can one come so near making butter having a June aroma in March and April, as with early-cut millet."

Clean grooming, with an occasional washing, will do much to keep horses comfortable, as well as improve their appetite and general health. Harness galls should be attended to at once, and if possible relieve the animal from the harness for a short time. If the horse must be worked, the collar, saddle, or other part of the harness that causes the gall, should be provided with pads, or otherwise arranged to relieve the pressure. A strong tea of oak bark is often used to wash the galled part. Flies greatly annoy horses, and some being very sensitive suffer greatly from them. It is said that a strong tea of hickory leaves, put on with a sponge and renewed daily, will keep away flies. A thin cotton sheet will keep them away; and is often a great comfort to the horse. Darkening the stables during the day time will help keep out the flies. The cleaner the stables, the less annoyance to the horse from flies.

Salt boxes are easily made, and should be provided. They not only economize in salt, but are much better than the ground for cattle to eat from. A salt trough with a swinging roof will furnish a constant supply of salt protected from the weather. The cattle will quickly learn to push the roof to one side in order to get at the salt.

Calves should have a run in a good piece of grass. The value of a cow depends so much on the first year's growth that the calf should have the best of feed, that the mature animal may be the more profitable.

Pigs that are ready for the early market will require a generous feeding from the stack. The attention that they receive now will determine very much the profits of the piggery. A run to grass, or better still, clover, will do them much good, but a good supply of bran and meal slops must not be forgotten.

Young chickens can find good employment in the vegetable garden, and when large enough to do injury by scratching, should still have the run of the orchards. The insects that fowls catch are many and injurious, so that in feeding them in this manner, a double good is accomplished. Provide coops that can be closed, for safety at night.

Household Information.

Persons who are troubled with ants in their houses may get rid of them by rubbing the shelves with gum-camphor. Two applications will be sufficient, with a week intervening.

As a general thing there is little danger of feeding growing fowls too much. During the period of growth when every part of the organic structure is undergoing development the chicken will assimilate all the food it takes. The experience of most all successful poultrymen is to feed often and as much at a time as they will pick up clean. This system of feeding is both economical and profitable. It first causes rapid growth and early development, and, in the next place, the faster they grow the better, so that you can turn your capital over more rapidly. Very young chicks cannot consume enough food at one time to last them half a day, as their corps are small; their rapid growth and habitual exercise demand material proportionably nourishing and active to develop a vigorous constitution. If chickens have a liberal range, the grubs, insects and worms they pick up will greatly aid them to grow. Indeed it may truly be said that these and vegetables are the natural food for young birds. But domestication goes a step further by supplementing grain, milk and animal food to produce more egg-forming material. Chickens confined in coops or small runs must be supplied with a variety of good food, scraps from the table, cooked corn and oat-meal, seasoned with pepper, bits of bread soaked in milk, chopped onion tops or garlic, bits of cheese or curds and milk will be productive of the best state of health and the most rapid growth.

Pure milk condensed to one-third will remain sweet from five to ten days in warm weather.

The following is recommended as an effectual method of getting rid of moths in carpets:—"Wring a coarse crash towel out of clear water, spread it smoothly on the carpets, iron dry with a good hot iron, repeating the operation on all parts of the carpets suspected of being infested with moths. No need to press hard, and neither the pile nor color of the carpet will be injured, and the moths will be destroyed by the heat and steam."

Workmen's pantaloons often become saturated with oil and grease, long before they are worn out. The following method of washing such articles of clothing, so as not to discharge the color, is recommended. It is impossible to wholly prevent fading, but if not left in the water too long the washing out of the dye will not be very great:—Water, 1 gallon; soap, ½ lb.; boil to dissolve; dilute with about 3 gallons of water; work the goods through as quickly as possible and rinse without wringing. An aqueous solution of 1 part copperas and 7 parts logwood extracts, may be used for reviving the faded color of cheap black goods after cleansing as above.

Take, say one dozen medium-sized potatoes, wash and peel; then, with an ordinary tin grater, such as is used for kitchen work—about three inches across and nine inches long—grate them whilst raw into a milk-dish or tin pan half full of water, making them by this operation into a fine pulp; stir briskly and allow to settle for five minutes; then pour off the liquid into a second dish, straining through a colander; set this aside to stand over night, or, if grated in the morning, for five hours; by this time the starch will have settled to the bottom of the pan; the watery liquid then be poured off, and the starch dried in the sun or a warm oven. It is then fit for use. Put a spoonful of starch into a bowl, mix to a stiff paste with cold water, then pour over it boiling water, stirring all the time, and it will thicken. Some people prefer cream or milk, with sugar, added. Children, especially, eat it with great relish. For invalids a glass of port wine is usually mixed with it.

Cutting off the diseased part, or slitting the bark on the side of the limb and body from the affected part down, will stop the destruction of fruit trees.

We observe in some of our exchanges the recommendation of salt as a remedy for the red rust, so destructive to some varieties of the raspberry, and especially to the Kittatinny blackberry. It is applied in spring as soon as growth commences by scattering broadcast and throwing a small handful at the root of every plant showing any indications of rust. It is an experiment easily tried, and if too large a dose happens to kill any of the plants, this would be better than destruction by rust, and its spread to other plants.

Through the hot, dry weather fuchsias should have a good sprinkling of warm water about three times each week. They will begin to bloom as soon as they have time to make the buds, say if carefully lifted in the fall will bloom until Christmas, and such varieties as Speciosa and Lustre much longer. As soon as done blooming, and the leaves begin to turn yellow and drop off, you should give the plants their annual rest. Gradually quit watering and set the plants in the cellar, only giving them enough water to prevent them from drying out entirely. When the new growth starts again, bring to the sitting-room and begin propagating new plants for another summer's flowering.

Professor Bouchardat attributes to the vine powerful sanitary properties. He asserts that wherever it is cultivated to any considerable extent there is a very sensible diminution of intermittents. The virtue is attributed to the action of the vine on the effluvia which cause fever.

Roses.

The Rural New Yorker reports an experiment performed by G. S. Wales in applying liquid manure for roses, which, although not new, is worthy of notice for its success. Small plants had been set in clayey soil, and after very heavy rain which had furnished leachings from the manure pile in the barn-yard, it was applied to the roses in a few holes made within four or five inches of each plant with a sharpened wooden rod. The next day the soil was stirred with a hoe. The operation was repeated eight or nine times through the season, and the result was reported to be wonderful; the blooming continued through the summer into October.

A London authority gives the following mode of procedure in layering roses:—About the middle of July, in most seasons, the shoots will be found about eighteen inches or two feet in length; from these, two thirds of their length, the leaves should be cut up close to the shoot, beginning at the base, with a very sharp knife; the shoot must then be "tongued;" i. e., the knife introduced just below a bud and brought upwards, so as to cut about half way through. This must be done at the side or back of the shoot (by no means at the front or in the bend), so that the tongue does not close. To make this certain a small piece of glass or thin earthenware may be introduced to keep it open. Much nicety is required to have the tongue at the upper part of the shoot, so as not to be in the part which forms the bow, as it is of consequence that it should be within two inches of the surface, so as to feel the effects of the atmospheric heat; unless this is attended to the roots will not be emitted quickly. The tongued part must be placed in the centre of the compost, and a moderate-sized stone put on the surface of the ground to keep the layer in its place. The first week in November the layers must be taken from the parent plant, and either potted as required or planted out where they are to remain. Those shoots not long enough in July and August may be layered in October, when the layers are taken from the stools; and, if any are forgotten, February and March will be the favourable months for the operation. As a general rule July is the most proper season.

CHAFF.

Mr. George Augustus Sala, in one of his letters from St. Petersburg, had occasion to say that at the hotels there you can live like a fighting cock. Here is the way he said it: "As for your living it will be as good as that traditionally said to be enjoyed by one of those pugnacious feathered bipeds of the gallinaceous order, which by act of Parliament, are no longer suffered to fight."

A valued pointer dog saw a parrot in the vines on a trellis around a house at which his master had called. The dog sprang up, "drew" on the parrot, "fastened," and remained as motionless as a statute, till the bird with a contemptuous flirt of his feathers, screamed: "Go home, you fool!" The dog turned and ran, and has never been known to point a bird since.—Harper's Weekly.

Teacher:—"John, what are your boots made of?" John:—"Of leather, sir." Teacher:—"Where does the leather come from?" John:—"From the hide of the ox." Teacher:—"What animal therefore supplies you with boots, and gives you meat to eat?" John:—"My father."

(Mother seeking a situation as footman for her raw-boned son.) Lady:—"Does he know how to wait at table?" Mother—"Yes, ma'am." Lady—"Does he know his way to announce?" Mother—"Well, ma'am, I don't know that he does to an ounce, but he does to a pound or two."

The following was a toast at a dinner of school teachers:

Our public schools—may their influence spread.
Until statesmen use grammar and dunces are dead;
Until no one dare say in this land of the free,
"He done," for "he did;" or "it's her," for "it's she."

An exceedingly fat gentleman had to travel by coach from Macon in France, and requiring more room than an ordinary passenger, sent his servant to book two places and pay for them. When he went to the office the next day to take his place, he found one seat had been booked inside and one outside.

An Irish gentleman called on an eminent singing master to enquire his terms. "I charge two guineas for the first lesson; but only one guinea for as many as you please afterward." "Oh, luther the first lesson then," said the other; "let us begin at once with the second." Another native of the Green Isle exhibited an equal comprehension of economic possibilities when he went to have his banns of marriage proclaimed. In answer to his enquiry as to the cost, the registrar told him that the fee for being proclaimed in one day was ten shillings; for two proclamations, it was five shillings; and for three times it was half-a-crown. "Indade," said the Irishman, "but that's an iligant arrangement. You can just go on proclaiming me and Biddy till there's nothing to pay at all."

Of the late Bishop Ames the following anecdote is related:—While presiding over a certain Conference in the west, a member began a tirade against universities, education, etc., thanking God that he had never been corrupted by contact with a college. After proceeding thus for a few minutes, the Bishop interrupted him, with the question, "Do I understand that the brother thanks God for his ignorance?" "Well, yes," was the answer; "you can put it that way if you want to." "Well, all I have to say," said the Bishop, in his sweet, musical tones, "is that the brother has a great deal to thank God for."

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all druggists

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of these elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

A Widow's Wiles;

OR,

A BITTER VENGEANCE

BY RACHEL BERNHARDT.

CHAPTER I.

FLOTS AND FLOTTERS.

"Really, this is charming! I never beheld anything like it! Such a sight makes Hazel appear a greater monster than ever. Is it not so, Mr. Herbert?"

The speaker was a tall, handsome woman, of about eight-and twenty, who, with Herbert Cunningham, stood on the broad terrace of Cunningham Castle, looking upon a scene well worthy encomium.

The grounds, as the Castle, were of feudal date, and remained in all their ancient grandeur, disfigured by no hideous imitation of square of spring colors and ribbon flower-beds.

There were avenues of velvety lawns, where the sunlight loved to linger, merging into half-lights and cool shades, as some ancient oak or beech spread wide its thickly-foliaged branches. There were avenues of chestnuts, and pleasant alleys, stillhand hushed, like academic groves. Hazel a dell, druid-like place, where old, looking on the terrace, might were he or she imaginative, fancy each past generation wandering in its time—each costume not incongruous, but in excellent harmony—from Richard Lion Heart to the Regency; glittering, making seeming or right earnest love, or plotting the overthrow of nation or party.

Flirtation, love making, plotting, were yet ramrart—do they ever die?—though, apparently, the scene was a most modern and innocent one; namely, a fete given by Sir Hereward Cunningham to the children of the parish schools.

The soft summer air rang with children's laughter. Bright marquees were erected on the lawns, where the small guests might eat cake and drink tea to repletion, waited upon by ladies in elegant summer costumes, and with hands white, soft, and much unused to all this kind of thing; yet, who were, on the whole, rather amused at the novelty.

Such was the scene that Mrs. Howard Deveril, her graceful figure attired in the latest and most becoming of Worth's toilettes, looked upon from the terrace, backed by the gray stone towers, battlements, and deep mullioned, casemented windows, of the castle.

Had any modern Paris been called upon to bestow the gods' apple upon the fairest woman in Weirbourne, most surely in justice, without hesitation, he would have handed it to Mrs. Howard Deveril.

Oval face; delicate, well-cut features; mobile expression, a complexion milk and pink, and velvety as a sun-warmed peach; eyes full, dreamy, seductive; lashes that were silken fringes, and red golden-bronze hair, completed the adornment of a countenance that was perfection.

What wonder that, while its owner regarded the children, Herbert Cunningham—a couple of years her senior, and tall, broad-shouldered, and handsome, too—regarded her.

"How happy the darlings are! How thankful they must be to generous Sir Hereward!" she proceeded. "But, though late, I must not be idle. I must help. Ha! ha! that was the condition upon which we adults were asked, was it not?"

And the bronze lashes were raised to let the shining gray eyes rest upon her companion.

"That is, I believe, the condition in most cases," was the answer, while the speaker's curly brown head was bent nearer. "But all rules have exception, and you, dear Mrs. Deveril, are the exception here. We feel sufficiently grateful for your honoring this fete of the innocents by your presence alone."

"That's flattery, nothing less, and I will not listen to it," laughed the lady, thereby disclosing two rows of exquisitely pearly teeth. "I intend to make up for lost time, and be very busy. Only," with a suspicion of plaintiveness, "will you—dare I ask you to keep by me awhile, just to show me the way? Unfortunately, I know"—a sigh, and droop of the long lashes—"so little about children. Dare I confess it, at one time it made me angry to look upon them; their laughter drove me mad."

Mrs. Howard Deveril had a sad, and something of a romantic past. She had married for love, and eighteen months of unalloyed happiness had ensued. For economy's sake, however, Mr. Deveril had resided in the south of France; and one afternoon, while boating on the Mediterranean, his boat was capsized by a sudden squall, and he was drowned, not only in sight of land, but in sight of his wife, who was on the beach awaiting his return.

The shock produced brain fever, during which an infant was born. It lived long enough for the mother to look upon it, to know it, and then faded away.

The bereaved wife and widow was for a long time inconsolable; her enemies declaring that her grief was much added to by the fact of the straitened circumstances in which her husband had left her.

His relatives, however, together allowed her an income while she remained unwedded; and certainly, she recovered after this, and directly the prescribed period of mourning elapsed, re-entered society, keeping her widowhood and childlessness strong on occasions, as above, for little effective touches only, it being no part of her desire to remain single.

Fate had brought her to Weirbourne, and Fate had brought her acquainted with Sir Hereward Cunningham, a widower with an only son.

Fate did more than this. It speedily showed her that she had won the admiration of father and son.

"Which shall I take?" she reflected. "Bah!" (with a little joyous laugh) "Sir Hereward is sixty. Who would wed Dotchet when they could have May? Besides, wedding the father, when he dies I shall be put aside as Dowager Lady Cunningham; while, if I wed Herbert, when once Lady Cunningham, I shall remain in power all my days, or give place only to my own children."

So the glances shot from the beautiful Mrs. Deveril's eyes of gray, into his of blue, had a meaning in them deeper than coquetry—a meaning Herbert Cunningham apparently responded to.

"If the sight of children gives you pain—if their laughter distresses you," he said, earnestly, as she lightly placed her gloved hand on the arm he had extended, "why subject yourself to it? Let us, dear Mrs. Deveril, go in another direction. Their feasting is nearly over."

"No, no!" she interrupted, her hand spasmodically, as it seemed, tightening on his arm a second. "You are very kind. But I am foolish! I must—I will get over it! Don't be frightened!" (with a winning laugh); "I shall not make a scene—I am better than I seem to be."

Mrs. Deveril proving resolute, together they crossed the lawn to the largest marquee. People observing these two, the news-dropping faithful of the laky, the best, earnest heed of the handmaiden, would have explained just as Mrs. Deveril "scene." Yet Herbert Cunningham said little; but to the widow the mind of his eyes was sufficiently eloquent.

Still, in trials of broken promises the most intelligent of the eyes has never been held as binding proof.

"Surely," reflected Mrs. Deveril, "he will speak to-day. I see a proposal on his lips."

On entering the canvas-stripped marquee the children were still busy with cake and tea, while aristocratic, well-born attendants flitted about them, growing somewhat weary.

"A charming, a most exquisite scene of innocent enjoyment!" again remarked Mrs. Deveril, as, standing just within the canvas opening, her head inclined toward her companion, she looked on the bustle, "quite a picture."

Their entrance had been observed by two persons—Sir Hereward and pretty May Rivers, the curate's daughter. The countenance of the former flushed and contracted with a frown; that of the latter grew suddenly pallid, even to the lips, before she stooped over the child nearest to her to conceal her agitation.

"Now," proceeded Mrs. Deveril, with a winning glance up at her cavalier, not unmarked by the baronet, too far off and too occupied at present to approach, "help me—tell me what I ought to do. Hand the cake? Let them eat as much as they like? Heavens, in what request the parish doctor will be to-morrow!—Come, please don't leave me until I am fairly aloof."

Herbert Cunningham appeared not to have the least intention of leaving her. Loyally he kept by the widow's side, aiding her, laughing, chatting, apparently having no eyes but for her; certainly not for May Rivers, nor the angry, jealous glances of Sir Hereward.

Yes, the baronet loved Mrs. Deveril with all the intensity, we might say absurdity, of an elderly man, and was jealous of his handsome son.

Before a quarter of an hour he had overcome all obstacles arising from his position as host, and approached the widow.

"A thousand, thousand welcomes!" he exclaimed, bowing in courtly fashion over her white, soft hand. "How for the last quarter of an hour have I been envying Bertie monopolizing the Queen of Beauty! Lucky dog! But every dog must have his day, and mine has arrived. Bert, Miss Ada Campbell has been enquiring for you. She wants your help. You know she believes—ha, ha!—that you can do everything. I said I would send you—be off! I will take the honor, the pleasure of attending upon Mrs. Deveril myself."

Mrs. Howard Deveril controlled her annoyance to a move of her pretty lips, while her eyes rested lingeringly on the young man before he turned away.

"Poor Ada Campbell!" she thought, with mocking pity. "And poor Sir Hereward! Can any man be so stupidly vain as to imagine that gray hairs can compete with brown? Let him be content with being my father-in-law—a proper position. Still, he is Herbert's father, so I must be kind. Herbert—Bertie—Bert! What a pretty name! What fond abbreviations!

So mused the widow, mechanically assisting the child insatiable to cake, and smiling, though only half hearing the flatteries Sir Hereward whispered in her ear.

Finally, the child insatiable became satiated, and a general stampede was made to the swings and the lawns, where the elders were organising numerous games.

Mrs. Deveril sighed with relief. To say the least, the child insatiable, whether for cake or play, was decidely a bore. In the confusion of leaving tents the widow would have stolen away from her companion, but Sir Hereward was not to be quitted.

His manner, his compliments, were more than ever impressive. They frequently conveyed a meaning which Mrs. Deveril could not fail to understand, though she pretended not to, but threw up word-barriers like a skillful sapper.

Meanwhile, her eyes sought Herbert. He was everywhere, the mirth and soul of this or that group of children.

"But," with a sigh, "he is not with Ada Campbell! That is a comfort!"

Finally, the shades of evening began to darken beneath the old oaks.

The happy, weary-footed little guests were to form in procession, and chanting a song of praise to their host, take their departure, a fact that necessitated the presence of the Baronet.

"Never mind! He'll be as anxious to look for me as I for him," smiled the widow, who, to avoid falling again into the Baronet's clutches, had slipped into a shadowy alley. "I wonder what Sir Hereward will think when he knows I have accepted Herbert? Dear Herbert!" thus ran her meditation. "He'll be awful furious at first. Why, he has as good as proposed a dozen times himself to-day! Perhaps he'll refuse to keep Bertie. He can't disinherit him, for, of course, the place is entailed. Bertie and I must get on as well as we can until Sir Hereward's time has come to quit this mundane sphere, then Lady Cunningham shall enter into her estate. Really, Gwen, you are a clever woman!" laughing low and musically. "When you came here, you went in for the son or the father—would have been glad of either—and may now take your choice. Both are at your feet!"

As the last words were uttered, Mrs. Deveril halted abruptly.

There were some people talking at the other side of the hawthorn hedge.

Who could it be? She fancied all but she had gone to the terrace to see the march-past of the infantry. She had better retreat noiselessly, not being desirous for company; and, no doubt the persons, probably a pair of lovers, equally wished to remain undisturbed.

Gathering her soft muslin skirts about her, she had already taken a step to retreat, when one of the voices exclaimed, "Nay, you should not, even by a look, mistrust me. You know my heart must ever be faithful to you; and you are aware of the reason I pay this seeming court."

Mrs. Deverils countenance flushed, then paled. Her eyes dilated, her lips trembled. Then swiftly moving forward, she strove to peer through the hedge.

She was successful, and saw that her ears had not deceived her. The speaker was Herbert Cunningham, and it was May Rivers, the curate's daughter, to whom he was speaking.

CHAPTER II.

A PROPOSAL—HER WIDOW TRIUMPHS.

When Mrs. Deveril recognised the two, her hands clenched, her lips tightened, a dangerous light sprang into her eyes.

The pair stood together in the twilight shadows of a wide-spread beech. Herbert Cunningham's arm was about May's slender waist; her hands rested one upon each of his broad shoulders; her fair, proud face was lifted; her eyes, with love's own sunshine in them, were raised to his, which met them with a life's passion.

Lovers, indeed! Were they only lovers? She was a poor curate's daughter; he, Sir Hereward's heir!

Surely, if she listened, she could ascertain?

Recalling Herbert Cunningham's melting glances, Mrs. Deveril felt not above eavesdropping.

"Of course, Bertie, I know the reason," said May. "Did I not—oh, my darling, I think my heart would break! The cause may be a just one; still I do not like it! Not only does it pain me—foolishly pain me, Bertie, if you will—to see you by her side, receiving and answering her smiles; but the part you yourself play does not seem honorable to you nor just to her. Imagine if"—and the clear eyes expanded with fond affection—"she really loves you! Why not? I could easily imagine it!"

"You are a dear, silly little pet!" responded the young man, clasping her to him, and looking fondly down upon her before he pressed on her lips a kiss that went like a dagger to the watcher's heart. "Love! Mrs. Deveril does not know it; with her it goes by the name of self-interest. I tell you, May, I read her character directly ill-fate threw her across our path. Cunningham was a fine place, supported easily by a fine income. She was fascinating, beautiful, so lay her nets according for either the father or the son. The younger man best suited her; but he failing, the elder would serve!"

"Oh, Bertie!"

Mrs. Deveril's filbert nails pierced her delicate pink palms as she listened. Rage boiled in her heart—the more fiercely because Herbert Cunningham's words were true.

It is no pleasant thing to find our cleverly-plotted schemes have been unmasked.

"You look horrified, May. But be certain I am right."

"But how long do you intend—how long will it be necessary to make love to her?"

"I do not make love to her. I only look it. Well, as to its duration, I can't say; but I fancy that the end must be near."

"Far nearer than you think!" muttered Mrs. Deveril.

"My foolish father is infatuated with her, and jealous of me. If I can only prove to him what is her plot, however, the possession of Cunningham by any means, he has enough wisdom left not to be duped. At least I hope he has, or Heaven knows what would become of us! That woman as an enemy would be dangerous, pitiless!"

A smile of satisfaction, as if the words conveyed a compliment, passed over the widow's features, and, in the fast-waning light, she nodded her head significantly.

"All seems very wretched, very miserable," murmured May. "Bertie, I cannot help it; it makes me sad. I do not like it."

"How could you, poor love?" And tenderly he drew her so close that her head sank on his breast as its natural, its legitimate pillow. "But for Mrs. Deveril's arrival, I would, trust me, have owned our marriage to my father long before this; feeling aware that, as his only son, the only being he then loved, I might easily have won his pardon. But now it would be to cast him into the arms of this designing widow. Then, sweet wife, what would become of us?"

"His wife!" gasped the listener. "A secret marriage! Oh, this is a lucky hearing for me! Poor fools, how completely are they in my power!"

"Oh, darling!—oh, love!—have I thus so nearly ruined you?" cried the girl, passionately throwing her arms round his neck, and clinging to him. "Oh, Bertie, if harm should come to you—poverty, disinheritance through me—never could I forgive myself!"

You, darling?" You bring other than happiness? Nonsense, May! If the worst were to come, I should hold myself rich beyond measure in possessing you. But these are idle fears. We have only to keep our union secret."

"But, oh, my love, in a few months that will be impossible; or,—or I must leave home!"

The trembling, whispered words, the blushing face averted on his bosom, revealed the truth.

"Good Heavens! is it so?" cried Herbert Cunningham.

Then the whole heart of the strong man went out to the weak woman, and he clasped her to his breast with a new love, a new affection throbbing in his veins.

In all their lives, this moment—the interview altogether—stood out happy in their recollection. They did well to remember it, for it was the beginning of the end. They might have taken the ebon night falling about them as symbolic.

At this moment voices were heard, merely servants' voices, as their owners were busy clearing the marquees; but even by those people the heir and his young wife desired not to be detected.

"Let us return, love," whispered Herbert. "We shall be missed, and just at this time we must not create suspicion. I have also promised to escort Mrs. Deveril home."

Emerging from the beech-shade, they walked rapidly over the lawn, and disappeared. Then, not until then, the listner moved, and made her way, with slow step and bowed head, but busy brain, back to the Castle.

Like a big, ugly blot on a fair page, one resolve dominated all else—revenge. She had vowed it, and, better still, knew she could accomplish it. He, Herbert, should find how hard and pitiless she could be.

"Oh!" she cried, with a shiver in her tones which ran through her whole frame, "I could kill him! At least, I'll ruin him as far as I am able. But the entail—that miserable entail!"

As Mrs. Deveril, quitting the alley, swept gracefully, slowly across the lawn, a gentleman descending the steps of the terrace came quickly to meet her.

A cold, pleased smile shone in the widow's eyes as she recognised Sir Hereward.

In youth he must have been remarkably handsome, for the aristocratic features were so yet, though the hair was iron-gray, and Time had drawn his mark about the corners of the mouth and eyes; yet in the latter beamed, as they rested upon Mrs. Deveril, a fire to which love gave almost a youthful ardor.

"At last, then, I have found you!" he exclaimed. "I have been seeking you everywhere. I feared that perhaps the children had wearied you, and that you had found a pair of angel wings to fly homeward."

"That is not a compliment, Sir Hereward," smiled the lady, accepting the proffered arm, and leaning rather upon it; "for only the wicked would fly from Paradise."

"Paradise!"—looking or trying to look, into her eyes. "Do you, then, consider Cunningham in that light?"

"In what other could I. Hereld Castle is a gem in itself. To me it is casket of rare value—its narrow mullioned history on its gray walls," proceeded Mrs. Deveril, in low-voiced, musical enthusiasm.

"Old, indeed," laughed the baronet. "There are stairs and passages—secret ones, of course—crumbling with age, they say. I would have them renovated, but I am told it would ruin the appearance of the other portions."

"And I'm sure you would not be Goth enough for that, Sir Hereward. I can imagine how proud you must be of the ancient place and slumberous grounds. I should be, if"—a very faint sigh—"they were mine. Eve could never have erred if her Paradise had been like this."

The opportunity offered by these words the baronet did not pass over. Halting, he placed his hand within the little one resting upon his arm, bent his head, and remarked, "Dear Mrs. Deveril, will you make it yours, and at the same time make me the happiest, most to be envied man on earth? Will you be my wife?"

Ah, the triumphant thrill that quivered through the widow's frame! It made her accents naturally tremulous as she murmured, "Oh, Sir Hereward, I never expected—expected this!"

Faintly she strove to remove her hand, but his surely imprisoned it.

"Have I offended you?" he pleaded. "I know I am older than you—old enough to be your father instead of your husband. Yet my love you shall find as sincere—nay, probably more so, than a younger man's. At my age affection is no ephemeral feeling; it grips the heart as the ivy the forest oak."

"Oh, Sir Hereward, are these apologies necessary? Is love to be gauged by years, murmured the siren. "Offended! How could I be? I am overwhelmed by the honor you would do me."

"Honor! 'Tis I who am honored. I place myself, and all that is mine, at your feet. Only—only say that you care for me."

His voice shook, also his frame, as he leaned toward her. She stood with bowed head and swelling bosom before him, silent. Then abruptly, as with a little shivering cry, "Oh is it true, Sir Heweard, is it true? Am I awake? Is it a dream?"

"It is serious truth to me. At my age rejection would be difficult to support," he rejoined, agitatedly. "Can you care for me sufficient to—to be mine?"

A pause; thom two white hands were tremblingly extended, a pair of large grey eyes shining timidly were raised, and like a whisper came the answer. "Oh, Sir Hereward have you not seen that which, try us I would I could not altogether hide—that I—I—love you!"

The accents died musically away as the baronet, taking the extended hands in a rapture of joy, drew their owner to his bosom.

"Gwendoline—my wife!"

Ten minutes later they stood at the foot of the terrace, preparing to ascend. The castle was full of light, but its rays hardly reached them.

"It is a grand old place, remarked the baronet, with justifiable pride. "You are proud of it too, now, Gwendoline, for it is yours."

"I am prouder of you, for you will be always mine."

"And so will Cunningham. It shall never have another mistress, dear love.'

"Oh, yes," she laughed, gayly. "Dear Bertie will marry, and in time, as of course it should be, set up his Lares and Penates here, while I, the Dowager, and mine, like aliens shall fold up our tents and silently steal away. That is the result of entail."

"Aliens!" broke in Sir Hereward, with asperity, recollecting his jealousy. "Master Bertie must look to himself, if he has thus regarded you and yours, dear Gwendoline. But that is absurdity. As to the entail, you mistake; Cunningham is not entailed."

"Not?" ejaculated Mrs. Deveril, in quick surprise.

"No. It was, up to the coming over of the Prince of Orange. The then baronet, a loyal Protestant, was heart and soul for William, as was his younger son. Unfortunately, however, his elder was a staunch supporter of James. There was a grievous quarrel between the father and son, and the former, a hard, stern man, by means of a large sum and Court influence got the entail destroyed, since when the ruling owner of Cunningham has had the power to will it to whom he pleased."

"How strange!" laughed the widow, lightly. "Then, if you liked—as the saying goes—you could cut dear Herbert off with a shilling?"

"Yes, exactly; and—shall I let you into a secret?—I felt very much inclined to do so this evening!"

"This evening?"

"When I saw him by your side—when I was jealous of him."

"Surely, you were never that! Did you not read me better than that? I like him, of course, for is he not your son?"

"I see I was blind, thank Heaven! But the present joy more than equals the past misery," laughed Sir Hereward, as they ascended the steps, while Mrs. Deveril was thinking:

"Not entailed! What an escape I have had!"

As they stepped through the French windows into the drawing-room, they came upon Herbert. Perhaps it was a sense of pride to show how age had triumphed over youth that urged the Baronet so quickly to announce the fact, for he said, "Bertie, the last half-hour has made me the most to be envied man on earth. Let me introduce to you your future step-mother and my wife."

Mrs. Deveril made a little, deprecating bashful movement, and inclined her head. But once the future mother and son's eyes met. It seemed a revelation. Herbert had gone pale. He bit his lip under his mustache. Nevertheless, he managed to bow, saying in a tone the dryness of which the Baronet imagined he could account for easily, "I congratulate you, sir." Then, turning on his heel, he added, mentally, "Ruined! Poor May! She hates me—I saw it in her eye. Could she have discovered anything? If so, as I have said, she will prove hard and pitiless, even unto death!"

He was right.

DIVISION COURT, on Tuesday last, brought a number of suitors before Judge Dean, who presided.

STEEL RAILS are being laid on the Midland Railway from Fraserville northward, and the work will be completed to Peterborough, probably this evening. Within a month a similar improvement will be made on the main line as far as Woodville.

THE FAREWELL SERMONS of the Bible Christian ministers of the town and Ashburnham, Messrs. Roberts and Blatchford, are cause for regret, not only to their immediate hearers, but to the community at large. The good wishes of many friends go with them form Peterborough.

JUST SO.—"In all towns where a newspaper is published," says an exchange, "every business man should advertise in it, even if nothing more than a card stating his name and the business he is engaged in. It pays the advertiser, and lets people at a distance know that the town is full of business men."

POLICE COURT.—During the week the Justice mill has done a fair amount of "grinding in bond." J. Dobin and W. Kavanagh were fined $2 each for fighting. For obstructing Charlotte-street with goods T. Fitzgerald paid $1.25, the costs arising from the charge, which he acknowledged. A warrant has be issued by the Police Magistrate for the arrest of a man named George Huston, for a violent assault with stones, on Darcy Dunlop, boundary of Cavan and Monaghan.

MALONEY & Co., have taken hold of the bankrupt stock in the premises lately occupied by Mr. Fred Perry, and will carry on the Grocery business in all its branches. The stock is now being assorted and arranged for the inspection of buyers to whom special bargains are offered. Under the management of Mr. John Maloney, the business will doubtless be carried on with enterprise, and those who have formerly met that gentleman as a trader, will find him as obliging as ever.

A NEW BRIDGE.—The Engineer having condemned the present bridge at Lakefield, the County Council has decided on the erection of an iron bridge, and referred the matter to a Committee, composed of Messrs. Pearce, Burnham, Strickland, Moloney, Fitzgerald and the Warden, to receive tenders, and with power to act. The members of the council go to Lakefield to-day, to inspect the site, leaving by the noon train, which the railway authorities have consented to hold at Lakefield for three hours for the convenience of the party.

DOMINION DAY.—The arrangements for the celebration of Dominion Day by the Fire Brigade of this town are progressing very satisfactorily, and from the particulars given by programmes which are now being distributed, a very attractive bill of fare is promised. The novelty of an industrial procession should in itself be of sufficient attraction to draw an immense assemblage of people to town. Besides this, the sports in the afternoon, the promenade concert and acrobatic performance in the evening, and the grand torchlight procession and extensive display of fireworks afterwards, will, we feel sure, provide a celebration not equalled by any town in Ontario. There will also be a lacrosse match in the afternoon, on the cricket grounds, between the Independents of Toronto and the Peterborough club, which should draw a large concourse of spectators. The Independents have a good reputation, and as our "boys" are diligently practising, a very close and exciting game may be looked forward to. The Midland and Grand Junction Railways will issue one fare tickets for the occasion, from all points on the line.

SCHOOL PIC-NIC.—Union School, 5th concession North Monaghan, Harvey Strike, teacher, held its annual school pic-nic last Friday. Notwithstanding the dampness quite a crowd awoke the echos in Laing's woods. Football engaged the sturdier sex; croquet the fairer. Tea and victuals engaged common attention and effort. All present enjoyed themselves till the evening shadows signalled departure.

THE JUNCTION of the Midland and Grand Junction Railway lines at Auburn was made, so that trains began on Monday morning to run to and from the Midland Railway station, that at Ashburnham being closed. The run round the angle occupies but a few minuths. The intention is to form a junction at Smith street, and establish a telegraph station there.

The furniture, &c., is of best make and is in first-class condition. Sale commences at ten o'clock, and without reserve. See posters and catalogues for particulars. Busses will convey parties from Peterborough to and from the sale at cheap rates. 25-1t

ELOCUTION.—An examination of the class in Elocution at the Collegiate Institute, was made on Saturday. The reading of all was good, and a marked improvement is observable among the pupils in this very important feature of culture. The decision in the girl's class was particularly difficult, there being so near an approach to equality among the sixteen competitors; but careful criticism resulted in the award of the first honours to Miss F. Campbell, and the second to Miss Nellie Wrighton. The judges were:—Rev. Mr. Bell, Jas. Stratton and J. Coyle Brown. The boys, too, acquitted themselves spiritedly and well; and from among competitors, E. G. Stratton carried off the first and R. Brown the second place. The judges for the boys were:—Messrs. Braden, Scott and Kidd. The late instructions in elocutionary art, have told well in the school, and are having an effect upon all the pupils in the way of better reading.

A WATER-WORKS DEPUTATION.—Last Friday evening the members of the lately appointed Water-Works Committee and other Councillors and citizens, to the number of about fifty, availed themselves of the offer of the President of the Midland Railway of a free passage to and from Port Hope, for the purpose of inspecting the water-works of that town. Leaving by special car attached to the 4.30 train, the deputation arrived at Port Hope at six o'clock, and after about an hour spent in taking tea, &c., the "Extinguisher" Hose Company showed them the working of the Waterous system with lengths of hose attached to five different hydrants, and also with 1,150 feet of hose pouring one stream. The pumps, engine-house, fire hall and hose-tower were all examined minutely, and mental notes taken of apparent excellencies or defects, for future use in considering the coming Peterborough water-works. The visitors are well-pleased with the obliging way in which they were received by the people of Port Hope. Leaving by the regular evening train the party arrived home about ten o'clock, grateful to Mr. Cox for the pleasure and profit of the trip.

THE BRIGADE CAMP.—The brigade camp for the third military district will, it is learned on authority, assemble at Picton early in September. The brigade will consist of the following arms of service:—Cavalry—1st squadron, consisting of troops from Cobourg and Port Hope, Col. Boulton, Cobourg, commanding. Field Batteries—Kingston and Port Hope. Infantry—16th, Prince Edward, Lieut.-Col. Ross; 40th, Northumberland, Lieut.-Col. Smith; 45th, West Durham, Lieut.-Col. Cubitt; 46th, East Durham, Lieut.-Col. Williams, M.P; 47th, Frontenac, Lieut.-Col. G. A. Kirkpatirck; 57th, Peterborough, Lieut.-Col. J. Z. Rogers. The ground selected for the camp is very suitable, and capable of brigading 5,000 men. The grounds are on the Sulphur Spring Farm, overlooking the town and bay, and command one of the finest views in Ontario. They are convenient to the town, steamboat landing, and railway, and are offered free of charge by Mr. G. Striker, M. P. P., trustee for the Ross estate.

A NEW RAILWAY OFFICIAL.—Charles Blackwell of the Department of Railways, has accepted the position of Engineer on the Midland Railway.

LIBERALITY.—The Port Hope Times says:—"Our Council acted more liberally than that of Peterborough in making a grant for the Dominion Day celebration."

A GOOD IDEA.—In closing its remarks on the late visit of Northumberland and Durham County Councillors to Peterborough, the Cobourg Sentinel-Star says:—"If Mr. Barber would get up an excursion to our beautiful sister town, some holiday, we are sure it would be largely patronised."

The Winnipeg Times of the 11th says:—MR. CALCUTT, of Peterboro', returned this morning, and will commence operations at the Assiniboine brewery on Monday. The Free Press of the 13th say H. CALCUTT, of the Assiniboine Brewery, returned to the city from the east on Saturday. He has brought a large staff with him from Peterboro', and will commence manufacturing in a few days.

Mr. R. F. Tate has sent us a copy of the Denver Tribune, containing several columns of a discription of how and why one gambler shot another dead in a saloon, a picture of the murdered man and a plan of the place in which the tragedy was enacted. The state of society may be judged from the editorial comment of the Tribune in which it states that "the general feeling on the street is that the man who killed him did a public service, and ought not to be held responsible." Again:—"It seems quite clear that the man who killed him acted in self-defence, but he ought to be turned loose whether he did or not." R. F. don't seem to have entered a social paradise.

A MAMMOTH EXCURSION to Belleville, from Peterborough and all way stations along the line of the Grand Junction Railway, will take place on Tuesday next, 28th instant. As this is the first trip of the kind this season to the city on the Bay, and as Peterborough has of late been receiving excursions from the south-east, doubtless a very large number of our citizens will avail themselves of the cheap fares and other inducements offered. The excursion train will leave Peterborough at 7.30 o'clock a.m.; and the fare for the round trip and lunch, provided by the ladies of the Methodist church at Belleville, is only one dollar. The affair is under the management of the George Street Methodist Church, to which the proceeds are to be devoted. In aid of a good work, and with promise of good company and a good time, the whole town and his wife are likely to go to Belleville on Tuesday.

"BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST."—The efforts of local musicians in presenting the cantata, "Belshazzar's Feast," to the public, on Friday evening last, met with unqualified and deserved success. In spite of the disadvantages arising from lack of appropriate scenery and costumes, the music was enjoyed by the audience, which nearly filled Bradburn's Hall. The managers of the concert did well in not attempting any acting of the scenes without the necessary paraphernalia, but in concentrating all the powers of the company in the vocal rendering of the passages. In this there seemed to be an improvement as the piece progressed; as, whether from increasing confidence on the part of the performers, or greater love for the concluding numbers, the last choruses were the best. The same elevation of spirit was noticeable with the soloists. If the same company will go to the trouble and expense of putting on the piece with proper scenic effect and action; they will achieve a further success. The voices are there, to accompany even the richness of Oriental court vesture; and the grand airs of the composition cannot but gain from the harmonization to the eye of Jewish, Chaldaic and Babylonian men and maidens with the worshipful reverence contained in the music as it falls upon the ear. It will require considerable art to change some of the blonde Saxons of the company into dark-browed Aryans, but the promise of the result is worth the experiment. As the performance on Friday evening was undertaken as a farewell mark of respect to Rev. Mr. Roberts, Bible Christian minister, who is by the order of his Church Conference removed from Peterborough, it was pleasingly suggestive of the esteem in which he is held to observe the general co-operation of the church choirs of the town. On Saturday Mr. Millar, the Conductor, on behalf of the singers, presented Mr. Roberts with the monetary result of the concert, $100, accompanied with an address expressive of esteem for his Christian character and prayerful consideration for the future of himself and his family. Mr. Roberts has just reason to be not only pleased with the material proof of esteem, but more so with the spirit which prompted it, and the "harmonious" manner of its conveyance.

PERSONAL.

Hon. Alexander Mackenzie has arrived in London in good health.

R. Jaffray, Midland Railway Director, was in Belleville last Thursday.

H. J. Sargent, General Traffic Manager of the G. T. R., passed over the G. J. R. last week on a visit of inspection.

W. Milne, of Milne & Graham, Lindsay, goes on a two months' trip to the old country.

Hon. S. C. Wood and family leave Lindsay to-day for a holiday up Lake Superior.

We had the pleasure of a call from Mr. J. T. White, of Brockville, on Monday. He has been visiting friends here for the past week.

N. Weatherston and Jas. Watt, of the Grand Junction section of the Midland Railway system, were in town on Tuesday.

Mr. T. O. Bolger, P.L.S., of Belleville, has been commissioned by the Government to survey townships in the North-West, and will shortly leave, with a party, for his field of labor.

Geo. H. Brown, of the Midland Railway, who lately went to Omemee to take charge of the station there, is back to Peterborough, where he has scores of friends.

Our genial friend, Mr. John Sharp, of Westwood, will accompany Mr. Robert Graham, of Lakefield, to Scotland. They sail by the Persian from Quebec on the 2nd July.

Fred. Chilcotte, Thos. Bithray and J. Kemmet were entertained on Wednesday evening at a supper, given at the Caisse House, by a number of their friends as a testimony of esteem on the eve of their departure for other scenes.

Rev. Mr. Washington, of Lakefield, and Rev. Mr. Bell, preach on Sunday next in the North Smith Presbyterian Church, at 10.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m., respectively. The church will be re-opened on that day.

Mr. C. F. Smithers, General Manager of the Bank of Montreal, has been appointed President of that institution. It is understood that Mr. Buchanan, Assistant General Manager, will succeed to the vacant position.

Sir John A. Macdonald still remains weak, but is able to take short walks. Dr. Clarke's diagnosis of his trouble is in direct variance with that of Sir John's Canadian physicians, and he therefore desires to be near his patient until he understands his constitution and condition, and till his health improves.

The Emerson International says that Messrs. McBain and Shaw, two enterprising young gentlemen from Peterboro', Ont., have purchased the general store at Pilot Mound, and propose to greatly enlarge the business. And also that Mr. R. Clurton, who returned to his home at Peterborough last winter, is back again, much to the gratification of numerous friends.

HAUNTED ME.—A Workingman says "Debt, poverty and suffering haunted me for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have been sick one day since; and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost."—Christian Advocate. 24-3ins

DYSPEPSIA.—Strengthen your digestion tone the stomach for utilizing and assimilating every atom of food you take; the body needs it for strength and vigor. Zopesa cleans the entire system, stimulates the liver, keeps you regulated and able to eat ten-penny nails. PREJUDICE KILLS.—"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery under the care of several of the best (and some of the worst) physicians, who gave her disease various names but no relief, and now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had poohed at for two years, before using it. We earnestly hope and pray that no one else will let their sick suffer as we did, on account prejudice against so good a medicine as Hop Bitters."—The Parents.—Telegram. 24-3ins

NOTICE.

This Flour is made of No. 1 Hard Wheat by the new process, combined with the best methods and machinery in operation in the best Hungarian Mills, and will produce from 30 to 40 pounds more Bread per Barrel than the best superior wheat Flour. Therefore, the first cost though higher, is fully compensated in the increased yield of Bread as well as being a much better quality and more nutritious, having a much larger percentage of gluten and less of starch than ordinary wheat Flour. To those who may not be familiar with the use of this kind of Flour, we suggest mixing it moderately soft, which will require considerably more water than ordinarily used.

KNEAD THOROUGHLY, and bake with a strong heat and in such a manner that bottom and top shall be equally well baked.

FAREWELL CEREMONIES.

Parting with Two Popular Preachers —Departure of Rev. Messrs. Harper and Starr.

On Monday evening the Charlotte Street Methodist Church was crowded to its utmost capacity with the members of the two Methodist congregations of the town, who had assembled for the purpose of testifying their respect for, their regret at having to part with, and their appreciation of the faithful pastoral labors of two reverend gentlemen who had, during their term of station in Peterborough, made for themselves a warm place in the esteem and affection not only of their own flocks, but of the citizens of the town generally.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox was unanimously invited to take the chair, and invited to the platform Messrs. T. W. Robinson, A. L. Davis and W. Gilbert. The Chairman then briefly explained the object of the meeting, which was to take a formal farewell of their pastors, who were about leaving them for other fields of labor, and to testify their regret at the necessity for severing relations that had been so harmonious and pleasant, and mutually satisfactory. He called on Mr. T. W. Robinson, who read the following

ADDRESS TO REV. DR. HARPER:

DEAR BRO. HARPER,—According to the regulations of our Itinerant system, the time has arrived when our relations as pastor and people must be severed. You go to a new field of toil in the Master's vineyard, and we feel it to be only right to express our kindly feelings at the close of an intercourse, which for three years has been marked by both pleasure and profit.

We hope that the seed which you have patiently and faithfully sown, watered by heavenly influences, shall yield rich fruitage to gladden your heart and honour the Saviour.

For yourself, your estimable wife and family we ask the Divine guidance and blessing, and that your ministry may ever bear the Father's smile of approval, and that, when gathered home, you may hear the Judge's commendation: "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

In conclusion, Bro. Harper, I ask you to accept this purse as a token of our esteem for you as our pastor and friend.

On behalf of the congregation,
Yours,
T. W. ROBINSON.

Peterborough, June 27th. 1881.

Mr. Robinson then presented Dr. Harper with a purse containing $100, and in adding his personal testimony to the sentiments contained in the address, expressed his special regret at the severance of her connection with the Bible Class, of Miss Bertha Harper, as she had been a faithful worker for one so young, and would be much missed by her teachers and associates.

Rev. Dr. Harper in replying said he was wholly taken at a disadvantage, as he had not anticipated any such expression from them. He could not account for their flattering opinions and handsome gift unless he should lay it to the generous hearts and Christian sympathies with which he had to do in the course of his labour during the past three years, and which had been of so much assistance to him, and had given him strength and encouragement in his duties. He had now been for forty years going in and out among the different stations of the Church, and only on a few occasions previously had he been favored with expressions of so very marked approval of his course in the ministry. It was indeed very gratifying to him, and would ever remain a bright spot in his memory. When he came among them, he knew only their estimable chairman, and he was glad to be able to think that his ministrations had been in some measure a blessing among them. He could say that he left this field of labor in a prosperous and promising condition, everything connected with the circuit indicating progress and success. When Mr. Wallace had left this church, and he had heard that Mr. Starr was available, having known and esteemed his father, he had at once seized upon him, and he was indeed glad to see that he was leaving them as popular and amid so much regret as he was. Their relations had always been of the most cordial and Christian nature, and he hoped that he would in his new sphere of labor be favored with the same popularity and usefulness. He had been much cheered of late to see the young men coming to the front to advance the cause of Christ and the church. He prayed that God would bless and prosper them all.

The choir then sang a hymn.

PRESENTATIONS TO REV. MR. STARR.

Misses Emma Sawdye and Martha Baguley then advanced, and presented Mr. Starr, on behalf of the Bible Class, with an elegant gold combined pen and pencil, the former reading the following address:

To Rev. Mr. Starr:

DEAR SIR,—As you are about leaving us, we, the members of your Bible Class, take this opportunity of expressing our high appreciation of your services among us, and while we regret your departure from our midst, we sincerely hope that the change will be for your benefit. We ask you to accept this pen and pencil as a slight token of the high esteem which exists among the members of your class.

We now bid you good-bye, and hope you may enjoy the rich blessings of health, happiness and prosperity, and when you have ended your career in this world, you may hear the welcome words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of the Lord."

Signed on behalf of the members of the Bible Class,
EMMA SAWDYE,
MARTHA BAGULEY.

Peterborough, June 27th, 1881.

Mr. A. L. Davis then came forward and presented Mr. Starr with a purse containing upwards of $170, accompanying which he read the following address, from the young people and the congregation:

To the Rev. J. E. Starr:

REV. AND DEAR SIR,—Your intention to remove from Peterboro' to Winnipeg has afforded your friends, (especially the young people,) an opportunity of giving tangible expression to their esteem for you as a pastor.

The announcement of your departure has caused much disappointment and regret, for we felt that by it we should be separated from a friend, who had shown a capability of being one with us in our enjoyments, without compromising Christian character, but on the contrary showing our Heavenly Father's will, that his children should be happy, and proving the truth of that statement, "All Things are Yours."

During the two years you have been with us we have listened with benefit to your preaching from Sunday to Sunday, and our admiration has been drawn out especially to the bold unflinching spirit with which you have laid bare the Truth. In doing this the pleasing fact has revealed itself of a determination to carry out unswervingly the principles of your high calling.

But above all this other ties have been formed which can never be broken. During the past few months, we have together passed through a season fraught with intensest interest, a time of solemn crisis, when the destiny of hundreds of souls was at stake. It is the joyous associations connected therewith, which shall ever stand clustered around your name that makes it hard to part. Neither your time nor strength was spared, but animated by the spirit of the Master, with unwavering purpose and tenderness of heart, you were instrumental in leading many from the darkness and thraldom of sin into the light and joy which the religion of Christ imparts.

We ask the acceptance of this purse as a slight token of our regard.

In going away you have our fervent prayers that the Holy Spirit will ever guide you in the ways of Him who doeth all things well.

Signed, on behalf of the young people and Congregation,
A. L. DAVIS.

Peterborough, June 27th. 1881.

Following this Mr. W. Gilbert was called on and read an address from the Young Men's Christian Association, as follows:

To the Rev. J. E. Starr:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The Young Men's Christian Association of Peterboro' feel that they cannot allow you to leave here without expressing their sincere regret at your departure from our midst, and the earnest hope that your future may be blessed to yourself and all with whom you may be associated.

They recognise with thankfulness that the Association has always received your hearty support, and the members will always remember you with feelings of deep attachment as an earnest Christian member, always ready fearlessly to speak for the Master and to engage in his work.

That you may be long spared to labor for Him, is our heartfelt prayer.

J. F. JEWERS,
President.
G. H. JOHNSTON,
Secretary.

Peterboro', June 27th. 1881.

Mr. Starr said he, too, was surprised at the flood of addresses which had come upon him, and which it would take the tongue of a Dufferin to reply to as they ought to be. It was with the deepest regret that he was compelled to part with his class in the Sunday School, and his heart would always revert with pleasure to the hours they had passed in the little room adjoining. Referring to the address of the young people and congregation, he said he felt most deeply their expressions of confidence and esteem. He wanted specially to acknowledge the kindly Christian sympathy with which he had been aided and encouraged, and which he should never forget. He had been called a fool when he first entered the church, as there were other pursuits in life which offered greater prizes to young men than that of the ministry. He had, however, felt that he would like to be doing a share of the work in God's service, and looking to the greater rewards, he had never regretted his decision. He referred to the pecuniary disadvantages he had had to endure in his first year, having been compelled to drop a life insurance of $2,000. Through all his life God had cared for him better than he would be able to care for himself, and to-night, he was able to take it up from the Company in which it had been, and put it into the Canada Life. Referring to Rev. Dr. Harper, he said he had always entertained the greatest esteem and affection for him. Their relations had always been of the most harmonious kind, and he always knew him as one to whom he could carry any trouble, and be sure of ready sympathy and assistance. In replying to the address of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. Starr spoke of the terms of confidence on which he had ever been with the young men of the town. He thought there were glorious possibilities for those young men, and that they were setting out in the right direction. He parted from them with regret, and with the most earnest wishes for their future prosperity and success, as men and Christians. In bidding them good-bye, he could console them with the reflection that though the Starr has gone, the comet has come.

Mr. Wm. Cluxton on being called on, said he felt pleased at the opportunity of expressing the esteem and respect which he shared with them all towards the two reverend gentlemen who had been their pastors during the past three years, and he trusted they would be as well appreciated and as highly esteemed in their new homes as they had been while in Peterborough.

After prayer by Rev. Mr. Starr, the meeting was closed in the usual manner.

We join with the congregations of the George and Charlotte Street churches in expressing a sense of the loss which not only they, but the whole town, have sustained by the removal of these two gentlemen from a scene of labor where they were so much appreciated, and where their good work was on the increase in its results. The itinerant system may have its advantages, but in this case its necessities will be regretted, both in and out of the Methodist congregations of Peterborough.

SOUTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL.

We have been requested to publish the following letter which has been addressed to the Review:

DEAR SIR,—"I notice a communication in your issue of the 24th inst., written over the name "Veritas," stating that the report of the proceedings of the last meeting of our Council was not correct, and being the reporter of the proceedings of the Council my attention has been drawn to that part of the letter. The meeting in question was the Court of Revision, and not a regular meeting of the Council, consequently no business other than affecting the court could be transacted. Immediately after the adjournment of the court, the Council met for a short time to pass some accounts, but the matter referred to was not brought on, or it certainly would have appeared in the minutes."

Yours respectfully,

VIVE LES CANADIENS.

Canada's Natal Day.

HOW IT IS TO BE OBSERVED IN PETERBOROUGH.

The fourteenth anniversary of the Confederation of the British American Provinces will be celebrated to-morrow throughout the Dominion in almost every hamlet, village, town and city from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and Peterborough, if we are to judge from the list of amusements announced will not be behind in providing for the fitting entertainment of her citizens and visitors. As mentioned in previous issues the principal attractions will be under the auspices of the Fire Brigade—a body which, no matter how its personnel may change, is always foremost in catering for the amusement of the townspeople. This year the chief feature of the day's programme will be or a representation of the trade and commerce of the town, on wheels, revealing to the uninitiated the modus operandi of the several branches shown. It is contemplated that over sixty vehicles will be brought into requisition, and almost every department of trade in town represented. It will be a sight well worth seeing, and the committee who have the matter in charge are to be congratulated on the success which has attended their efforts. The procession will move from the Agricultural Grounds at 12.30 o'clock sharp, and after proceeding through the principal streets will return to the place of starting, where a programme of burlesque athletic sports will be competed for. Entries for all the sports have already been made, and the contestants (in character) will represent Nature's children, from a downeast Yankee to a Zulu chief. In the evening a grand promenade concert will be given in the Drill Shed by the Fire Brigade Band, interspersed with a series of gymnastic, calisthenic and acrobatic performances. At the close a torchlight procession will proceed from the Drill Shed and parade the principal streets to the Market Square, where the day's celebration will be brought to a close by a magnificent display of fire-works, under the direction of Prof. Dixon, of Hamilton, embracing a very large number of exceedingly fine pieces.

A LACROSSE MATCH

between the Independents, of Toronto, and the Peterborough Club, will be a claimant for public favor during the afternoon, on the Cricket Grounds, Ashburnham. From the lively interest taken in Canada's national game by the citizens generally, we predict a very large attendance. The game will, no doubt, be close and interesting, and admirers of lacrosse will, we believe, have the opportunity of witnessing the best game that has yet taken place in Peterborough. The Peterboroughs have been practising both diligently and vigorously, and will be able to place a strong team upon the field—and one which we feel sure will give a good account of itself. In the Independents they will have practised and powerful opponents, as they rank the leading junior club of the Queen City, and have been successful in almost every match which they have played since their organization. We are requested to state that ample seating accommodation will be provided for the ladies. The ball will be faced at half-past two o'clock sharp. The following are the names of the Peterborough team:

Field Captain—H. LeBrun.
Goal—W. Sanderson.
Point—W. Rudkins.
Cover Point—J. Coughlin.
Defence—P. Rudkins, J. Simpson.
Centre Field—J. Sheehy, M. McDonald, M. Halpin.
Home Field—H. Phelan, R. H. Fortye.
Home—M. Hackett, C. Rutherford.

A CRICKET MATCH.

We believe it is the intention of the Cricket Club to hold a scratch match in the morning, wickets to be pitched at 9.30 o'clock.

REGATTA AT IDYL-WILD.

This favorite summer resort will no doubt be the centre of attraction for those who may wish to spend the day out of town. Besides the ordinary attractions for a day's outing, which are always to be found at this popular resort, a grand regatta is announced, at which will be competed for the Idyl-Wild Champion Cup for single scullers; the Champion Paddler's Cup; and cups for a double canoe race. The Golden-Eye will leave her wharf at 7 o'clock, calling at all points on the river. Return tickets 50 cents.

HALF FARE EXCURSIONS.

Return tickets at single fare will be issued from all stations on the line of the Midland and Grand Junction Railways, so that those contemplating a trip to or from Peterborough to-morrow will have every facility offered. Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay, Millbrook and Lakefield each have their celebrations, but we question if in any of those places the day's proceedings will be as interesting or attractive as in Peterborough.

THE COUNTY BRIDGES.

THE LAKEFIELD, YOUNG'S POINT, AND BURLEIGH BRIDGES EXAMINED BY THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

As announced in last week's EXAMINER the County Council took the noon train for Lakefield for the purpose of examining the bridges at the above places. At Lakefield, the Councillors were met at the station by the village Council of Lakefield, and were escorted to Mr. Berube's hotel, where the Council had provided dinner for their visiting brethern. After dinner the company wended their way north to the steamer Cruiser, which had kindly been placed at their disposal by the genial proprietors, Messrs. Captain Sacret and Mr. W. H. Casement. At Young's Point and Burleigh, the bridges were examined and some repairs in accordance with the report of the County Engineer were deemed quite necessary. On the home trip from Burleigh the Councillors, including those of the village of Lakefield, took advantage of the time and discussed County and other matters until they arrived at Lakefield. Arriving at Lakefield the bridge was duly examined, and the decision of the Council will be found in our report of the Council proceedings. The trip was a delightful one, and the scenery beautiful. All of which has been frequently written up in these columns.

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 30, 1881.

The "Mail" on Mr. Blake.

If one were to desire a tangible and manifest proof of the shaking up of the dry bones of the Tory party which has been occasioned by Mr. Blake's vigorous course as leader of the Liberal party, we find it readily on turning to any of the recent issues of the Toronto organ of the Dominion Government. Commencing with a four-column article, the most slanderous and villainous which has appeared since it declared a few years ago that it was "necessary to stab somebody under the fifth rib every other day," the Mail has followed up the attack with a diurnal assault upon the Liberal leader, each one a little more libellous and unscrupulous than its fore-runner. This sudden change of attitude towards Mr. Blake may have been a surprise to those who have hitherto been amused at the course pursued by the organ towards the man it most fears, and consequently most hates. Formerly, the artist of the Mail was wont to treat Mr. Blake with an airy flippancy, and to direct towards him an inane sarcasm, in which the desire to ridicule was not more evident than the absence of wit was conspicuous. Mr. Blake was sneered at as a harmless visionary, an impracticable politician, a leader whose guidance of his party merely served as a source of amusement, but never of alarm, for the Tory gods of the official Olympus, on whose august brows sit enthroned all the virtues. Probably some glimmering sense of the absurdity of such a position has at last dawned upon the obtuseness of the Mail man, and all at once that journal has discovered that Mr. Blake is not only an able man, but a bad, bold, treacherous and unscrupulous one. Hence the ass has enveloped himself in a lion's skin, and opened the vials of vituperation upon Mr. Blake. The reason is not far to seek. The Opposition leader is about to pay a visit to the Maritime Provinces to deliver a series of addresses to our fellow-victims of the taxation tariff who dwell down by the sea. The unmistakable results of Mr. Blake's appeals to the people of Ontario and Quebec, have thoroughly alarmed the Mail as to the probable consequences of his coming phillipics among the people of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and it resolved at once to cast away every suggestion of decency and fair-play, and to resort to the more congenial weapons of ribald slander and obscene malice with which Sir Charles Tupper's henchman is most familiar. The unfeathered shafts of a maudlin ridicule falling wide of the mark, the professional "rib-stabber" resorts naturally to the stiletto. People who have been accustomed to follow the utterances of our public men, will no doubt be edified at the announcement that: "It is notorious that Mr. Blake has been "a very abusive public man. No one "ever pursued Sir John Macdonald with "meaner insinuations, with viler personalities, with more cruel denunciation, "than did Mr. Blake. Not one of his "party ever offended more against Christian truth and social decency than did "Mr. Blake in his years of insult to the "Liberal-Conservative party." This is news indeed of a man from whose public speeches we defy this blatant Bluenose to extract a single sentence to warrant his assertion. The article proceeds to say that Mr. Blake, however, "cautiously abstained" from hitting at the Great Stretcher, intimating that that red-letter-able knight is not, like Sir John [illegible] trifled with. Fancy anything more sensical or more maliciously false this:—"He (Mr. Blake) has been ma[illegible] "in the House of Commons for one particularity which should disgrace any "man of his lofty pretensions—that is, "he always watches his chance to insult, "to discompose, to outrage some young "member who is not expert in debate; "and after one of those exhibitions of "party malignity he flings himself back "into his chair, with an air of specious "triumph which is at once odious and "ridiculous. He has violated the social "decencies of public life more than any "other man in the House, and no better "example of this could be given than his "retailing and misrepresenting at Montreal "the private conversations, beginning and "ending in chaff, of members in the "House of Commons." It is not necessary in this Province to contradict such outrageously mendacious statements as these—we merely give them as specimens of what impotent malice, exasperated by a wholesome fear of the political future of its leaders, will resort to. Unscrupulous men, of unclean reputation, such as the Minister of Railways, whose special toady now blows the bellows of the Mail, may well be alarmed at the rapid advance in popular confidence of such a man as Mr. Blake, whose commanding talents are governed by principle, patriotism and integrity, and who brings to his powerful advocacy of the cause of popular rights, what is at once to such men as Sir Charles Tupper a cause of anger and of envy—an unsullied character, which is invulnerable to all assaults of slander and libel. As for the effect of the Mail's diatribes among the people of the Maritime Provinces, where they are specially intended to precede Mr. Blake, to disparage him in the public mind, Mr. Blake's first appearance and his first speech will be all that is necessary to dissipate these foolish misrepresentations like dew under the sun.

THE BONUS BOOM.

CASH GRANTS REPUDIATED.

A COMMON SENSE SCHEME.

Free Water Power to be provided by the Town.

How Factories can be aided, and the Town secured against loss.

At the meeting of the Committee on Manufactures on Friday night last, there were present, the Mayor in the chair, Mr. Hilliard, M. P., Messrs. Geo. A. Cox, W. Paterson, A. Rutherford, T. Cahill, R. Rowe, R. Hall, Wm. Cluxton, John Garvey and others.

Mayor Smith said this meeting of the Committee had been called at the request of Mr. Toole, who had a scheme to submit for their consideration. He read a letter from Mr. Toole, which set forth that he was in a position to introduce a manufactory which would produce some $10,000 a year, business, and for which this locality was specially adapted; the details in connection with which he would personally explain to the Committee. It was proposed to establish the venture by means of a joint stock company, and they would ask reasonable assistance from the town by bonus, stock or otherwise. In the event of the submission of a by-law, he would indemnify the town for the expense of submitting the same. The Mayor also said that Mr. Geo. A. Cox had had some correspondence with a party who proposed to start a paper factory on a large scale.

In answer to a question by Mr. Cluxton, the Mayor said the enterprise alluded to by Mr. Toole, was, he understood, the manufacture of saws.

Mr. Rutherford suggested that the general question of the advisability of bonuses to manufactures should be gone into.

OUR MEMBER HEARD FROM.

Mr. Hilliard, M. P., being called on said his attention had been drawn to the subject by an opportunity afforded him of observing the rapid extension of manufactures in Montreal during the past two years. He thought it behooved our people here to see if they would not find it in their interest to induce manufacturers to come here. Nature had provided us with unexcelled facilities, but nature could not do all. It brought the harvest to our hand, but it left it for us to reap it. We had had the most magnificent water powers under the sun. There was power enough on the river to manufacture for the whole Dominion. It had been said that the owners of mill privileges had stood in the way of these being utilized, but he disputed this. There may have been lack of ability or means, and he thought the mill owners had their hands full with their business, and had no capital to spare; but he thought they would be found ready to do anything reasonable in the way of supplying power for manufactories. The lumber trade was disappearing and they must look about for something to take its place. He would admit that he was opposed to bonuses himself on principle, but what were they to do while other towns were offering bonuses? No manufacturer would come here while he could get a bonus elsewhere. He believed in liberal bonuses, and not stingy ones, and referred to his sacrifice in allowing his propetry to be brought under town taxation in order to facilitate the establishment of the Auburn factory, which, he contended was an indirect benefit to every man, woman and child in the town.

MR. WILLIAM CLUXTON

said his own feeling was against cash bonuses. He thought if any manufacturer came here he would be given exemption from taxes, but thought the feeling in the town was adverse to the giving of any bonuses. He would prefer to give a small bonus to the newspapers to write up the water powers we possessed, and bring the facilities we had for manufacturing to advantage before the public, in such a way as to attract attention abroad. A factory that would not succeed on its own merits would not be likely to be given any permanent success with a bonus. Giving bonuses would tend to induce people to go into manufacture for the sake of the bonus, and not on purely business grounds, and would only encourage people to go into business who were not likely to succeed. Any enterprise that was not started on proper business conditions, with the necessary capital and credit, could not in the natural course of things expect success. Then again, if we give a bonus to one, where is it going to end? How are we to draw a line? It had struck him that a better and safer plan of offering encouragement would be to acquire a ninety-nine years lease of the water privileges of the Dixon Estate, and bring the water down from McKee's mill to the bridge. The use of the water would be a better inducement than a bonus of $10,000 or $15,000.

In answer to Mr. Hilliard, Mr. Cluxton said his idea of getting a 99 years lease of the water power would of course be with a view of offering it by way of inducement to any manufacturer coming here.

FREE POWER APPROVED.

Mr. Hilliard thought the idea a good one, and that it would be found that the mill-owners would not stand in the way. He repeated again that he opposed bonuses in principle, but so long as other towns offered bonuses they would have to do the same if they desired to get manufactures. He would, however, aid nothing that was not new business, and would require evidence of the capital and other conditions, and the erection of buildings, before money was paid over or free power granted.

FACTORIES A NECESSITY.

Councillor Rutherford said the old by-law had given the Auburn factory $2,500, and it was the best money the town ever expended. That factory caused an expenditure of three or four hundred thousand dollars a year. He was astonished that men like Mr. Cox, Mr. Cluxton and Mr. Stevenson, who had so much property at stake, did not see that their own interests required the institution of manufacturing enterprises. The lumber trade was going down and unless factories were built up to take its place, there would be nothing to keep the town up. He opposed bonuses as a principle, but they had got to take the business view of it. If they could get another factory like the Auburn for $2,000 or $10,000, they would stand in their own light if they did not do so.

MR. RICHARD HALL

said he had opposed bonuses when the question was before the town on a former occasion, and he had seen nothing to change his opinion. He thought the principle of giving cash bonuses to manufacturers was a very wrong one. Mr. Cluxton's idea was not a new one. It had been brought up by himself and others some years ago, and people said they only wanted to sell the mill race, and the matter had been dropped. Such was not the case. The proposition was made in the interests of the town, and they were ready to let them go anywhere they chose for the water. If the town wanted to procure the water privileges to encourage manufactures they would find them willing to meet the town half way. He thought where we had large manufactories like Hamilton's and others it was wrong to bonus competition in opposition to them. There were other establishments in the town that employed many hands. His own establishment maintained twenty hands all the year round, and sometimes ran up to thirty. He considered Mr. Cluxton's suggestion an excellent one. The town would always have the water power. They could let parties put up buildings for manufacturing, with free water, and if they failed to carry out their contract the town would assume the buildings and hold them for some one else. In this way the town would always be secure, and the aid given would simply be a legitimate investment.

SUGGESTIONS.

Mr. Rutherford suggested that a small committee be appointed to make enquiries.

Mr. John Garvey thought free water privileges was a sufficient inducement to offer, and should be taken to protect the interests of the town. He was inclined to approve of this scheme, but did not think it desirable to offer bonuses. The new factory at Campbellford was taken there, not because of the bonus, but because the Gaults owned the privileges.

MR. GEO. A. COX,

here entered, and after explanations by the Mayor of the ground already gone over, said he thought Mr. Cluxton's idea was a good one. Any aid given could be confined to free power or a nominal rent, which was in itself an important advantage. He thought that was the safest way of affording assistance, because only men who meant business would be apt to take advantage of it. If one failed, then the property would be in the possession of the town to hand over to some one else.

Mr. Rutherford asked what would be done in the case of a factory requiring steam power. In the case of Mr. Toole, there was the building, steam, etc., and all it wanted was to have the machinery placed in and put in operation.

Mr. Cox said every application of the kind should be dealt with on its merits. They should be governed by the number of men employed, the nature of their work, the amount expended in wages, and the number of families to be brought to the town. He had had some communication with a person who proposed to start a large paper mill at Midland, and he would represent the advantages of Peterborough to him. In answer to a question he said the railway would be found ready to meet the wants of the manufacturers, as to sidings, etc. He approved of the idea that the papers should take up the matter and work up the advantages of the town before the public.

ACTION TAKEN.

The following resolution was then put and carried unanimously, after which the meeting adjourned:

Moved by Mr. Cluxton, seconded by Mr. Cox,—That for the purpose of encouraging the establishment of manufacturing industries in Peterborough, it is desirable to offer reasonable inducements to such undertakings; and it is the opinion of this Committee that this could best be done by leasing water power and offering privileges to companies willing to erect buildings and carry on manufacturing establishments, rent free; and as further inducement, the town might relieve such establishments from taxation for municipal purposes; and that a sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Paterson, Cox, Garvey and Cluxton be appointed to ascertain from the different owners of water privileges upon what terms the same can be obtained, and to report to this Committee at a future date. Mr. Cluxton to be chairman.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

THURSDAY.

The Council met this morning, all the members being present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and confirmed.

THE COURT HOUSE PARK.

Mr. H. H. Smith, Mayor, whereas presented, brought before the attention of the Council the desirability of allowing the Band to play in the Court House Park, as in other years, with the understanding that the town constables should see that no injury was done to the trees. He also wished to bring to the notice of the Council the case of a man named Noble, who was at present costing the town $4 a week, and who was never a ratepayer or resident of the town, while he had been informed that he had been a ratepayer in one of the eastern townships of the county. He thought the county should share with the town the cost of maintaining him. He also referred to the case of another man, who came from the eastern townships, who is now in the Protestant Home.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Stidd,—That after hearing Mayor Smith with reference to opening the park in front of the Court House for the use of the Band, the request be granted on the conditions offered by the Mayor, viz.: that a constable of the town be in attendance during the time it is opened, whose duties shall be to protect the trees and see that no wilful damage be done to the grounds. Carried with reference to the man Noble, the matter be referred to the Finance Committee.—Carried.

Township of Burleigh, &c	133
Township of Belmont and Methuen	250

The Council then adjourned until next morning at nine o'clock.

FRIDAY.

The Council met, all the members present.

The Minutes of yesterday were read and confirmed.

The Committee on Equalization reported, recommending that the basis of valuation be the same this year as last, and if it was moved in amendment by Mr. Hall, seconded by Mr. Lang,—That the report be amended, reducing North Monaghan $2.00 per acre.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Golborne, seconded by Mr. Brown,—That the thanks of the Council be tendered to the proprietors of the steamer Cruiser, Captain Secret and Mr. W. H. Casement, for their kindness in placing their boat at the disposal of the Council for a trip to view the Burleigh bridges.—Carried.

5. That the County Engineer be instructed to inspect the several County bridges just before the next February Session of this council, in order that he may be in a position to give full and reliable information with regard to the same at that session.

6. That in the matter of the petition of the ratepayers adjoining the boundary between Otonabee and Douro, your committee without going fully into the condition of the road complained of, or enquiring into the expenditure thereon, the respective Townships, previous to this year, would recommend that the sum of one hundred and eighty dollars be expended by each township of Douro and Otonabee in the following proportions, namely:—One hundred dollars to Otonabee and eighty dollars to Douro and they further recommend that if the representatives of these Townships in this Council will agree to make the expenditure themselves, this Council do not appoint Commissioners, or otherwise act under the provisions of the Act giving power to County Councils in the matter.

7. That no action be taken with regard to the claims of Mr. Pope for compensation for the removal of the Mud Lake bridge.

A By-Law respecting the county school fund for the current year was passed.

The Council then adjourned.

SATURDAY.

The Council met this morning, all the members being present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and confirmed.

THE BURYING GROUND.

Mr. Burnham presented the following report:—

The Special Committee appointed to confer with a committee of the Town Council with regard to the sale of the old Burying ground, and the purchase of another property in lieu thereof, beg leave to report that the Joint Committee at a meeting held on the evening of the 24th instant, came to the following finding:—

That the old Burying Ground property be sold either by tender or public auction or by private sale, as is deemed most expedient, and upon such terms of credit as may be deemed expedient.

That the proceeds of such sale shall be applied as follows:—In the first place, to the payment of all expenses incurred in such sale or the purchase of other property to be held by the town and county upon the same terms as the present property is held, and in the event of there being a surplus after such purchase it shall be expended in the improvement and beautifying of the property.

That the county shall not be liable to pay anything for the after maintenance of the said property.

That a committee be appointed to carry out the foregoing, composed of Messrs. Sanderson, Smith, Collins, Cahill, Pearce, Rutherford and Burnham; and your committee would recommend that the Council sanction the same.

The report was adopted.

COUNTY PROPERTY.

Mr. Rorke presented the following report

The Committee on County Property beg leave to report:

1st.—With reference to the procuring of Agricultural Show Grounds your committee recommend that no action be taken towards the disposal of the old Burial Grounds, until the Joint Committee appointed by the county and town, to whom the matter was referred, make their report, in accordance with a resolution passed by them.

2nd.—That a new roof be placed on the turnkey's apartments, and that new posts be put in the back of the woodshed, and that the same be boarded up.

3rd.—That the removal of the partition in the turnkey's department be done if found practical at a moderate expense, and a new one, to be lathed and plastered be built.

4th.—That the lower cells in the gaol be plastered with water lime; all of the above to be done under the supervision of the Warden and County Engineer.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

THOS. ROSE, Chairman.

June 28, 1881.

The report was received and adopted.

FINANCE REPORT.

Mr. Golborne presented the following second report of the Finance Committee.

1st.—That your committee find the total resources of the county for the current year will be about $31,426, and that there will be required for expenditure the sum of $32,262.86, which will require a rate of two and one-quarter mills on the dollar, to be levied and collected on the equalized value of the county.

2nd.—That in the matter of the debenture rates, your committee recommend that inasmuch as it appears that the amount that it is provided shall be levied under Debentures By-laws Nos. 326 and 372 will provide a sum largely in excess of the amount required; that the Clerk be instructed to levy such an amount only as will be sufficient to meet this year's sinking fund and interest, and that one-half of the rate provided under By-Law 444 be collected, for the reason that only one-half of the debentures authorized to be issued there under have been issued.

The report was adopted.

A SPECIAL GRANT.

Mr. Redmond, of Otonabee, addressed the Council, asking for a grant to assist in having a ploughing match under the auspices of the East and West Riding Agricultural Societies.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Kidd,—That a sum of $100 be granted to assist in the holding of a ploughing match, the money to be expended under the supervision of the Warden and Messrs. Kidd and Collins.—Carried.

NORWOOD HIGH SCHOOL.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Rorke,—That a special grant of $200 be given the Norwood High School.

Mr. Pearce in speaking to the motion referred to the high standing of the Norwood High School, the benefits the surrounding municipalities derived therefrom, and the high taxation their refusal to grant the amount would necessarily incur on the village; the unusual course the Warden had taken to defeat the grant, and the disappointment that it would be to the people of the eastern portion of the county should there refusal to assist the schools be the means of the schools efficiency being lowered.

The motion was voted down on the same division as the amendment to the adoption of the first Finance Report.

UPPER CANADA COLLEGE.

A memorial to the Lieut.-Governor-in-Council was presented in reference to the Upper Canada College.

HARVEY ROADS.

On motion of Mr. Oliver, seconded by Mr. Pearce, permission was given the Council of Harvey to establish a road in the township across lot No. 21, con. 16, less than 66 feet wide.

LICENSE.

On motion of Mr. Oliver, seconded by Mr. Pearce, a free license to peddle was granted Benjamin Ventress in the township of Harvey.

POWER TO APPEAL.

A motion was passed giving the Warden power to appeal in the case of the Grand Junction R. R.

BAND IN THE PARK.

Moved by Mr. Golborne, seconded by Mr. Rorke,—That since members of the this Council have seen injury done to numerous trees during the playing of the Band in the Court House Park, the permission given by a resolution of this Council for the use of the same for the Band be rescinded, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Mayor.—Carried.

WALLACE POINT BRIDGE.

Moved by Mr. Stewart, seconded by Mr. Lang,—That the approach from the Otonabee side to the Wallace Point Bridge be repaired, under the direction of the mover.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

THE NEW NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

Toronto Tribune

They make a fat advertisment of over a column to the Government organs; they raise the price of lands nearly all round; they provide a policy for pasturage lands, somewhat after the fashion of the disposal of timber limits by the Government. But the glaring defect to which we desire to draw attention is in regard to the colonization lands. Therein it is laid down:—"That it be distinctly "understood that the policy shall only "apply to schemes for colonization of the "public lands by emigrants from Great Britain or the European continent."

No Canadian scheme of colonization in the North-West for the young men of Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces, who are leaving our shores by thousands every year to find homes in the United States, is to be permitted by this so-called National-Policy Government! What could be more anti-national than to shut out our own people and their children from their national inheritance? Americans, Canadians, Irishmen, Germans, men of any country can form colonization settlements in the United States; but no class of Canadians can form a colonization settlement in their own country. Yet the policy of our patriotic government is the "National Policy!"

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced a remedy so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates the vital functions, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, JUNE 30, 1881.

Political Chips.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT received a hearty ovation at Belleville, where he was the guest of Col. Brown, M.P. The ex-Finance Minister is delivering a series of addresses in the Bay Quinte district, and has been met everywhere with enthusiasm.

POOR SIR HECTOR, the tin-pot knight of the $32,000, has beat an ignominious retreat from Ontario. The several "demonstrations" proved to be so many fizzles, even the Tories refusing to enthuse over a man with such an odorous reputation.

THE DOMINION Government pay a poor compliment to the many eminent Canadian Engineers, when they have to send to Washington for an Engineer to examine Toronto harbour and devise means for its improvement. Canada for the Canadians, indeed!

SENATOR CORNWALL has been rewarded for his ever ready response to the frequent calls of the Tory party upon his ample purse, by appointment as Lieut.-Governor of British Columbia, vice Hon. A. N. Richards, whose term of office expires on the 20th July.

IT IS to be hoped Mr. S. H. Blake will accept the nomination of the Liberals of East York. He would be an acquisition to any deliberative body. Forty years ago, his father, Hon. Wm. Hume Blake, one of the old pioneers of liberty, the confrere of Baldwin, represented this constituency in the old Parliament of Upper Canada.

TO OFFSET the falling off in population and declining business of Belleville, the Mail assures the N. P. devotees that a confectioner in that burg is building a shed 40 x 26, and concludes that "the consumption of sweet-meats is surely not "an evidence of scarcity of money!" This is giving the poor "N. P." taffy with a vengeance.

THE PUBLIC irrespective of politics will be glad to know of Sir John Macdonald's continued progress towards restored health. We shall be glad to see him back at the helm of the Government. As a contemporary says—if we must endure a Tory Government for a time, by all means let it be led by anything but a Tupper.

IN THE Pictou campaign, Dr. Tupper urged the coal miners of the county to support the Government candidate because the National Policy had taxed Ontario on coal alone $400,000, which he said went to benefit the Nova Scotia miners. For once the Doctor did not "stretch" the facts, the imposition on Ontario being considerably more than the amount stated.

THE TORY horn is exalted over the result of the Pictou election. In 1878, when the National Policy was still only a cry, the Tory vote in that county was 2,747. Now, after the "return of prosperity," with all the eloquence of Tupper, and under fear of his threats to abolish the coal duty, the vote has shrunk to 2,382, a falling off of 365 votes. At this rate of progress where will Tupper's friends be in 1883?

Notes and Comments.

THE canard to the effect that Sir John Macdonald was to be raised to the peerage, and created Governor-General in the place of the Marquis of Lorne, receives much ridicule in being contradicted in London.

WE HAVE it on excellent authority that the "heavy" columns of the Mail are now edited by Mr. Ponsonby de Tompkins, the gentleman who is immortalised by Mrs. P. de T., who edits the "editorial notes" in the same sheet.

THE EFFORTS of our government to encourage immigration from Germany, are not likely to be attended with any further success, owing to the action of the German Government, which has decided to put a stop if possible to emigration. Agents and companies are forbidden to publish their plausible, and the Reichstag, at its next session, will deal with a Bill to impede emigration.

The Toronto Telegram coincides with our view that the money expended in playing soldier, and the useless fuss and feathers of annual drills, might be expended to better advantage in purposes of utility. Upwards of $10,000,000 have been thrown away in this manner since 1867—and yet we are crying for public works and cannot get them because there are no funds!

MAYOR MACKINTOSH, of Ottawa, the unsavory gentleman who acted the part of contract-broker, and confidential go-between for unscrupulous Ministers and confiding contractors, and who fleeced poor old Mr. Whitehead so gorgeously, has been unseated from the Chief Magistracy of the capital. Ottawa has now a chance to purge itself from the disgrace it has carried for a few years past.

J. BURR PLUMB is very mad. Grip touched the galled jade on a raw spot, and it winced visibly in a communication to the Mail over J. B. P.'s signature. It is his humor to believe that Mr. Blake is a virulent and truculent political pirate, and that J. Burr Plumb is the essence of all that is refined and generous and decent in political life. As J. B. P.'s purse-strings loosen readily, it is the Mail's cue to give him such scope as he desires, albeit the infatuated rhymester inevitably succeeds in making a pitiable exhibition of himself.

ADVICES from England state that owing to the unprotected condition of Esquimalt and its importance as the only naval station Britain possesses on the American shores of the North Pacific Ocean, the Dominion Government has been induced to purchase from the Home Government heavy ordnance, &c., for the better equipment of the fortifications there. Sir John's liberality in supplying Canadian money for Imperial purposes, while Canadian public works go begging, is only equalled by his desire for Imperial distinction.

MR. SANDFORD FLEMING is the author of a proposition for a uniform standard of time throughout the world. He proposes that the hours shall be numbered from 1 to 24, and that the hour hand shall practically follow the sun. The plan is finding general favor among meteorological circles, and when the strangeness of it had worn off, would no doubt be very popular. It certainly would be a great convenience to travellers. In the United States and Canada there are now about 75 different standards of railway time, and in going a long journey, the frequent changes are very often a source of annoyance and delay.

That Marvelous purifier, Burdock Blood Bitters, will speedily change the sallow face to one of freshness health and beauty. It regulates the Bowels, acts promptly on the Liver and Kidneys and strengthens the system when broken down by Nervous or General Debility. Ask your Druggist for a Trial Bottle, the cost is only 10 Cents, Large Bottles $1.00. 24-26

North Waterloo Election.

The election for the Local House, in the North Riding of Waterloo, came off on Monday last, the result being as follows:—

	WALTER.	SNIDER.
Waterloo Town, majority	11	—
Berlin "	75	—
Wellesley Tp. "	79	—
Waterloo "	—	134
Westwich "	—	227
	165	491
Reform majority		326

This is an increase in the Reform majority of about seventy votes over the returns of 1879. The election is one of special significance. Owing to unwise councils and a weak candidate in North Ontario, the Liberal party lost a seat formerly held by them, and the Conservative party have been crowing very loudly ever since over the election of Mr. Madill by a majority of three. In the recent contest both parties threw their full strength into the fight, one party to improve upon their gain, the other to demonstrate the strength and popularity of their cause and their ability to win under equal conditions. More importance, too, is attached to the result, as the two features of policy prominently before the electors were, the hostility of the Dominion Cabinet to Ontario, in the matter of the Boundary award, and the other the interference of the Dominion executive with the domestic affairs of the Province, by the arbitrary use of the veto power in the matter of the disallowance of the Streams Bill. On these issues at the polls the Liberal party secured a most decided victory, and plainly indicated the fate of the Tory member for that riding in the Commons, when his constituents call him to account in 1883.

Trent Valley Canal.

We must confess that we are reluctantly compelled to revert to our formerly expressed suspicions of Sir Charles Tupper's sincerity in taking up this important matter. At last, after the rude shock of the East Northumberland election had awakened the Government to the necessities of "doing something," we have an engineer sent on, a stranger to the scheme, who has devoted no attention to it, who ignores all that has already been done in Mr. Stark's survey, and whose instructions are to make a "general survey" for report to the Minister. He admits that for that purpose the money voted is wholly insufficient, and Sir Chas. Tupper in asking the vote, contemplating this new and expensive survey, must have known that to be the case. It is admitted that the survey cannot be furnished this year, and then?—we shall be in precisely the same position as Mr. Stark's report left us. We are forced to the conclusion, for the present, that, as we opined in the beginning, Sir Charles Tupper's scheme is to keep the project dangling in this position till just before the general elections, when it will be played as the trump card of the Tory hand in the Midland district. We apprehend, however, that the people have been trifled with long enough, and will not endure much more of it without resentment.

We might call attention of our county members to another fact, not to put blame upon them, but to enable them to obviate the necessity for complaint. We hear that the employment to be provided in connection with the survey, is being booked for hangers-on of Deputy-Minister Trudeau and the members of the Ottawa district. This is an old trick of the Ottawa manipulators, and we hope our members will see to it that, at least, their friends get a share of the spoils. Let us get the benefit of the expenditure for the survey, if we never get the canal.

We shall at the same time be most happy to see the ground for these suspicions removed by a more vigorous policy on the part of the Minister of Railways.

Encouragement to Manufacturers.

The opinions expressed at the recent meeting of the Committee on Manufactures, amply demonstrated the correctness of our position, that the town is not prepared or willing to adopt the plan of offering cash bonuses to manufactures. As was very properly pointed out by Mr. Cluxton, any business which has not the necessary capital, and which would not be likely to succeed in the ordinary competition of trade, would not be at all likely to be given any permanent success by a bonus. If there are favorable conditions here for manufactures of any kind, if there is room in the markets of the Dominion for profitable production, then there is no need of a bonus. But it is one thing to take the money of the taxpayers and furnish capital for impecunious adventurers to start business with, and it is another to aid, in a reasonable, safe and rational way, by a settled policy as a community, in the establishment of new industries. If by a safe investment of a portion the funds of the town, by loan or in stock, or in affording some other inducement to manufacturers to start production amongst us, we can ensure the extension of our field of industry, the increase of population, the expansion of trade, and the enlargement of the circulation of money, then it may be found in our own interest to afford that assistance. The idea which found favor with the meeting, of the proceedings of which a report will be found in another column, however, appears to us to combine the best and most effective inducements we could offer to any legitimate enterprise, with at the same time absolute security to the town as to its investment. Our own people, who are so familar with the water powers of the Otonabee that they fail to grasp their great value, can hardly realise the importance to a capitalist intending to embark in manufacturing enterprise, of an offer of free motive power, of such capacity, and at so advantageous a point of distribution, as at Peterborough. Any man or company having means to invest in that way, would infinitely prefer such a privilege to a bonus of $10,000 or $15,000. So far as the town is concerned, under this plan it could absolutely lose nothing. It would retain the power; if a factory failed, then the building and power would be there to be handed over to another; and if it succeeded the town would reap the benefit in a hundred ways. This scheme appears to us to possess the valuable elements of prudence and common sense, and we hope it will not be lost sight of. We apprehend that the owners of the water powers will be found ready to meet the town half way, and to accept a rental from the town not more than equivalent to a moderate interest upon a reasonable estimate of the value of the capital locked up in the privileges.

Peterborough Markets.

PETERBOROUGH, June 30, 1881.

In the grain market there is rather more doing, the price of wheat having advanced during the week, and selling at $1.18 to $1.19; a few loads of extra brought $1.20. The market closes rather weaker. Oats are offering freely; worth 36c.; quiet sale. In peas nothing doing—few offering; will bring 65c. In other grains there is nothing doing—none offering. Wool is quiet at about 22c. Toronto price 23c., and quoted dull at that. American and English markets easier; receipts for the week small. On the Market there are very few changes in price. Eggs have been in good request at 12½ to 14 cents. Butter 14c. to 15c.; quantity falling off. Chickens continue to be offered freely for the season; rather slow sale, at 40c. to 50c. Lamb was offered on Saturday, and sold by the quarter at 9 to 10 cents; sold quickly. Strawberries have advanced; some selling at 12½ cents per quart. They will soon be over. Apples scarce. Some very fine ones sold at $1.25 per bushel. Gooseberries sold from 6c. to 8c. per quart. This is about the only fruit offering.

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents.—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

THE BELLEVILLE EXCURSION.

Belleville ho! was the cry Tuesday morning, and as eager footsteps wended their way to the Midland station as the hour for starting approached, even a careless observer would have noticed the air of pleasant expectancy which everywhere prevailed. The conspicuous absence of that ordinary pic-nic nuisance, the lunch basket, was a marked feature in the morning's promise of an enjoyable day, and added fervor to our mental congratulations that we, for once, were not going to make a toil of pleasure; that, in short, we were not going on an Exertion. Ample coach accommodation for a large number had been secured, but for various reasons our church interests were not as well represented as we would wish. We felt disappointed, but concluded that this cloud must not be permitted to shadow our day of pleasure, and so, under the management of the genial Grand Junction Conductor, Mr. Brownlee, we steamed away from the Ashburnham depot in that admirable state of mind, which like the famous Alchemist's stone, turns to gold whatever it touches. The ride was charming; fine fields of waving grain in ever-varying tints of green, broad belts of woodland, sweet shady nooks, hills crowned with verdure, all combined with the fair panorama of azure sky and golden sunshine to make a succession of pictures never to be forgotten. At Keene, Hastings and Campbellford we gained quite an accession to our numbers. On we sped, pleasant conversation and sparkling wit, adding zest to the already abundant pleasure of the ride. We reached Belleville about 12.30, the train stopping on Bridge st., a very short distance from the church. Flags were flying in various parts of the city in honor of our arrival, smiling faces greeted us at every turn, in fact the very air breathed a welcome which was highly gratifying. As we were conducted to seats in the Bridge st. Methodist Church, the organist, Miss Jones, executed several very fine pieces, evincing not only a kindly spirit but her own artistic power. Dr. Jeffers, pastor of the church, offered prayer and then in a few pleasing remarks extended a hearty welcome to the Peterborough friends, predicting that this happy union of church interests was but a token of the bond which should yet unite their flourishing city to our prosperous town. Then we repaired to the basement, and never did fairer vision dawn on the eyes of the hungry than met our gaze as we entered the Sabbath School auditorium. We congratulate our lady friends in Belleville, on the cultivated taste, the culinary skill and generous provision displayed on the lunch-tables. After suitable attention to the wants of "the inner man," we proceeded to inspect the Church and Sunday School room. Everything had been well planned and carefully as well as tastefully executed. A friend took us to the heart of the city where we visited two or three of the larger establishments, Messrs. Brignall & Thompson's Dry Goods Store, Tickell's Furniture Emporium, Brock's Photograph Rooms, and a large crockery depot, the name of whose proprietors we forget. Everything in these departments seemed to be carried on in first-class style. The City Hall was open to visitors and many availed themselves of this opportunity to take a lofty view of many points of attraction, which our limited time prevented us from visiting. Some improved their time by driving round the city; others took a short trip on the blue waters of the Bay; while others renewed old-time friendships, and for the hour forgot the ravages of time and change. Unfortunately, a very heavy shower came on about four o'clock, our hour for starting home, but even this was not sufficient to damp the enthusiastic enjoyment, which was felt and expressed by all. The sky soon cleared, the sun's shining banner was again unfurled, and away we went on our homeward track, sorry for those who had missed the day's rare pleasure; but glad at heart that we could always look back upon this one day of pure enjoyment. We reached the Midland station about half-past eight, wearied it is true, and glad of the home faces and kindly voices that greeted our return; but more than satisfied with our delightful trip to Belleville.

PREPARED FOR SPRING.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, and all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopess, from Brazil, acts as a gentle purgative. It is just introduced into this country. The remarkable results of a few doses are most suprising. Ask J. D. Tully or T. Mr. Wm. Graham, of the 4th line of Smith, occupied the pulpit of the Baptist Church on Sunday morning, and Mr. Robert Fairbairn in the evening.

We note among the names of gentlemen registered at the Canadian Government office, London, during the past two weeks, that of Mr. Edward J. Toker, of the Review.

Mr. R. Graham, of Lakefield, and Mr. W. Sharpe, of Westwood, left on Wednesday evening for Scotland. We trust that their trip will be both pleasant and profitable.

On Sunday last, Rev. Alex. Allan, B. A., who is about to enter upon the duties of Vice-Principal of the Collegiate School, and Canon of the Cathedral at Victoria, B. C., was ordained by his father, Rural Dean Allan, Rector of Cavan.

Mr. F. Mercer left on Monday evening for Winnipeg. Mr. J. Mercer left on Tuesday evening and joined his brother at Toronto, bound for the same place. They have the best wishes of numerous friends for their welfare.

Mr. F. E. Dobbin, of the Review, has accepted a position on the Lindsay Post, and will shortly leave Peterborough for his new field of labor. What is the Review's loss is the Post's gain. We think Mr. Barr has made a good selection to fill the place recently vacated by Mr. O'Bierne.

Mr. William Lakes, of Toronto, late miller and tester for the Government, has been appointed to a position in connection with the outside service of the Finance Department. It is understood that the office is a new one which has been created in connection with the grinding-in-bond system.

We are pleased to observe that Rev. Mr. Blain, formerly of Springville, now stationed in charge of the Presbyterian church at Tara, County of Bruce, has established the same popularity there, as he held here. Lately his parishioners gave him a tangible expression of their regard, in a present of a handsome covered buggy and a set of gold-mounted harness.

Mr. W. M. O'Bierne, of the Lindsay Post, has purchased the Napanee Express plant, and has assumed control of that establishment. Mr. O'Bierne is a good newspaper man, and has been well schooled by our friend Barr, of the Lindsay Post, and will, we have no doubt, make the Express a power for good in that section. He has our best wishes for his success.

Mr. J. T. White, of Brockville, formerly of this town, has been appointed to the honorable position of special agent for Eastern Ontario of the Canada Life Assurance Company. In this connection the Recorder, of Brockville, says:—"By the change Mr. White is likely to leave town, and when we say we regret this fact we, we but echo the thoughts and words of the mass of our population. During the twelve years in which Mr. White has lived here he has won hosts of warm friends and has done yeoman service to his fellow-citizens, having been intimately connected with our local educational interests.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA R. R.

The Globe states that an adjourned meeting of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway was held in the Company's offices, No. 18 Court street, at noon on Monday. Reports presented show that the line is all staked out from Peterborough to within a mile of Perth, and men are now engaged in purchasing the balance of the right of way. The meeting was again adjourned until July 5th.

A despatch to the Toronto papers says:—Mr. Campbell, of Port Perry, has commenced to purchase the right of way for the Toronto and Ottawa Railway between Peterborough and Madoc, and where the line crosses the Brockville and Ottawa Railway. It it expected that work will be actively begun within a few days in constructing the line.

We earnestly hope and pray that no one else will let their sick suffer as we did, on account prejudice against so good a medicine as Hop Bitters."—The Parents, Telegram. 24-3ins

It would be nice cold with some of the pickle walnuths of your mother's. Tell her to save me a few. I know you will help yourself, you are such a girl for vinegar."

IF WE KNEW.

If we knew the waves of sorrow,
Yet to meet us on life's sea,
If we knew the coming troubles,
How much better it would be.
Careful then the helm still guiding.
Safer course we would pursue,
Not in sand we'd drop our anchor—
If we knew.

If we knew the pelting pitiless,
That the heart must suffer here;
If we knew the petty treasons—
The loves that often disappear.
We would steel our souls to meet them,
And our tears would be but few—
We would thrive, all care defying,
If we knew.

If we knew when graves would open,
And our dear ones lay them down,
One by one in silent order—
We would never wear a frown.
Day by day, for each preparing,
Would our fortitude renew,
Till our spirits grew courageous—
If we knew.

If we knew! Vain supposition;
Knowledge would not bring us rest,
Life would then be all preparing—
We would know if it were best.
Woes to come look darker ever
Than they seem at nearer view—
All were paralysed endeavour,
If we knew.

Never doom His love mistaken;
Author of created things,
He hath not yet made to-morrow,
And each day its own cloud brings.
Some will say, to know is wisdom;
Only part of that is true—
Life would scarce be worth the living,
If we knew.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

PRESERVING BUTTER.

A. asks whether sugar and saltpetre added to salt preserve butter any more perfectly than when salt is used alone, and, if so, in what proportion they should be worked into the butter, or placed between the layers. For myself, among the many who will reply to the question, I will say no, most decidedly, as to the first part of the question. There is already sugar sufficient in butter when made from natural butter-making cows, which have had good pasture in summer, and early cut and well-cured timothy and clover hay, and bright corn-stalks, with corn meal and wheat bran in winter, with clean, warm, well ventilated stables. The milk and cream must be properly cared for after the cow has done her part. There can be no good resulting from the use of saltpetre in any way; only an injury, being foreign entirely to anything in the food of the cow. It is nitrate of potash—"sweat of rocks." The idea of buying saltparte, annatto or any other preparation, to preserve butter or to change its color from a natural to an unnatural shade must have originated in the minds of those who are unskilled in the true principles of making choice butter. A. must in all respects have his butter perfect when ready to pack, and salted with one ounce of Ashton or Higgin's salt to the pound of fresh butter. Select the best perfectly glazed stone crocks. On the bottom place a small quantity of salt. Over the salt place a thin, well-bleached muslin cloth that has been saturated with brine. Upon this cloth place the butter, carefully pressed, so as to have no hollow places. Fill within half an inch of top. Over the butter place a cloth, tightly fitting around the edge of the butter. On this, when cold, pour a pint or more of as strong brine as can be made by the use of hot water and dairy salt. Cover with heavy paper on a board. Have ready a common box, large enough to receive the crock, with spaces on all sides of about two inches. At the bottom put an inch or two of salt. Put the crock in and fill all round with salt sufficient to cover the crock about two inches. Over all place a board. The box may be large enough for only one crock, or for a dozen or more. The object of burying in salt is to keep the butter from all impure atmosphere, sudden changes of the weather, and in an even cool temperature. When thus treated, provided the butter is perfect when placed in the crock, it will remain so for many months, as there is nothing to disturb it. Butter treated in this way retains all its original purity, and goes through a natural ripening, increasing that agreeable aroma so much desired—a rich, nutty taste.

I adopted this way of treating my butter some five years ago. My butter of June of one year thus handled remains perfectly good until the next June, or later. During the two years past I have received many letters making enquiries as to my mode of saving butter—heavy dealers of Chicago amongst the number. I am asked by some if the strong brine does not make the butter too salt. My answer is that it does not. If packed in wood the brine needs replenishing, as much of it passes off through the pores of the wood. When this occurs, so that the butter is not surrounded on all sides with the brine, the butter becomes dry and soon rancid. Dry butter, with the dampness all drawn out in wooden packages soon becomes rancid or strong in the hands of shippers or dealers. For convenience in handling and keeping the brine from wasting, firkins are better than tubs. I do not say that bad butter can be made good by this method, as butter once injured in any way cannot be restored. The life of pure butter is prolonged by keeping it cool and safe from all atmospheric influences, even from electricity.—C. G. T. in Country Gentleman.

Cost of feeding for Beef.

From some experiments recently cited in this journal, as reported by Prof. Sanborn, Prof. Cook and Prof. E. W. Stewart, I showed that the cost of producing for beef, in the cases cited, was less than four cents a pound, and the cost of butter not over six cents. These were, of course, exceptional cases, and better than the present average of actual result. Yet there is no good reason why ordinary farmers may not come very nearly up to this standard, nor any sufficient excuse for their failing to make the effort. The following facts and figures may perhaps help to guide the earnest, progressive farmer in this direction:—

In the journal of the Bath and West of England Agricultural Society, a table is given, in which it appears that 12 pounds of clover hay are equivalent in feeding to one pound of beef; also, that eight pounds of beans or peas, or six pounds of barley, or oil-cake (either rape, linseed or cotton-seed), will give the same result; and further, that four and a half pounds of ground peas and linseed cake combined, will produce a pound of beef.

According to the late Alderman Mechi, seven pounds of grain (as an average for the leading cereals), will produce one pound of beef, at butcher's weight.

In an experiment of G. H. Chase, of Western New York, it was found that 28 quarts of ground barley per week, gave an increase of 18 pounds of flesh.

The editor of the Rural Annual, commenting on some experiments of Dr. Lawes, concludes that one bushel of corn, with 100 pounds of good hay, will produce 10 pounds of beef in a week.

In another case Dr. Lewis cites from an experiment of Biddell, a feeding ration for beef—comprising oil meal, wheat meal, cotton seed, mangels and straw, costing about $7 for four weeks, and equivalent to 60 pounds gain of flesh, plus one ton of short dung.

In the Farmers' Gazette it is stated that a daily ration of 2¼ pounds of bean meal and oil meal, in equal parts, added to cut straw will produce a pound of beef.

At the Willoughby Farmers' Club, in Ohio, Mr. Moore reported a result showing that steers fed with corn meal combined with cut clover and cut straw, gained two pounds a day at a cost of six cents for the beef.

Now, it is not claimed that the feeding material in these cases are all of them of peculiar value, nor that any of the rations, so far as they are defined, are specially remarkable, but the opinion intended here, in the instructive fact that in each case, if the manurial value is duly credited, the cost of the beef is less than four cents a pound, and in several cases less than three cents.—Rural.

European Crop Prospects.

Mail advices from the leading grain raising countries of Europe show the growing crops as a rule to be in a very satisfactory condition. The weather reports are generally favorable. The British wheat crop, with few local exceptions, which will not materially affect the result, promises well. Till last year the English farmers suffered from a series of bad harvests. If anything, the position of the French crops is not so well assured, but things are not so bad as to preclude the hope of a pretty fair yield. In Germany the want of rain has affected the crops more than in any other European country, and it especially has experienced considerable damage. Austria, Hungary, Italy, Holland and Roumania, promise satisfactory results from the growing cereals. The reports from Russia vary as to different districts, as might be expected in so large a country embracing such a variety of climatic conditions; but notwithstanding, everything points to a fair, if not abundant, wheat harvest. Last year the Russian wheat crop was a partial failure. Taking everything into consideration, up to the present time, Europe counts upon a good average harvest. It is a question whether Europe will need to import so much grain from this continent as last year, when the European supply was insufficient to fill up stocks which had been depleted by three or four preceding years of short crops.

Barns and Sheds.

Generally speaking, at this season of the year barns and sheds are usually empty, or nearly so. The store of hay, straw etc., has been fed out, and the grain and wool have been marketed. There is no time so favorable for the "fixing up" of things around and in the barns, and other out-buildings as now. There is usually a few days of comparative leisure after the corn is planted, before the work of cultivation begins in the fields, or the mower is started in the early meadow. A board nailed on in one place, and a new shingle here and there in the roof, may add greatly to the value of the fodder that is soon to be put under cover. It is through the little holes—they may be only large enough for rats or mice to pass—that much of a farmer's profits slip away. Stop all these leaks while they can be found. If the repairs can go so far as to give a new coat of paint to the barns and out-buildings, it will not only add to the attractiveness of the farm, but pay good interest on the investment in the greater durability of the buildings Paint does prevent decay and is profitable to use.

Salt.

A reason for the application of salt as a fertilizer for growing crops is that it contains both soda and chlorine. Nearly all contain these substances to some extent, and need to be supplied some plants contain more than others as, for instance, white clover contains five pounds of soda two pounds of chlorine in 1,000; tobacco contains seven pounds of soda and nine pounds of chlorine; beet seed contains eight pounds of soda and five pounds of chlorine, and all these are greatly benefitted by an application of salt.

Farm Notes.

CANADIAN CATTLE.—Here is something for our farmers to reflect upon. One day last week a single steamer took over to the other side of the Atlantic 1,020 head of Canadian and American cattle for one firm, and more it may be supposed, though it is not stated. It will pay our agriculturists to go far more extensively into this business than they are doing. The European markets will take all the meat we can send, and our farmers would have in addition to what they make on the sale the enrichment of the soil.

WOOL.—Wool has not come in in large quantities during the past week. Buyers are strongly of opinion that it would pay our farmers to make greater efforts than they appear to be making to meet the demand for the finer varieties of wool They say that while they can only pay 23 cents per pound for the wool which ordinarily finds its way to the market, the finer wools would command at least 30 cents per pound. Would not this be a good practical question for the Grangers to discuss?

THE CROPS.—Abundant as the hay crop was in this section of country last year that of the present season promises to surpass it. Unless it obtains another market, it looks at present as if it would be a drug on the farmers' hands. With such a lookout ahead it is no wonder that live cattle are scarce, and that the price for them rule high. Everything at present indicates a large yield of grain this fall, as the crops in this section of the Dominion are in excellent condition. The root crop looks well, and fruit will be an average yield, the frosts having done but slight damage. We hope the farmers will realize all their hopes and reap a rich harvest.

The report of the Secretary of the State Agricultural Society on Iowa crop prospects, embraces return from 98 counties, representing 826 townships. In corn, 97 counties estimate the acreage at 302,590 acres, and 99 counties place the average condition of the crop a fraction over 80 per cent. Of the acreage, 52 counties report losses from defective seed, and wire and cutworms are causing destruction in many instances. In 94 counties the acreage of the spring wheat is reported at 102,223, and 98 counties give the average condition at 87 per cent.; 53 counties report the chinch bug, in some cases doing much damage. 4 counties report serious damage from the Hessian fly, and the drouth has injured some fields.

A JUDGE AND JURY ON FENCING, DRAINING AND BREEDING.

In the address of Judge Dean to the Grand Jury at Lindsay, he strongly urged the desirability of taking advantage of the statute recently passed regarding the removal of fences which cause snow drifts, which would make a great improvement in winter roads. The Grand Jury cordially agreed with the remarks of His Honour, and thought it would be well to substitute some other kind of fence in bad places in lieu of the ordinary rail fence. The country, they declared is in a very good state with respect to the improvement in stock, which is one of the stepping-stones to prosperity. They were glad to see that the farmers are getting educated to the benefit of draining their lands, which not only improves the soil, but also the sanitary condition of the country, in warding off fevers and other epidemic diseases. In the course of his reply to the presentment, Judge Dean said he was glad to know that an enterprising citizen of Lindsay had had the courage to go to England and import two valuable stallions at a great expense. The result of introducing a good strain of blood into the stock of the country would be to add many thousands of dollars to the value of the stock. He thought the time had come when the Government might very well insist upon a license being taken out by persons keeping male animals to hire for breeding purposes, in order that no inferior animals might be allowed to propagate their species in the community. It would improve the value of the live stock in Ontario by millions of dollars if something of this kind were done.

THE ALEMBIC OF THE BODY.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wondrous chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it is vigorous the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation go on uninterrupted, and the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organism becomes weak and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disastrous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the supreme stomachic and aperient, NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURE, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which reforms a disordered and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes biliousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent re-action prejudical to the general health. Far preferable is it to the ordinary nauseous drugs used to produce a similar effect, but which are frequently ineffective as well as unpleasant; nor is it a cheap and valueless medicine, puffed into existence. It is used for dyspepsia, biliousness, affections of the blood, kidney complaints, female weakness, lumbago, &c., and in all blood diseases it is unequalled. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

CHAPTER III.

THE ANONYMOUS LETTER—DISINHERITED.

The city of which Cunningham Castle was the ruling centre, very speedily was startled by two equally amazing pieces of news, one following rapidly on the heels of the other, as thunder succeeds lightning.

The first was that Sir Hereward, on the evening of the children's fete, had proposed to and had been accepted by Mrs. Howard Deveril.

The other, that Herbert Cunningham had been secretly wedded to May Rivers, the curate's daughter, and had, in consequence, been banished the castle.

Rumor, many-tongued, whispered it; but confirmatory evidence soon followed.

It was stated that a terrible scene had taken place between the father and son, and that finally the latter had quitted the paternal roof, enraged, indignant, banished, though Mrs. Deveril had gone on her knees to entreat forgiveness for him.

For a wonder, rumor told the tale with truth, devoid of exaggeration. Even it was not wrong in saying that Sir Hereward's passion had been augmented by jealousy, for all had arisen the same evening which had begun taking place—a comedy that now promised to have a tragic ending.

Late on the afternoon succeeding the fete an anonymous letter had reached the Baronet. The envelope was poor and smirched, the caligraphy that of an uneducated servant-maid. The contents, in grammar equally bad as the spelling, informed him of his son's secret union with May Rivers.

The Baronet had read, confounded. He would not believe it—he could not. Had not Bertie before his very eyes made love to Mrs. Deveril? Never would he have done that as May River's husband. He never would have dared so to insult her, the widow, so soon to be his, Sir Hereward's wife.

Yes, that was it. Now her honor was his; an insult to her was an insult to him.

And May Rivers, too! To wed her, if he really had, the child of a half-starved parson, a Sunday-school teacher and parish-drudge—he, Herbert Cunningham, his heir! Heir! No; that must be seen to. The thing was preposterous—unheard of. When Herbert returned—who had been absent all day—he, his father, would force the truth from him.

Never had the Baronet been so angry—never in a state to be more easily worked upon. The matter so absorbed him, that he forgot the appointment he had made with Mrs. Deveril to show her over the Castle, and was only reminded of it by a footman announcing her presence in the drawing-room.

Sir Hereward felt he would need a grave excuse for so unlover-like a proceeding; and thought rightly none could be graver than the truth.

Smoothing his ruffled countenance, he hastened to her. She met him with a reproving smile.

"What a squire of dames!" she laughed. "I waited for you ten minutes, then came alone! I had half a mind to go back."

"Thank Heaven, dearest, you did not!" he answered, first kissing her hand, then her cheek. "How can I best sue for forgiveness? I will, if you wish it, do so at your feet, or perform any penance you may command, though when you hear the cause I fancy you will pardon me. The truth is, I have to-day received some bad news; but no, I cannot credit it."

"Oh, I am so sorry! Pray do not think of my idle words!" she exclaimed, in thrilling accents, her large, gray eyes full of compassionate sympathy. Then, taking a step nearer, resting one hand caressingly on his shoulder, looking tenderly into his face, she added, fondly, "May I know, Hereward? True, I am not your wife yet; but my heart is as much yours as if I were. As I am sure you would wish me to share your joys; may I not share your griefs? Oh, you look worried! Would, dearest love, besides hearing, I might aid you!"

Such pretty words would thrill a young lover's heart. How much more so one of sixty? The Baronet clasped her in his arms, and passionately looking down on the silken fringes now veiling her eyes, thought, "And that villain, a married man, dared insult her with his love!" Then he added, "My darling, if my anonymous informant has spoken truth, then it is out of anybody's power to aid. Let us be seated, Gwendoline, and I will tell you."

Mrs. Deveril listened with semblance of rapt interest and in silence until the Baronet spoke of the union; then, starting back in well-acted horror, "Married!" she ejaculated seeming greatly shocked. "Oh Sir Hereward, I will not believe it; Herbert is your son, and hence a gentleman. He cannot have acted so basely; he would not have dared!"

Then she stopped in seeming confusion, averting her face.

"Dared what, Gwendoline?"

"No, no; take no heed, pray," she murmured. "I know not what I said!"

"Darling, I cannot be silent. Speak!" urged the Baronet, holding her hand. "Let me why pain you? I know what you could say. Herbert led you to believe he loved you?"

"He did, though he never absolutely informed; yet his looks, his tones, spoke as passion. Oh, Sir Hereward! if my heart had not been otherwise engaged, what a wretched woman I might have been now! I might have given him my affection. But, oh, no, no! this cannot be!" she passionately, bursting into tears.

"Yet, if it were, can you wonder, though he is your son, that I feel grieved and insulted?"

"Gwendoline, he shall pay dearly for this; trust me!" exclaimed the infatuated lover.

"Not on my account, I entreat you, dearest!" she interrupted, placing her hand on his arm. "Rather let me, soon to be his mother as he will be my son dear, dear son—plead for him. I can—I will forgive." Hereward, I will love him for your sake."

Mrs. Deveril knew perfectly how to pour oil on fire.

The Baronet was not blind to his sixty years, nor the fact that in everybody's eyes a contrast between this lovely woman, who looked younger than she was, and his handsome boy would have been far more natural.

The idea of her loving Herbert as a son was not an agreeable idea to the young man's elderly and jealous father.

Mrs. Deveril knew it, and went on: "But how selfish I am to think of myself! It is you, Hereward, who need all the sympathy. To be so cruelly, so unfilially treated! Herbert, just for the sake of a pretty face, to marry a girl like that? He, your heir!"

"By Heaven, he is not my heir!" cried the Baronet, starting up in his wrath. "For this I disinherit him! Let him keep himself, or let the curate keep him. But it may not be true. I hate anonymous letters. Hark!" as a quick, firm step sounded in the hall; "here he comes. Thank goodness, we shall have the truth, at any rate."

Mrs. Deveril rose, with a little cry of alarm.

"Oh, Sir Hereward! I cannot be present. It would not be right; we will meet later."

Swiftly she crossed the drawing-room, and disappeared behind a satin curtain, which covered a door, as Herbert Cunningham entered.

Did he notice the flushing of that curtain? His eyes went in the direction. Did he suspect who had passed through?

"You have come most opportunely, Herbert," remarked the father, with effort controlling his excitement. "I desire to speak to you on a subject which has caused me considerable uneasiness."

The son looked curiously at the other. The reflex of the storm yet was on his features.

"It has come too soon," thought Herbert. Then, aloud, deferentially, "My time is yours, father. I perceive something has troubled you. What is it?"

"This." And with one hand Sir Hereward indicated the letter in the other. "Herbert, I put no trust in anonymous communications, so shall accept your word if you deny the truth of this. 'Is'"—his eyes fixed steadily on the young fellow—"what this letter states true or false?"

With deep misgiving, Herbert Cunningham, taking the paper, read it. As he did so, he started violently. Then his brow contracted, his teeth bit his lips, all color left his face.

With rising wrath the Baronet watched.

"Well?" he demanded, when he saw his son turn the page. "There is no more. Is it true or false?"

Herbert Cunningham raised his head. He was very pale, but calm. His glance met Sir Hereward's steadily.

"It is true," he answered, clearly. "May is my wife. It is a pity the information should have reached you through such a source. I would rather my own lips had told you."

"Source!" ejaculated the Baronet, with difficulty keeping his fury in curb. "You mean you know the writer of this?"

"I do; though how the knowledge has reached her I cannot imagine. Mrs. Howard Deveril wrote this letter!"

"Mrs. Howard Deveril!" cried Sir Hereward, the blood rushing to his forehead. "It is false! She was in ignorance of your folly till I informed her of it."

"It is true, sir; for no other than she exists who would have sought to do this injury."

"Have care, sir! Do not malign a woman you have already so basely insulted. What interest could your low amours have to her?"

"That, sir, of revenge?"

"Revenge?"

"No less. Listen to me, father. I may have done wrong—I have, I confess it; but, partly, it was for your sake. At any rate, in common justice, you will hear my extenuation? exclaimed Herbert, with sudden earnestness and force.

"Speak, sir; I do not refuse you that. At least one thing you cannot deny—May Rivers is your wife?"

"She is, father. For all Cunningham I would not deny it."

"It is well," interrupted the Baronet, halting in his angry pacing: "for that, sir, is the price you will pay for your mad infatuation for a pretty face."

"Did dear May only possess that, then would the price be too much; but she is as good and true as she is beautiful!" exclaimed the young husband, with enthusiasm. "If you did but know her, as one day I trust you will—"

"Never!"

"You are angry now—justly angry, owing to the source from which you have learned the truth; yet I will hope, knowing that your heart is not so stern and pitiless as you believe. That my secret marriage was a grave error I confess. May, hear me! It took place before I left last for college. May had many suitors, two of which her father strongly favored. With the fear of lovers, I could not rest until I had put a barrier to her union with another, which nothing but my death could destroy. The time was too short to obtain your consent. I knew, until you were better acquainted with May, you would never consent."

"Never!" interpolated the Baronet.

He was again pacing the room, his hands behind his back, his fingers twitching convulsively. He had given Herbert permission to speak. He listened with little interruption, for he had already pronounced the verdict, and had his son spoken until doomsday he could not then have altered it. As it happened, he made matters worse.

"We were married privately," proceeded Bertie. "I went to college for my last term. Eagerly I looked forward to its conclusion, determining when we again met to tell you all. But to commemorate my return, you gave a large party, and among the guests was a stranger—Mrs. Howard Deveril."

"What!" broke in Sir Hereward, wheeling short around; "have you the audacity to mention her—her to whom you, a married man, dared to make love? You see, sir, I am acquainted with all."

"No doubt from Mrs. Deveril's own lips."

"As my future wife, I forbid you to mention her name."

"I must; for of all this wretched misery she is the wilful cause. Stay!"—as the Baronet was about to speak—"you have promised to hear me."

"I have; proceed!" said Sir Hereward, clenching his teeth, and throwing himself on a chair.

"The evening had not elapsed before I read Mrs. Deveril thoroughly, and the plan she had in her mind."

Herbert paused; but the Baronet looked at him with a smile and an air of complacency which his son knew boded more danger than his wrath. He continued.

"This plan was to become mistress of Cunningham, by wedding either the father or the son. Love was no consideration to her, for she would have wedded either. She is beautiful, fascinating; hence was powerful. I saw even then you were not indifferent to her attractions. Father, had she been worthy of your affection," proceeded the son, fervently, "I never by Heaven I would not have acted as I did; but I accepted the attentions she speedily, as you know, lavished on me. I seemed to return them for your sake—to save you from becoming the prey of a beautiful but designing woman."

Sir Hereward's lip contracted sharply, but he remained silent. Though Cunningham, he was aware, was in the balance, Herbert was now determined to tell all. At least, he would try to open his father's eyes.

"I am telling you no new thing when I say I soon found favor with her. Inwardly I blushed at the part I was playing, but cunning can only be met by cunning; and I wished to show to you what this woman's love was worth. I hoped to devise some innocent means of disclosing it to you; for I knew that I had but to propose to be accepted. It sounds like egotism; it is truth. Yesterday, by word and look, she gave me fifty opportunities of doing so before you sent me to Ada Campbell. The fete kept us apart after that. When the children left, I had a conversation with my wife in the grounds. That conversation, I believe now, Mrs. Deveril overheard. She learned that I, even as she, had been plotting; but, unfortunately, the ball was in her hands. Five minutes later you must have met her, proposed, and been accepted. The sequel, sir, is yonder letter. Every line is eloquent of a malignant woman. This is her revenge, and to the grave she will be relentless. Would to Heaven, father, you could read her as well as I have read her!"

"Have you finished?" inquired the Baronet, in a firm but hard voice.

"I have; and what I have said I swear is truth," said the young man with emotion. "Father, your face tells me to what little effect I have spoken. But, I entreat you, pause! Reflect before you utter the words you are impatient to speak. I am your only son, your only child, and have been a dutiful one save in a single case. Think of the strong ties of affection which have united us until now. Oh, shall a woman part us forever? No, no; think, sir, of my mother!"

The Baronet had risen slowly from his chair; not a muscle of his face moved.

"Not one—it is two women who part us forever," he said. "Mark me, forever! You have made your choice; follow it. Go! leave this house at once; and never, while I live, shall you again put foot in it, or my curse will rest upon you!"

Almost automatically raising his arm, he pointed to the door.

At the same moment the satin curtain was dashed aside, and Mrs. Deveril, radiantly beautiful and in tears, rushing in, threw herself at Sir Hereward's feet.

"No, no!" she cried, clasping his knees and lifting her wet eyes; "not banishment! I cannot bear it. Let not me be the cause. For my sake, forgive—pardon him. He has sinned, but is repentant. He is your son, dear Hereward, and I am merely—"

"My wife!" exclaimed the Baronet, resting his hand fondly upon her head.

"Rise, madam!" broke in Herbert, hardly able—indeed, scarcely trying—to modify his indignation and scorn. "At least, you and I understand each other. Your hypocrisy and eavesdropping have gained you the victory; be content. Father, Farewell? I obey you, praying a time may speedily arrive when you and I—father and son—may be again united. It is not Cunningham, so much as your love, I regret. My love you still possess, and"—with a glance at the still kneeling widow—"pity."

Then he swung round, and without another word, quitted the apartment.

"Oh, Hereward, dearest," sobbed Mrs. Deveril, piteously, plaintively, "do I deserve this?"

He raised her, pressing her to his breast, kissing her lips.

"My darling, he answered, "some men, for their own purposes, would malign angels. Henceforth I have no son. In all the world I have but you to care for and love. Wait! He is a fool who needlessly delays important matters, even for a second."

Crossing to a davenport, he wrote a note hurriedly, sealed it, then rung the bell.

The widow watched him curiously, anxiously.

"See that this letter is delivered at once," he said, on the footman appearing; adding, as the man left, "It is to summon my lawyer. Gwendoline, I will not sleep until my will is made disinheriting my ungrateful son, and rendering you, dearest, safe."

"Oh, Hereward!"

And the widow dropped her face in her cambric handkerchief, to hide the smile of triumph that passed over it. Hers had been the victory indeed.

That night, Herbert Cunningham started for London with his young wife, ignorant—though the fact would not have surprised him—that at the same minute the will was being signed which disinherited him, and made Mrs. Deveril sole inheritrix.

A month later wedding-bells rang their merry peal, and the widow, leaning on the elderly bridegroom's arm, entered the castle as Lady Cunningham.

Those who write for fame, for honor, or emolument, cannot do better than use pens made by the Esterbrook Steel Pen Company. Samples furnished on application by addressing their office, 26 John Street, New York.

Artist (to a porter)—"You carried my picture to the Academy and handed it over to the committee?" Porter—"Yes, and it pleased 'em mightily. It would be done you good to see 'em laugh."

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.—In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Electric Bitters, we can vouch for as being a true and reliable remedy, and one that will do as recommended. They invariably cure Stomach and Liver Complaint, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary Difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Sold at fifty cents a bottle, by all druggists.

LOSS OF APPETITE IN CHILDREN.—From Charles H. Colgage, Manufacturer of Flavoring Extracts, 21 Blackstone street, Boston. Last Spring my little daughter, age five, became very much emaciated with loss of appetite, and great prostration of strength, so much so that we were obliged to take her out of school. This continued through the Summer and caused us much anxiety. After trying various remedies without deriving any benefit, our family physician recommended the use of Peruvian Syrup. After using it one week we saw a marked improvement in the child's condition, and in a month she was rapidly gaining in health and strength, her appetite being excellent. At this date she is perfectly well, with round, plump cheeks, and healthy color, and is again attending school regularly. I consider her restoration to health entirely due to the Peruvian Syrup, and feel that I cannot too highly recommend its merits." Druggists sell Peruvian Syrup.

MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price in a sealed envelope, on receipt of two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This lecture should be in the hands every youth and every man in the land.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

FALL ASSIZES.—Mr. Justice Armour will preside at the Fall Assizes, on this circuit, which will be held at Lindsay on Sept. 26th, Peterborough on Oct. 3rd, and Cobourg on Oct. 24th.

USE "CASTORINE MACHINE OIL" for all kinds of machinery. It is also excellent for Harness and Leather, making it water and weather proof. For sale by dealers. 1-ly

JUST RECEIVED.—New Black Cashmeres, Black Bunting Prints, New Tapestry Carpets, and Lace Curtains, New Boots and Shoes, also a splendid lot of New Tweed Suits for men and boys. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 20-tf

ENCOURAGING BUSINESS.—In order to afford facilities for people along the line of the Grand Junction Railway for doing their shopping in Peterborough, the new management are issuing return tickets to town every Saturday at one fare.

THE COBOURG R. R. BRIDGE.—The Grand Junction trains are at present crossing at the Midland bridge at Auburn, the Cobourg bridge, now the property of the Midland R. R., being about to undergo some necessary repairs, in order to make it perfectly safe for the heavy freight traffic of the Midland Railway.

DISAPPOINTED.—At the service in the Charlotte street Methodist Church, the crowd attending to hear the parting sermon of Rev. Mr. Starr was so large that the church was not only filled to suffocation, but hundreds had to be turned away from the doors.

USE THE celebrated "Lardine Oil" on your machinery. Best and cheapest oil in the market. Does not clog or gum. Has good heavy body and will not thin in summer. Sold in Peterborough by Messrs. McKee & Davidson; and in Lakefield by W. H. Casement. Try it and you will use no other. 25-52t

THE ONEMEE BRANCH.—We understand that the estimated cost of the construction of the line to connect Peterborough direct with Onemee, is in the neighborhood of $263,000. The distance is only thirteen miles, but the great natural difficulties to be overcome make the cost of construction a serious matter. We are not aware that the Company have yet decided to undertake so heavy a task at present.

THROWN FROM A BUGGY.—On Friday evening last, as Mr. Geo. T. Leonard was on his way to Burleigh, his horse became frightened from stepping on a sheep lying in the road, and ran away, throwing the occupants out, and inflicting severe injuries upon Mr. Leonard. We are glad to know, however, that he is recovering from the effects and will be able to be out shortly.

GEORGE POPE.—General Grocer, Wine and Spirit Merchant, Market Block, two doors north of the Review office, having taken out a liquor license, has just received a prime new stock of Old Rye and Malt Whiskeys, Brandies, Wines and Ales, including Davis' celebrated Canadian Ale, which he is prepared to supply at the closest possible prices for cash. Also a full assortment of family groceries and provisions. A call solicited.

IF Vennor knows anything about it we are going to have an eventful July. There will be hot waves and cold waves; storms of wind, rain and hail; an exceedingly hot term and nipping frosts. An old farmer who dated every other event from his eldest son's birth used to say, "The year my Colin was born there was snow in July." The July towards which we are now approaching promises to be such another era, if what Vennor says only comes to pass.

OFF ITS BASE.—Our contemporary the Review seems to be greatly troubled during the past week over changes the EXAMINER is making on its staff. The announcements made are about as correct as the general run of the literary music of this daily lyre. We feel for the little thing, knowing that it is at present being run without ballast. We speak the sentiments of most of the readers of the Review when we express our regret that the management did not see fit to accept the resignation of the editor when it was presented. The veriest twaddle, nonsense and slang, compose the dish that it serves up daily, much to the disgust of those who are accustomed to read newspapers for profit.

Boys' Tweed Suits are being sold by I Robinson & Co. for $3 and upwards, and men's good all wool suits for $8.00 and upwards. 10-tf

THE work of restoring St. John's church has been awarded to Messrs. D. Carlisle and A. Rutherford, for the sum of $9,-0000. The work will shortly be commenced and will be completed with as little delay as possible. The work has been entrusted to good men.

ON Friday evening about 7 p. m., a three year-old boy, son of the late Joseph Spencely, was drowned in the creek adjoing Mr. White's foundry in the western part of the town. The family live close to the creek on McDonnell street, and the child strayed away, it is supposed, to the bridge and fell in.

CANADA THISTLES.—"Take notice that you are required to cut down all Canada thistles growing on lands or roads owned or occupied by you in this road division within five days from the service of this notice," is what is being handed to the honest roadmaster nowadays. The notice does not appear to do any good from year to year, for the thistles are as bad as ever.

ANNIVERSAY EXCURSION.—The Building Committee of St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham intend holding a grand excursion on the steamer Golden-Eye, and picnic at Campbelltown, on Monday July 11th, the date of the Parish anniversary. The proceeds will be in aid of the parsonage fund and we hope it will be in every way successful. Tickets 40 cents; for children half price; family tickets (4 persons) $1,25.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL on Saturday rescinded their former motion allowing the Band to play in the Court House Green. This was caused by the Councillors having witnessed, the evening previous, the damage being done to the young trees by grown-up young men and women. In consequence of this refusal, we understand the Agricultural Grounds are to be used during the season, instead.

MIDLAND RAILWAY TRAFFIC RETURNS.—The Traffic Returns of the Midland Railway for the week ending June 4th, 1881, were:—Passengers and Mails, $1,848.81; Freight, $5,987.32; Total, $8,726.13, as compared with $7,396.74, for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $1,349.39; and the aggregate traffic to date is $133,461.85, being an increase of $10,860.61 over 1880.

ATTENTION is directed to the advertisement of Drs. Williams & Nash, in another column. The Doctors will visit Peterborough on Wednesday, July 6th, and on each Wednesday after, for the cure of all the various diseases of the head, throat and chest, including the eye, ear and heart. These gentlemen have the best of references from all parts of Canada from those already cured. They may be consulted at the Huffman House on the days above mentioned.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn that Mr. R. White sr. met with a very painful and serious accident on Monday. While driving on the Otonabee road, some colts which he was taking to pasture following, in turning about to look after the colts, his attention was withdrawn from his horse for a few minutes, when the buggy ran upon a stump, overturning and throwing Mr. White out, his hand unfortunately being seriously cut and lacerated. Dr. Kincaid was called in and dressed the wounded member.

HYMENEAL.—An interesting event took place on Wednesday, the 22nd instant, at the residence of William Hamilton, Esq., being the marriage of Mr. George Munro, to Miss Euphemie Hamilton. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. F. Torrance. After the pleasant affair the happy couple took the evening train to spend the honeymoon in the west. The many friends of Mr. Munro and his amiable bride will join us in the hope that they will find the new relationship mutually pleasant and prosperous.

CRICKET.—It is to be hoped that the match played last Friday will teach our team a lesson—not to play with old and accomplished players without constant practice and their strongest eleven. Although the bowling and fielding of our boys were excellent, their batting was loose and indifferent. In their first innings Port Hope made 126 runs while Peterboro' knocked together 60 runs altogether. Let our first eleven practise constantly and faithfully and we have no doubt that in the next game victory will crown their efforts.

BAND IN PARK.—Everything proved auspicious on Friday evening in making the open air concert in the Court House Park a success. The weather was all that could be desired, and in consequence a great many betook themselves there to spend a happy hour, listening to the sweet strains of music which were sent floating on the evening air. The selections were first class and the hearty applause given by the delighted promenaders must have been very encouraging to the Band. After "God save the Queen" had been rendered in true loyal style, the audience dispersed.

A MEETING of the Joint Committee of the Town and County Councils was held at the Council Chamber on Friday evening last. There were present Messrs. Sanderson, Barnham, McCarthy, Pearse, Collins, Brown, Laing, Rorke, Oliver, Moloney and Mansfield, of the County Council, and Messrs. Mayor Smith, and Councillors Cahill and Rutherford of the Town Council. Considerable discussion took place with reference to the disposal of the old burying ground, the particulars of which will be found in our report of Saturday's session of the County Council.

THE COMET.—The Comet on Saturday and Sunday evenings created considerable remarks, and many thousands of eyes were turned heavenward in quest of the luminous stranger, whose visits are so rare. About 9 o'clock it became visible. So little is known respecting the physical condition of comets that it would be hazardous to speculate concerning their real nature. Prof. Tyndall has put forward the ingenious theory that the tails of comets result from the formation of a species of actinic cloud by the action of the solar rays after their character has been altered during their passage through the comet's head. We owe to Newton the enunciation of the theory that comets travel in periodic orbits around the sun, and Halley proved that this theory was correct when he made the researches into the motions and periodic returns of the comet which bears the name. The real dimensions of comets must be regarded as inconceivably vast. The comet of 1680, one of the most remarkable of modern times, had a tail that was calculated at 20,000,000 of leagues immediately after its perihelion passage, and yet it was emitted in two days. It subsequently became more than twice as long. As a star of the fifth magnitude has been observed through the densest part of a comet without undergoing any diminution of lustre, their heads must be composed of matter of extreme thinness. The only feature which belongs to all comets is the coma, or haze of light. Many comets have no nucleus, and quite a large proportion have no tail; on the other hand, some comets have more than one tail.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.—This august body will hold their next regular meeting on Monday evening next.

CROWDED OUT.—A letter from "Grinchuckle," South Monaghan, treating on sundry affairs of that township in interesting style, will appear in next week's issue.

LIQUOR CASES.—The License Inspector, Mr. Cox, has laid information against several hotel-keepers, for selling liquor on Sunday, the 26th inst. We understand that, with rare sagacity, he has confined the list of witnesses summoned to two gentlemen, who he made sure could offer no evidence. The cases come up this morning.

WE CALL special attention to W. W. Johnston & Co.'s advertisement in to-day's issue. In addition to several large lines of special value, which they have just received, this firm will, during the month of July, give a cash discount of 10 per cent. off all purchases. Now is the time for housekeepers and others requiring cheap goods.

MORE MATRIMONY.—Yesterday, Mr. J. Pentland, of the firm of D. & J. Pentland, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Miss Sarah Clegg, eldest daughter of the late E. Clegg. The happy couple left on the evening train for a trip to the Georgian Bay, and expect to be absent about three weeks. We wish them all prosperity.

GRAND ELOCUTION TOURNAMENT AND CONCERT.—Such is the rather novel designation of an entertainment to be given in Bradburn's Hall, on Thursday evening, 7th July, by the members of the Literary Association of the Collegiate Institute, supported by Prof. Burke. The recitations given will be competitive, and some $40 of prizes are to be awarded to the most proficient, in the judgement of competent critics. In addition to these, the programme is interspersed with solos and duets, both vocal and instrumental, and a very enjoyable and profitable evening's entertainment may be relied upon. The whole will be concluded by a grand tableau. Admission only 15 cents; reserved seats 25 cents.

ACCIDENT.—On Monday morning Mr. William Deacon, of Ashburnham, while engaged in the saw mill of Irwin & Boyd, at Nassau, met with a rather unfortunate accident through his foot coming in contact with a small circular, severing the foot just below the instep. Medical aid was procured with despatch, and Mr. Deacon after having the foot dressed was removed to his home. Mr. Deacon's friends sympathise with him in his affliction. These kind of accidents, no matter how serious, seem to afford food for the humor of the local editor of the Review. No little disgust is expressed at the flippant manner in which so serious an occurrence is treated in the columns of that journal, and we would advise the responsible editor, if there be any, to shorten the young man's rope.

DOMESTIC INFIDELITY, DUCKSHOT AND DAMAGES.—On Monday evening an affair of a rather serious and exceedingly unpleasant nature occurred in the township of Otonabee. It seems that a woman living in Keene went out to wash for a party living in the township. Towards evening he drove her home, her husband having left in the morning, intimating that he would not return that evening. It appears, however, that he had suspicions of some kind or other, and hid himself under a bed, where, after the parties' return, he gathered evidence which he thought justified him in firing an old horse-pistol full of small shot into the neck of the country visitor, inflicting severe though not very serious wounds. The man injured in his feelings has now sued the man injured in the neck for $2,000, for wear and tear of the peace of the family. We withold the names for the present.

TUESDAY'S TORNADO.

The violent rainstorm, which visited here on Tuesday afternoon, appears by the reports to have been attended with serious and fatal results, by wind and lightning, elsewhere. At Brampton, a man named David, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. At Trenton lightning struck the house of G. T. Hughes, and injured Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. Sprung. In the more immediate vicinity serious damage is reported.

At Bowdley, a house and barn, belonging to very poor people was demolished, the heavy timbers being carried a distance of one hundred yards. Numerous trees were uprooted and thrown across the telegraph lines, interrupting communication with points where it is supposed damage of a still more serious nature occurred.

In the first concession of Cavan, great loss is entailed by the storm. The house and stable of a section-man of the Midland railway were totally destroyed. Mr. Henry Gibson's house and barns were levelled with the ground, and the house, barns and sheds of James Armstrong, destroyed. Mr. Richard Stewart's house and barn were razed to the earth, and his orchard uprooted, the trees being carried a considerable distance. Mrs. Stewart is supposed to be fatally injured. Mr. Richard Gilmour's three barns and sheds were demolished. Mrs. Little, a tenant on the place, was instantly killed, and one of Mr. Gilmour's horses, at pasture in an adjacent field, was killed by falling timbers. Numbers of buildings could be seen from the train with roofs gone, gables blown in, and otherwise injured by the storm.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR,—I have observed in the Review of June 20th, a letter signed "Veritas," the contents of which give ample evidence that the writer has no title to use such a signature, as he is evidently one of those whose policy it is to "make the worse appear the better reason," and if possible "prove truth to be a liar." The facts of the case are, briefly, that Mr. Robt. Lang, the gentleman referred to, was appointed by the Council to be Pathmaster, but not, as stated, at his own request. The letter says: "Then he went to the Council meeting and asked if they would allow him to gravel his own lane by statute labor, and they unanimously consented for him to do it." This is totally false. The Council were using gravel from a pit on Mr. Lang's property for the roads. At the Court of Revision, he applied to individual members of the Council for permission to use a few loads of gravel for his lane, on the ground that the drawing of the gravel for the roads was cutting it up. He was assured, informally, by members of the Council, that this reasonable request would be granted. Being Pathmaster, he took the course, without the knowledge, warrant, or authority of the Council, to put on the said lane twenty-five days' of statute labor, for which he will be held accountable and which the Council do not recognise as having been done on their behalf. The effort of the pseudo "Veritas" to lay the blame on the Council, for this improper action on the part of the Pathmaster, is on a par with the repute in which he is held by those who know him—and I can assure you, Mr. Editor, Veritas is pretty well known in the township, and his reputation is very high-flavoured, indeed. An "amateur casual" newsmonger, who takes the freedom of the road during stallion season, on the strength of acting as a sort of literary groom in the columns of the Review, ought not to rashly seek public distinction. As far as the political significance which "Veritas," who would, no doubt, like to warm a seat at the Council Board, is concerned, the only lesson I can see in the circumstances is, that the five Reformers trusted too much to the good faith of the "weak-kneed Conservative," and that like others of the same party in much higher stations, the latter could not resist the opportunity thus afforded of putting his finger in the public pocket.

I am, Sir,
Yours very truly,
A BYSTANDER.

South Monaghan, June 20th, 1881.

"CROWN JEWEL FLOUR"

NOTICE.

This Flour is made of No. 1 Hard Wheat by the new process, combined with the best methods and machinery in operation in the best Hungarian Mills, and will produce from 20 to 40 pounds more Bread per Barrel than the best superior wheat Flour. Therefore, the first cost though higher, is fully compensated in the increased yield of Bread as well as being a much better quality and more nutritious, having a much larger percentage of gluten and less of starch than ordinary wheat Flour. To those who may not be familiar with the use of this kind of Flour, we suggest mixing it moderately soft, which will require considerably more water than ordinarily used.

KNEAD THOROUGHLY, and bake with a strong heat and in such a manner that bottom and top shall be equally well baked.

A Terrible Crime.

THE U. S. PRESIDENT SHOT

Details of the Assassination.

THE VICTIM OF A DISAPPOINTED OFFICE-SEEKER.

Horrible Tragedy at Washington.

On Saturday afternoon no little excitement was created by a bulletin at the Montreal Telegraph office that the President of the United States, General Garfield, had been shot, and later in the evening the Toronto evening papers brought some particulars of the tragic event. Monday's papers gave more particular accounts, and from them we take the following summary:—President Garfield had been with his family for the past fortnight, sojourning at Long Branch. Having been summoned to the capital on official business on Saturday afternoon he went to the Baltimore and Potomac R. R. station, to return to Long Branch, entering the ladies' waiting-room arm-in-arm with Secretary Blaine. A man as he approached fired at the President with a revolver. The Post's account says:

THE FIRST BALL

aimed at the President entered immediately above the kidneys in the left side. The President, stunned, turned about, when the villain shot a second time, the bullet striking the front of his shoulder, passing out beneath the shoulder blade. Those who stood immediately around the assassin and President say that the man shouted in a tragic tone, "I am a Stalwart. It had to be done. Arthur will now be President." Benson, ex-Chief of the Secret Service, was standing near and rushed to the assassin, and as he was about to raise the pistol with three chambers still loaded, to shoot Blaine, it is thought, throttled him and threw him on the ground. Gitteau was immediately overpowered by the maddened mob. The police hurried him off at great speed to goal to prevent him being lynched. The news reached the street immediately. An excited, angry crowd instantaneously flowed through every street leading to the depot, and would certainly have hanged

to a lamp-post if the police had not been active in their movements. The President meanwhile instantly sank to the floor. Strong hands carried him immediately to an upper office room and a mattress was obtained from the Pullman sleeping car store-room, upon which he was laid, bleeding profusely. Doctors were summoned by telephone and telegraph. Dr. Bliss speedily appeared, and there soon followed a score of the most prominent physicians of the city. Dr. Bliss at first said, "It's a safe wound." After he watched the President a few moments he said with great thoughtfulness, "It is not necessarily a mortal wound." Soon after was admitted. The President stretched out his hand, and in a voice not strong said, "I am glad you have come." Ingersoll said, "Are you in pain?" The President answered, "I feel a prickly sensation in my feet." One of the physicians said the prickly sensation was not a good symptom. It might indicate that the spinal cord had been touched. The shoulder wound was not dangerous. The only fear is from the wound below the kidneys. It has not yet been ascertained whether or not the ball passed through the body directly or whether it struck the vertebræ and glanced around the intestines. Upon that it is probable the life of the President depends. Ingersoll says the President was clear in his mind, but a little dazed. His hands were cold. No member of his family was near. Telegraphic communication was immediately made with Long Branch, and bulletins sent to them every minute. About 10:30 a. m. the physicians decided to remove the President to the White House. An ambulance was in readiness, and he was removed. It was thought better to remove him while his strength would permit.

THE PISTOL

in the assassin's hand was a murderous looking, five-chambered, heavy navy revolver, 44 calibre. It makes a hole as large as a musket ball. The balls remaining in it were designed for self-defence, or, as some think, for Blaine. Those who stood near say Gitteau made a movement when stricken down as if to shoot Blaine. The latter was calm, collected, but intensely pale. Gitteau immediately upon being taken into custody assumed to be insane. He drove to the depot in advance of the President, and was stationed in the doorway of the ladies' waiting-room. When Garfield fell remarked, "I have killed Garfield. Arthur will be President, and I am a Stalwart." An eye-witness states: I was coming down Penn-avenue, when I saw a carriage coming up. The horses were running so fast I thought they were running away. Just as the carriage arrived in front of me a man put his head out of the carriage and said. "Faster, faster, FASTER, D—N IT."

THE ASSASSIN

After hearing this remark I thought there was something wrong and ran after the carriage. When it reached the depot the man jumped out and entered the ladies' room. He had not been there more than three minutes when the President arrived. He stepped out of his carriage and entered the ladies' room. The President, after passing through the door, was just turning the corner of a seat when the assassin, who was standing on the left of the door, which struck the President in the back. He fell forward. I ran into the depot. Then he fired again while the President was falling. While the President was lying on the floor of the ladies' room he was surrounded by Windom, James, and Blaine. Mrs. Hunt, Miss Windom, and Miss James, were also near the President.

FIRED THE BALL

General Sherman ordered an ambulance to carry the President to the White House. The greatest interest centres in the possibilities of the President's recovery. All the conditions of the physique naturally aid him, for the President is in the prime of life and usually enjoys excellent health. He always lived a regular, abstemious life, and has a rugged, powerful frame.

THE VENEZUELAN MINISTER'S STORY.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Venezuelan Minister to this country, who arrived here from Washington this evening, witnessed the attempted assassination of the President. He says he had just raised his hat to the President and Blaine, and was about turning around for the appearance of friends, when he heard the report of a revolver. He says:—Quickly I wheeled around, and before me I beheld the staggering form of the President. I also saw the would-be assassin within a few feet of the President. He had a revolver in his right hand His knees were slightly bent and he took two or three hasty steps toward the President and fired again. When the second shot was fired

THE PRESIDENT FELL TO THE EARTH.

The assassin, seeing Garfield fall, turned and attemped to escape by the B. street entrance. I hurried toward the door, and when the villain saw I intended to head him off he turned and ran toward the opposite door, where he was caught by a number of the employees of the depot. When the President was shot and fell to the ground he spoke not a word, nor did the would-be murderer. The latter had a determined look upon his face and did not resemble a crazy man. He was calm and resolute, and did not attempt to run away until he saw the President fall.

THE MOB AND GITTEAU.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Sun's Washington special says:—Gitteau when arrested said, "It is all right." The expression was heard incorrectly, and was supposed to be, "I am a Stalwart." The prisoner was not long in headquarters before it became evident that there was no safe place for him, a wild, angry mob collecting outside, surging and hooting, and mingled with other cries were, "Lynch him," "Lynch him." He heard these cries, but paid no attention to them. Of all persons in the police headquarters none seemed less concerned than he. A passing cab was hailed, and in a moment Gitteau was hustled into it, and the driver directed to make all haste to the gaol. The wild mob followed the carriage, crying,

"LYNCH HIM," "LYNCH HIM."

The driver lashed his horses into foam, and succeeded in getting ahead of the mob. In a few moments Gitteau was safely lodged in gaol. The President yesterday asked Blaine what he supposed was the motive which actuated Gitteau. The Secretary replied that it was evidently the act of a maniac, and asked Garfield if he had any explanation. The President smiled and replied, "I suppose he thought it would be a glorious thing to be a pirate king."

The World's Washington special says:—Notwithstanding the tremendous excitement that possessed the city yesterday and the large multitude in various places, there was danger of a riot only once. That was just after the capture of Gitteau. The crowd outside the depot was fortunately small at the time or the assassin would never have lived to come to trial.

THE BIDDULPH TRAGEDY.

EXTRADITION OF THE FEEHLEYS FROM MICHICAN.

On Tuesday of last week the warrant for the extradition of the Feehleys, was received by the Attorney-General's Department, at Toronto. The warrant is signed by the Hon. Mr. Blaine, Secretary of State for the United States of America. It contains no special or remarkable reason for the extradition save that the prisoners William and James Fehley (so the warrant spells the name) now in custody at Detroit, have been charged by Her Britannic Majesty Queen Victoria, &c., with wilful murder.

There is much speculation as to whether the Feehleys will turn Queen's evidence as soon as they are regularly extradited, but judging from recent advices from Biddulph Township, it appears to be immaterial in the interests of justice whether they do or not, as it is rumored that several others of those most lightly connected with the crime, are manifesting a tendency to save themselves from unpleasant consequences by a full and free confession, and so anticipate the Feehleys. Whether the speculations will be realized or not. Under any circumstances the developments will be of a most interesting character.

LONDON, July 1.—The prisoners William and James Feehley were brought from Detroit by the train reaching here at 5:30 this evening. They were in charge of Detective Murray of the Government force, and chief of police Williams, of this city. They were handcuffed together, and taken direct to the county gaol in a cab. The prisoners look exceeding well physically, but their faces betrayed deep anxiety. There are no fresh developments in the way of evidence. Mr. Hugh MacMahon has been retained for the defence. It is understood that the preliminary examination will take place almost immediately, and the trial at the September assizes.

The whole of Hall, Innes & Co's stock of Carpets must be cleared out in thirty days, to give room for new goods.

Travellers and tourists should always be provided with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, the best remedy in the world for curing suffering brought on from eating unripe or sour fruits, bad milk, impure water, change of water and climate. The remedy for all summer complaints. 27-2t

FARMERS AND MECHANICS.—If you wish to avoid great danger and trouble, besides a no small bill of expense, at this season of the year, you should take prompt steps to keep disease from your household. The system should be cleansed, blood purified, stomach and bowels regulated, and prevent and cure diseases arising from spring malaria. We know of nothing that will so perfectly and surely do this as Electric Bitters, and at the trifling cost of fifty cents a bottle.—Each.—Sold by all Druggists.

LITERARY.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of The Living Age dated June 18th and June 25th, have been received. A new volume begins with the next number, making this a good time to subscribe.

THE NORTHUMBERLAND Enterprise, published at Colborne, by Messrs. Jewell & Flewelling, has been received. The number before us, which is an eight page paper, presents a very neat appearance, and contains a good supply of local and county news. The Enterprise will support the Liberals and Edward Blake. We wish the new venture every success.

CANADIAN HISTORY.—This is an examination primer on Canadian History by Mr. James L. Hughes, Inspector of Public Schools, Toronto. We should think it will answer the purpose admirably. It is not intended to fill the place of an exhaustive treatise on the subject, but it contains, in systematic order, the points to be remembered by students pupils, and students will find by it that they can readily recall the facts of Canadian History.

LOVELL'S ONTARIO DIRECTORY.—We are glad to observe that the valuable directory of these enterprising publishers, is now so far advanced that we may shortly expect it on our shelves. We have received advance sheets of the work, and find it neatly got up, well printed, the information accurate and minute, and if any thing an improvement upon the excellent work of the same kind formerly issued from Lovell's press.

"THE PANORAMA."—This is the appropriate title of a new weekly illustrated newspaper, the first number of which is to appear early in July. It will be modelled after the Graphic, and will have contributions from the best artists in the Dominion. The illustrations will be engraved on metal, giving the exact effect of the originals. The editorial department will be in charge of an experienced journalist, and the paper will be devoted to news and art, avoiding party politics. Messrs. Beugough Bros., proprietors of Grip, are the publishers, and the subscription price will be fixed at $2.50 per year. We predict for the venture an immediate success.

The Carpets that are now being offered at a sacrifice are not old dingy patterns, but the whole of Hall, Innes & Co's stock, the majority of which came in this spring.

"Temper is everything," and in the pens of the Esterbrook Steel Pen Company the temper will be found all that is to be desired.

WOMAN'S TRUE FRIEND.—A friend in need is a friend indeed. They are pleasant to the taste, and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

By the timely use of the Extract of Wild Strawberry you may avert all disagreeable summer complaints, diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera morbus, etc., nothing is so pleasant in its cure, so rapid, reliable, and effectual, as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. PETERBOROUGH, JULY 7, 1881.

Another New Departure.

During the course of a debate in the Quebec Legislature on Wednesday, Hon. Mr. Chapleau, the Premier, who, it is well known is fully in the confidence, and likely soon to become a member, of the Dominion Ministry, and therefore no doubt spoke ex cathedra, stated that in the next session of the Dominion Parliament a bill would be introduced to extend the duration of Parliaments from five years, as fixed by the constitution, to a period of six or seven years, and at the same time intimated his opinion that such a measure would become law. We have already had abundant evidence in the Maritime Provinces better terms arrangement, and other acts of the party now in power, that they regard the confederation Act as a mere piece of parchment, which may be changed, altered, or mutilated in any way that may facilitate the giving effect to their doctrine of the divine right of Tory rule; and it would not surprise us if, when the present Parliament approaches the close of its constitutional existence, the servile majority which swallowed the Syndicate outrage without a qualm, will be found ready, if they are required to do so by the crack of the Quebec whip, to vote an extension of their own existence, and to rob the people of the Dominion of the right guaranteed them under the constitution to assert their sovereign control of public affairs at the polls at the end of every five years. Such a scheme as that outlined by Mr. Chapleau, of prolonging the existence of a moribund Parliament, would, if carried into effect, constitute a coup detat even more startling than that by which the late Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec was officially decapitated, and hounded into his grave, in order to make way for a Tory partizan, and give the executive support to the infamous conspiracy successfully carried out, to oust the ministry of the people from the Quebec Treasury benches. But there is no violence which lust of office or greed of place could suggest, which the supporters of Sir Chas. Tupper would hesitate to perpetrate upon the Constitution, in order to carry out their programme of rule or ruin, and it is evident that a conviction on the part of the political managers of the party, that their rule is to be terminated by the result of the next general elections, would in all probability be followed by a bill, in defiance of the Constitution, extending the term of Parliament beyond the period fixed in the Confederation Act. Such a high-handed measure, would, however, be followed speedily by such an expression of popular resentment as would serve to show that there are limits beyond which a people of independent spirit, jealous of their constitutional safeguards, however patient they have proved under great provocation, will not permit a Government to pass with impunity.

The Dominion Ledger.

The organs of the Dominion Government are exceedingly fond of parading before the public the surplus of actual over estimated revenue, which in their eyes constitutes the most irrefragible evidence of the wisdom and sagacity of their leaders, and forms a monument of their superior financial skill. The deficits which occurred under the Liberal regime they exhibit as proof of the incompetence of the ex-Finance Minister, and the failure of the policy of his Government. As a matter of fact, however, the very reverse, in each case, is the feeling in the mind of every honest and thoughtful man. The depression in trade had set in in the last year of the first term of the Conservative Government. Sir Richard Cartwright, from the Opposition benches, in 1872 warned the Government of the financial storm which was about breaking, and energetically protested against the reckless assumption of the serious burdens which have since been so heavy a load for the country to carry. In his budget speech in 1873, the present Finance Minister foreshadowed a deficit for the year, and gave warning of a prospective shortage of the taxation. Upon the late Government attaining to office, they found themselves saddled with enormous obligations for the carrying on of works entered into by their predecessors. At the same time a period of unprecedented commercial prostration, from which the country through natural causes is only now recovering, set in and continued, and the late Government adopted the wise policy of keeping the taxation down to the lowest point during a time when the people were least able to bear the weight of taxation. Had they adopted the system now pursued, of putting extortionate taxes upon the people, Sir Richard Cartwright could have, as Sir Leonard Tilley is doing, wrung a surplus out of the earnings of the people, and in this respect his policy was far more entitled to the support and confidence of the people than is that of the present Finance Minister. With all the difficulties the late Government had to contend with, however, they succeeded in putting a stop to the rate at which the controllable expenditure of the Government had been increasing under Tory rule. The following table taken from the Public Accounts, will show precisely how the two parties treated this expenditure:

1867-68	$13,486,092
1868-69	$14,632,084
1869-70	14,345,509
1870-71	14,883,691
1871-72	17,899,466
1872-73	19,174,647
1873-74	$23,316,316
1874-75	$23,713,671
1875-76	24,459,373
1876-77	23,519,391
1877-78	23,883,189
1878-79	$24,455,381
1879-80	$24,876,634
1880-81	26,000,000
1881-82	$26,685,000

Under Tory rule the annual expenditure increased from $13,486,092 in 1867-68, to $23,316.316 in 1873-74, or an annual increase of $1,638,334. From 1873-74 to 1878-79 the expenditure under the Mackenzie Government increased from $32,713,671 to $24,455,381, or an average annual increase in five years of $148,322. The Tories again assumed the reins of power, and in their first year increased the expenditure by $1,149,366; in their second by $465,000 more, and in last year by $669,873 still more, making an average annual increase as compared with the last year of Reform rule of $669,873. These figures cannot be denied, and they carry their own lesson with them to the thinking taxpayer.

East Durham Election.

The election contest in East Durham, between Dr. Brereton and Mr. Russell, resulted on Wednesday of last week in the return of the former by a majority of 232, the majority for Mr. Rosevear in 1879 having been 200. The result does not alter the political status of the riding in the Legislature, and possesses no particular significance except that which it suggests for the benefit of the Liberal party in the riding. It shows the danger of disaffection within the ranks of the party, of abandoning old-tried and reputable adjuncts of political work in favor of weapons not acceptable to the sober thought and self-respect of those from whom the ballots must come. We have reason to believe that there never was a time when the opportunity was more favorable for the Liberal party than in the election just ended; and the opportunity has been allowed to pass. The respectability of the party shrank from following to the polls certain persons who thrust themselves forward as managers of the party, and they preferred defeat to a victory which would be humiliated by pretensions which they had determined not to countenance. They knew that to make success of moral and lasting benefit to the party, they must use instruments of which they would have no cause to be ashamed, and they were compelled to repudiate the unsought agencies which were obtruded upon them. They have passively allowed the tail of the party, so to speak, to make the effort to wag the dog, in order to convince the caudal extremity that, however useful in its proper sphere, nature never designed it to be a motive power over the superior organs. What the party should now do, is to re-organize on a new basis for the coming conflict of 1883. Let those who have borne the brunt of battle before in election contests, again come to the front, and be entrusted with the party management. Let it be understood that the old-time mouthpiece of the party, the Guide, is the only recognized organ of the party; that political influences cannot be created like mushrooms in a single night, nor of the same foul material; that a house divided against itself cannot stand. A wholesome lesson of adversity has often a salutary effect, and we trust the Liberals of East Durham will profit by their experience in this election and unite as of old, and, with the old organization and influences, prepare themselves for victory in the general elections.

THE London (Eng.) Printer's Times, says:—"Some activity seems lately to "have been manifested in the printing "trade of Canada. At least Messrs. "Miller & Richard's branch establishment "at Toronto has been pretty busy in supplying with new dresses a number of "Canadian newspapers, including the following:—The World, Toronto; the Free "Press, the Advertiser, and the Echo, "London; Morning Chronicle and Wesleyan, Halifax; Morning Chronicle, "Quebec; the Star and Huron Signal, "Goderich; EXAMINER, PETERBOROUGH; "Review, Blythe; Christian Helper, Varsity, Evangelical Churchman, and the "Independent, Toronto; Guide and Advocate, Watford; Lightning Express, "Elora; and the Telescope, Walkerton."

Current Topics.

THE NEW postal regulations, whereby all printed matter, such as insurance papers, legal briefs, deeds, etc., can only be sent by mail at letter post rates, are creating considerable discontent among parties most interested. Lawyers and insurance men complain bitterly that the rate now charged is exorbitant.

THE Whitby Gazette, an old Reform paper, which has been for some time hanging on the ragged edge of indecision, now comes out as a full-fledged N. P. organ. The old Tory paper, the Chronicle, becomes the Liberal organ. These are strange changes, and indicate that the Gazette is getting along towards the small end of the horn.

AT THE last meeting of the Victoria County Council, the Inspector for East Victoria, in his report, stated that the supply of teachers is in excess of the demand, and as a consequence teachers are under-bidding each other. Teachers of experience are being dismissed, and young teachers at low salaries take their places. There is no doubt a great deal of truth in Mr. Knight's remarks, and it is very questionable if the time has not arrived at which a limit should be made to the number of persons licensed to impart instruction in the Schools. The whole scope of our educational system seems practically to be the manufacture of teachers and professional men, of whom there are already far too many in the market, and not one in twenty of whom ever achieve distinction or rise above a miserable mediocrity.

THE QUESTION of abolition of Grand Juries still exercises the attention of a number of the Judges. Recently, Judge Gowan, of Simcoe, expressed his conviction that the Grand Jury system had served its day and survived its usefulness. But it is very questionable if the weight of argument be not on the side of the system. True, there may not be the same powerful reasons in its favor, because it has served to eradicate many evils which formerly made its usefulness more apparent. But, like many other safeguards of our liberties, it is not the less necessary that its existence should be maintained. Parliament, for instance, finds no occasion to coerce the Crown by tying up the purse-strings; but if the power to do so were taken from the people, who knows how soon the check upon the Crown would again be found necessary?

THE HON. T. N. GIBBS is one of a company which is about to start a Grape Sugar Refinery in Toronto. It is expected that in about four months this new industry will be in full running order. An application has been made for a charter to incorporate the "Toronto Grape Sugar Company," having a capital of $200,000, the applicants being the Hon. Thos. N. Gibbs, Oshawa; Messrs. James Michie, John Leys, James McGee, James S. Holt, Toronto; and F. P. Stikes, Buffalo. Plans are being prepared for a factory with a capacity to use 2,000 bushels of corn per diem, and so arranged that it could be enlarged to a capacity of 5,000 bushels. The refinery will be eight stories high, with an elevator tower on top, and will be built of brick with stone foundations on piles driven into the rock. To get the buildings erected as rapidly as possible the electric light may be used, so that building operations may be carried on both day and night. The company will employ about 150 hands, and the best skilled experts have been secured. The latest patents and improvements will also be introduced. The property has been exempted from taxation by the Toronto Council, and a 21 years' lease of the water lots, 133 feet by 375 feet, obtained at a nominal rental.

Political Chips.

PROBABLY one of the most effective home-thrusts yet received by the new-made knight, whose historical association with a certain $32,000 will out-last his name, comes from the Hamilton Times, which, referring to a stupid piece of misrepresentation in the Globe, says:—"Sir "Hector Langevin is the last man in the "world that should be lied about, for no "invention of the enemy can hit him so "hard as the naked truth."

THE GENIUS of the Mail office thinks Hon. Mr. Blake will come back, after his Lower Province tour, to his party in Ontario, "to be scorned and despised in "the soul of every man of them, as no "statesman has been despised for political "and personal poltroonery in the whole "history of our country." No need for Dr. Tupper's journalistic Jeemes to cry, like Dogberry, for some one to "write him down an ass." He does that daily, for himself, with great ability and success.

THE Mail's evening edition, recapitulating the chances of the North Waterloo election, the day before the polling, said of the Conservative candidate:—"His "chances of success are in proportion to "his acceptance by the people as a Pro-"tectionist." Had Mr. Walters been elected, the Tory organs would have proclaimed the fact as a vindication and a triumph for the N. P. Now, that he has been handsomely defeated, will they "acknowledge the corn," and admit that North Waterloo has condemned the tariff robbery?

WE JUDGE that Boss Bunting, of the Mail, charmed with the efforts of his new literary artist, has lately extended the rope which limits the liberties of the corps editorial. At all events, from silliness the new editor has developed into idiotcy, and from fine affectation to the most incontinent drivel. His latest is that Mr. Blake, in his addresses in the Maritime Provinces, does not encourage political wrangles, because someone might be offended and "use a cane," and that by his prudence he "saves his skin from abrasion." We really feel sorry for the readers of the Mail at the prospect of having to endure the contemptible twaddle of the leader-writer of that paper during the dog days. But perhaps Mr. Bunting will have compassion on them and give the young man a holiday.

DOMINION DAY DOINGS.

Display, Procession and Pyrotechnics in Peterborough.

How the Day was Spent—The Firemen's Celebration—Lacrosse Tournament—Excursions—The Idyl-Wild Regatta.

"Old Probabilities" having been on the lease for some days before, suddenly changed his mood, and favored us with serene and unruffled countenance on the occasion of the fourteenth annual celebration of Dominion Day, the anniversary of the First of July, 1867, the date on which young Canada shook off the swaddling clothes of old Provincial life and entered upon the duties, dignity and destiny of incipient nationality. Since that date, the young Dominion, confident in its sturdy elements, has made rapid strides in the march of progress, and, despite many difficulties and obstacles, passing in the vicissitudes of trade and commerce, enduring reverses that have shook to their centres older more wealthy and populous countries, has steadily worked its way forward, and on every recurring Dominion Day has been able to advance in the race, to note a perceptible gain in moral and material advancement, and, to enter upon another "lap" in the course of its existence, satisfied with past achievements, and encouraged by them to greater efforts in the future. For a few years past progress has been impeded by financial stringency and commercial disasters, which have been common to all countries; yet even through that crisis, so undaunted the energy of our people, that on the darkest day the country still made progress. During the past year the country has almost fully recovered from the shock, and progress, in art, agriculture and industry, has received a new impulse, and taken up a more elastic pace. Confidence has taken the place of doubt, and hope of despondency, and to-day every pulse and artery of our national existence throbs with renewed vigor and a lustier strength. The day of inflation and speculation has passed away. Experience has taught the wholesome lesson of prudence, and to-day, credit be not so easy, money so "flush," nor speculation so rash, every branch of trade, commerce and industry is established upon a more stable and enduring basis, the elements of success are resolved into more reliable shape, and the ship of state is under way, more carefully trimmed for the haven of prosperity, and better equipped to meet occasional gales and possible storms of disaster, which now and then blow from foreign shores. No better monument need be desired of the efficiency of the national energy, enterprise and industry, to meet and overcome all obstacles, than is afforded by the fact of the substantial headway which the country is making in the face of artificial restrictions which a false fiscal system—unwisely adopted at the moment when the country was emerging from the condition which persuaded the popular mind to favorable acceptation of pernicious doctrines—imposes upon the wheels of progress. The farmer at his plough, the artisan at his lathe, the smith at his forge, the woodsman in the forest, the miner in the bowels of the earth, the merchant in his counting-house, and the mariner in his white-winged bark, all feel their efforts more or less retarded by the oppressive operations of a tariff which is, in its practical application, a confiscation of the fruits of labor, and it speaks well for the national vigor and vitality that, in spite of this unwise drawback, the forces of industry are sufficient to establish a rapid current of progress.

Sharing to some extent, though not in as great a measure as other places, in the prosperity of the present, and the prospects of the future, the people of Peterborough could afford to join in the universal rejoicing which greeted our national day as one of pride in a successful career, and a mark of confidence and ambition for the future.

THE DAY'S CELEBRATION.

The celebration of the day in town had been taken in hand by the members of the Fire Brigade, who are always to the front in enterprises of this kind, and elaborate preparations had been made to provide for the popular amusement. The feature of the day was a novelty in this section of the country, consisting of a Trades Procession, in which was to be exemplified the various branches of manufacture and industry which flourish in the town. It is to be regretted that many of those who had promised the Firemen to take part, and upon whom reliance was placed, failed to fulfil their promises, and thus robbed the "industrial procession" of the dimensions to which it should have been entitled. However, as it was, a very attractive and interesting display was made, and the success demonstrated of a kind of exhibition which may be more fully and satisfactorily carried out on another occasion.

At one o'clock George street was lined with one of the largest assemblages ever witnessed in the town, and about that time the procession emerged from the Agricultural Grounds, and took its way down George street. First came the Band of the Fire Brigade in uniform, followed by a four-in-hand conveying Mayor Smith, and Councillors Taylor, Menzies and Rutherford. In the next carriage were Councillors Douglas, McNaughton, Toole and Cahill. Councillors Paterson and Kelly, with a delegation of distinguished foreigners from Paradise Falls, occupied the third carriage. Then followed the Fire Brigade in uniform, two and two, marching steadily, and presenting a neat and tidy appearance. The Fire Engine, gaily decorated with flowers, in charge of Engineer English, followed, and after it the reel, also handsomely charged with floral tributes. The vans followed in the following order:

Bakery—S. H. Green.
Agricultural Implements—P. Hamilton.
Pump Factory—H. Owens.
Furniture—D. Belleghem.
Upholstering—D. Belleghem.
XXX Ale—H. Calcutt.
Marble Cutting—J. Byrne.
Dog Power Churn—Mr. Forsyth.
Reaper and Mower—Jno. Moore.
Aerated Beverages—Foy & Campbell.
Biscuits & Confectionery—Hall Bros.
Laundry—Celestials from Englishtown.
Printing—Times Office.
Blacksmith—W. Hetherington.
Sewing Machines—G. H. Mitchell.

Hall Bros'. "Candy Pull" was one of the principal attractions of the procession, and there was quite a struggle for taffy. Mr. Owen's pump factory was well presented, and no little amusement was created by the "dawg" in Forsyth's power. D. Belleghem's van attracted much attention, and Mr. Byrne had a capital display of marble work. The Heathen Chinee, at work in the Laundry, with his Mongolian assistants, created any amount of fun. The procession wended its way down George street and up Water street, and back to the Grounds.

AT THE GROUNDS.

There was a fair attendance in the afternoon, and the burlesque sports were well carried out. Zulus, Chinese, and other barbarians, fresh from their native jungles in the adjoining Drill Shed, took prominent part and created much amusement.

In the evening there were over a thousand people on the grounds to witness the pyrotechnic display, which was well carried out and reflected credit on the purveyors. The band discoursed sweet music at intervals, and finally wound up a pleasant evening's entertainment with the orthodox God Save the Queen.

The Lacrosse Match.

Much interest was centred in the Lacrosse match which had been announced to take place between the Independents of Toronto and the home club, the Empire City boys having a fine record, and bearing a high reputation as skillful and well organized players. The grounds were packed with the largest crowd that has been seen there for many a day in anticipation of a keen contest, nor were they disappointed in their expectations, as the play throughout was the best ever witnessed on the grounds. The contending teams were comprised of the following players:—

Peterboroughs.		Independents.
H. LeBrun,	Field Captain,	H. J. Gilmour.
W. Simpson,	Goal,	R. Beanne.
W. Rudkins,	Point,	J. Mathews.
J. Coughlin,	Cover Point.	W. Foley.
P. Rudkins,	Defence,	H. Kelly.
J. Simpson,	"	M. Wandable.
J. Sherby,	Centre Field	M. Duffy.
M. McDonald,	"	F. Bourdon.
M. Halpin,		W. Gleason.
H. Phelan,	Home Field,	J. Burns.
R. H. Fortye,	"	J. O'Farrell.
M. Hackett,	Home	J. O'Neil.
C. Rutherford,	"	J. Morrison.
A. McNeil,	Umpire,	J. Ryan.
J. G. Macdonald,	"	J. Smith.

Joseph Dresaut, Montreal, Referee.

The ball was faced at 3:14, and sharp play at once commenced. The rubber was first sent in dangerous vicinity of Peterborough goal, but was promptly returned to the Toronto flag, where by hard play it was stubbornly kept by the Peterborough boys. The strong point of the Torontos is in their superior throwing and catching, giving them great advantage in open field play. The excellent checking of the Peterborough boys, however, kept this advantage out of their way, and every time the ball was sent to field it was promptly returned on the Toronto defence. After a hot contest lasting 23 minutes, a capital throw from the home field by Simpson sent the ball through the Toronto goal, Phalen assisting the ball in its passage and sharing the honor, which won the first game for Peterborough.

The second game was a repetition of the first, Peterborough persistently bearing the ball down on the Toronto goal and compelling the latter to play a defensive game. After ten minutes play, M. McDonald for Peterborough, by a splendid stroke from centre field, put the ball clean through the Toronto goal, winning the second game.

In the third game the Torontos made a vigorous effort to redeem their game. They succeeded in getting the ball out to field, and the home team scattered, the latter failing to check as in the former games, and after some fine playing the ball was sent through Peterborough's flags by Bourdon, in eleven minutes, winning the third game for Toronto.

The fourth game was a simple repetition of the third. In spite of the efforts of the Peterboroughs the Independents got the ball out and it was passed through the Peterborough goal in four minutes by a capital shot from O'Farrell.

The games now stood two and two, and as the fifth game opened it was evident that both parties were bent on winning the honors of the day. The excitement in the crowd was intense, and the changing fortunes of the game were marked by outbursts from the on-lookers. Peterborough succeeded in bearing the ball down on the Toronto goal, and fought desperately to keep it there. Once the ball was captured by an Independent and sent up to the Peterborough flags, but it was promptly returned, and after 24 minutes of desperately contested and excellent play on both sides, M. Hackett secured the honor of winning the game and the match for Peterborough, by putting the ball through the Independent's goal, closing the game at 5 p. m. The result was received with the most tumultuous enthusiasm by the crowd.

Where the play was so generally good, it would be invidious to particularize. Matthews, of Toronto, played to best advantage on that side, but it was noticeable on the side of the home team that the play was remarkably even, there being no laggards and no jaux pas, showing the result of practice and good organization. At the conclusion of the match the visiting team were taken to the Huffman House, where supper was provided, and after a short re-union, escorted to the train. The Independents say this is the second time they have been beaten since their organization, three years ago; that they were defeated on their merits; that Peterborough is the best team they have ever played with, and that they have nowhere received better treatment than on their visit here.

The Idyl Wild Regatta.

Quite a number of townspeople joined the excursion to Idyl Wild to witness the regatta there, reaching the Island at 11 o'clock p. m. The attendance at the Island was large, and the day's proceedings passed off most satisfactorily in every respect. R. H. D. Hall acted as Referee; C. Kemp as starter.

DOUBLE SCULL RACE.—In this race for the medals Shaw and Lech rowed against Mercer and Stevenson. This was a very pretty and well contested race, the former winning by a length and a half. Time reported, 21' 45".

SINGLE CANOE RACE.—The entries were Wetlock and Beaufort, Otonabee River, and Wallace, Gores' Landing. This was a sturdy race, and lay between Wetlock and Wallace. The latter held the lead round the turning buoy, when his staying faculties collapsed, and Wetlock pursuing, passed him and came in winner by a length and a half.

THE CHAMPION CUP.—For this event there were entered Laing, of the G. T. R. Boating Club, Montreal, Staunton, Bayside Club, Toronto, and Jarvis, of the Leanders, Hamilton. Staunton's boat took in water and he was soon out of the race. The other two rowed to the finish, Laing taking 1st place by half a length. Time reported 19' 30".

During the day the Ladies of St. John's Church, Harwood, held a strawberry festival on the Island which was liberally patronized.

At the close of the race Mr. M. Y. Calcutt, under whose management the proceedings were conducted, presented the medals to Messrs. Shaw and Lech.

The excursionists reached home at 8.30.

The Day at Millbrook.

Quite a number went down on the cheap excursion to Millbrook where the attraction was the laying of the corner stone of the new M. E. Church. Among those present on the occasion were Revs. G. C. Workman, and A. Fletcher, Mr. G. A. Cox and Mr. Morrow of Peterborough. The ceremony of laying the corner stone was gone through with by Geo. A. Cox, Esq., President of the Midland Railway, who performed his duties in a most workmanlike manner with a very handsome silver trowel, which was presented to him by the Trustees of the church, on which was engraved: "Presented to G. A. Cox, Esq., at the laying of the corner stone of the Methodist Church, Millbrook, July 1, 1881." After the ceremony was over, the Rev's Messrs. Jeffrey and W. H. Laird delivered appropriate addresses, as also did Mr. S Defean, Mr. Cox and the architect, Mr. Belcher. Tea was served by the ladies of the congregation, of which a large number partook. The stonework of the building was done by Mr. Henry Sherwood of Peterboro', Mr. J. E. Belcher being the architect.

A match game of lacrosse was played between the Victorias, of Toronto, and the Millbrook club, which was won by the latter in two straight games. It was witnessed by a large number of spectators.

Accidents and Incidents.

A boy was knocked down by a waggon on Brock street and hurt quite severely, though not seriously.

In the afternoon a runaway horse on Bethune Street collided slightly with the Midland train. The buggy got decided the worst of the rencontre.

Just as the procession was starting, a stampede was created among the crowd on Murray street, by a bolt of one of the procession teams, which ran right down the sidewalk through the crowd to George street.

It seemed almost a providence that some one was not killed, and, as it was, a serious accident resulted. Mrs. C. Young, of Ashburnham, who was among the on-lookers, being knocked down and seriously injured. Dr. Kincaid was called in and is attending Mrs. Young.

In the morning Mr. W. J. Quinn, teacher, of Ennismore, was driving into town when his horse ran away at Milburn's hill, throwing Mr. Quinn out and giving him a considerable bruising and shaking up. A boy companion jumped out unhurt.

During the procession on Dominion Day, a fire was reported at the residence of Mr. W. S. Johnston, Water Street, and the boys looked apprehensive as they contemplated their holiday uniforms and thought of putting them through a course of active service. Luckily there turned out to be no need of their assistance.

A. D. Noyes, Newark, Michigan, writes:—"I have enquired at the drug stores for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, but have failed to find it. We brought a bottle with us from Quebec, but it is nearly gone, and we do not want to be without it, as my wife is troubled with a pain in the shoulder, and nothing else gives relief. Can you send us some?"

Thousands of children are lost annually from cholera infantum, diarrhœa, and summer complaints, whose lives might be preserved by using Extract of Wild Strawberry. We have been in the habit of using them ourselves, and recommending them to our acquaintances. Ayer's Pills are a perfect regulator of the system; Ayer's Extract of Sarsaparilla is the best known purifier of the blood; Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a safe and sure remedy in complaints of the throat and lungs; and Ayer's Ague Cure is an effectual cure in cases of Fever and Ague and other malarial fevers. These medicines are compounded with skill and accurate medical knowledge, and they are in no sense to be classed with the cheap nostrums of the day. The formulas from which they are prepared are not secret, but are furnished to all physicians, and are published for the benefit of all interested.—St. Johns, P. Q., News.

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 7, 1881.

The Trent Valley Canal.

A telegram to the Globe has the following information :—

"It is understood that there has been some slight difficulty with regard to the Trent Valley Canal surveys. Two engineers, Messrs. Rubidge and Crawford, who were employed on the Murray Bay Canal, were a short time since sent to go over the route, make and exploratory survey, and report to the Department of Railways and Canals upon the practicability of of the route, the size of the party required to make the final survey, and other particulars. It seems to have been understood that Mr. Rubridge was to have had full charge of the survey and of the work which was to follow, should the report be favourable. It is stated that Mr. Crawford considered that his standing as an engineer, and the length of time that he had been employed by the Department of Public Works entitled him to as good a position as Mr. Rubridge, and that when he was given to understand that the latter was to be placed in charge of the work he declined to serve under him. It is understood that peace has been made by deciding to form two survey parties, one to be under charge of each of the rival engineers, who are to start at different ends of the route and work towards each other. It is more than probable that their report as to the practicability of the undertaking will be favourable, and consequently a commencement of practical operations may be looked for at an early day."

We can only hope that the Globe's Ottawa special is better informed on this subject than he frequently is ; but if the Government really desired to make "an early commencement of practical operations" it seems to us that the former reports of Messrs. Baird, Tully and Stark afforded all the information necessary. They all determine the practicability of the canal, and that it can be constructed at reasonable cost. The question of the sufficiency of barge navigation over the short reaches of actual canal is amply demonstrated by the experience of the English, French and American canal systems. Had the Government "meant business," they should at least have given Mr. Stark, a superior man to either of the above, the opportunity of demonstrating the accuracy of his estimate of $3,000,000. This new survey bears all the marks of a deliberate scheme to stave off the subject for another year, so that it can be retained to hang over the constituencies as a bribe or a threat in the conflict of the general elections. We hope the Globe is right and we are wrong. But we doubt it.

Editorial Notes.

We congratulate our contemporary, the Picton Gazette upon its auspicious commencement of its 26th volume, which it enters in an enlarged form and printed on new type throughout, presenting a very neat and creditable appearance. We wish Conger and Bro., the publishers, all success.

Some Conservatives appear to regard the replacing of one Conservative by another in the adjoining riding of East Durham, as a proof positive of the popularity of the N. P. The fact is, so fearful were the Tories of the effect of using the N. P. stalking horse, that the subject was not even introduced. The Port Hope Times, (Tory) says of the election :—"The N. P. was never mentioned in the contest ; it had no more "to do with the return of Dr. Brereton "than the Canadian Pacific Railway "controversy has had."

The report of the Superintendent of Insurance for the Dominion, just issued, shows that there are 36 Life, 28 Fire, 6 Inland Marine, 6 Ocean Marine, 5 Accident, 3 Gurantee, 1 Plate Glass, and 1 Steam Boiler Insurance Companies doing business in the Dominion. For security of Canadian policy holders, the Government hold a deposit of $6,609,767. In 1880, Fire Companies received for premiums, $3,479,577, and paid for losses, $1,665,578. Life Insurance Companies in 1880, received $2,691,127 in premiums, and paid out in claims and dividends $1,389,986.12.

We give in another column the particulars connected with the shooting of U. S. President Garfield. Reports up to the hour of our going to press indicate his condition unchanged, while the medical attendants entertain some hopes of his survival, a consummation which we trust may be realized. There seems to be no doubt that the assassin was insane, and that he had no accomplices. In the event of Garfield's death, Vice-President Arthur will assume the Presidency, an event which would supplant Blaine from supremacy in the Cabinet, and elevate Conkling to the chief position as adviser of the Presidential policy.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

Regular Monthly Meeting Streets and Bridges—Finance Reports—Accounts Passed Gas about Gas Lamps, Etc.

The Town Council held its regular monthly meeting on Monday evening, His Worship Mayor Smith presiding. Present,—Councillors Richardson, Hartley, Rutherford, Menzies, Chamberlain, Yelland, Paterson, Kelly, McNaughton, Taylor and Cahill.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

A communication from the County Clerk, enclosing the resolution of the County Council closing the Court House Park, was read and received.

Mr. Chamberlain said he understood that when the money was voted for trees in the Park it was on condition that townspeople should have free access to it. If the money was not paid he would move that the motion be rescinded.

The Mayor thought the money had been expended.

In answer to Mr. Chamberlain, the Clerk said the money had not been paid.

The communication was received.

The Treasurer's returns for June, showing receipts as $1,075.37 ; expenditure, $2,863.95, was referred to the Finance Committee.

The communication of M. Halpin and others, for a drain, was referred to the Finance Committee.

An account of Toker & Co., for $33.55, for printing from April to June, was referred to the Finance Committee.

An account of the Times Printing Company for printing and publishing the Auditors' Report, amounting to $56.96, was on motion of Mr. Richardson, seconded by Mr. Cahill, ordered to be paid if found in accordance with the contract.

An account of $4.75 from Wm. Hamilton was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Clerk read a numerously signed petition from residents of Stewart and Rubidge streets, asking for improvements. On motion

Mr. C. Sawers was heard in support. He said since he had resided on the street, three years, no improvements other than repairs to sidewalks had been made, and he was informed that nothing had been expended there for 22 years. The centre of the street was lower than the sides and the water lodged and remained, making the road almost impassable The hill in front of Mr. Cluxton's was rougher than a country road. The residents contemplated boulevarding and beautifying the street, and it would first require to be raised in the centre and graded. The level could be found and the requisite improvements done at small expense. $10,000 of improvements had been made by property-owners in the last 10 years. The petitioners represented one-third of the whole assessment.

Mr. Yelland asked how much it would take.

Mr. Sawers thought about $300.

Mr. Cluxton was heard, and urged the favorable consideration of the petition. He did so without hesitation, as it was the first time he had ever come before the Council to ask improvements affecting any property in which he was interested. Whatever justice may have been done to other parts of the town he thought that part had been over-looked. Forty years ago, when he was Pathmaster, he had had the stumps taken out and he did not know that any improvement had ever been made since. There was a good deal of travel over the streets to the Catholic Church and to the Charlotte-street Church, and the footway was in a very bad condition.

Mr. McNaughton said over $2,000 had been spent in No. 2 Ward alone, and not over $25 in No. 1, or $30 in No 4.

Mr. Chamberlain asked if the Street and Bridge Committee had not a report.

STREETS AND BRIDGES.

Mr. Cahill read the report of the Street and Bridge Committee, as follows :—

The Street and Bridge Committee beg leave to report that they have made an examination of the streets and bridges, and recommend the undermentioned improvements :

Your Committee have made an estimate of the probable cost in each case, but owing to the shortness of the time at their disposal the expenditure required will no doubt overrun in some cases and in others fall below the estimate.

Your Committee regret that owing to the large amount already expended in renewing sidewalks, almost wholly in the centre portion of the town, that they cannot recommend all the improvements desirable in the the suburbs without probably increasing the taxes, which they desire to avoid.

The President of the Midland Railway, when he obtained permission last fall to lay down a siding on Bethune street, agreed to have a drain on said street to take the water off. Your Committee recommend that the Clerk communicate with the President in order that the work may be now done, or if the railway company elect, that they may pay $40 to the Corporation, who shall then do the work required.

HUNTER STREET—To be water-tabled from Stewart street to the railway, and the crossing at the railway to be raised,	$ 30
STEWART STREET—To be graded from Hunter to Simcoe	30
RUBIDGE STREET—Graded from Hunter to Simcoe streets	20
KING STREET—The sidewalk on the north side near Rubidge street to be raised and water-tabled	15
SHERBROOKE STREET, west from Park street—The drain to be deepened and a portion gravelled	40
RUBIDGE AND PARK STREETS.—The drain to be deepened and widened, and a bridge to be built on Rubidge street	150
PATERSON AND PARK STREETS—Cribwork with junction with bridge	25
ROMAINE STREET—Sidewalk to Mr. Gordon's house	5
do crossing on west end	4
STEWART STREET—Sidewalk to be continued south of Dalhousie	10
GILMOUR STREET—Sidewalk to be continued to Mr. Roper's gate	27
PARK STREET—Sidewalk from Brock to Mr. Babb's gate	10
DONEGAL STREET.—Sidewalk from Murray to McDougal street	15
PARK STREET—Sidewalk from Bon Accord to the boundary	30
DOWNEY STREET—Cribbing, etc	150
LONDON STREET—Bridge to be rebuilt, the street widened, and sidewalk to be put in proper place	80
DUBLIN STREET—Drain continued to Donegal street	5
BETHUNE STREET—north end—Stones taken off and streets improved	40
STEWART STREET—Water-table at the north end	5
SMITH STREET—Graded west from railway	25
CEDAR STREET—Graded	25
CHARLOTTE STREET—Water-table at Water street	3
PARK STREET—Sidewalk continued to Lake	25
AUBURN SECTION—$100 to be appropriated, $10 to be expended on the hill east of the Smith Street Bridge (the consent of the Auburnham Council being first obtained), and the balance to be expended as may be agreed upon hereafter by your Committee and the parties interested at Auburn	100

Your Committee cannot recommend any action in the matter of the petition of D. Bellegham and others, asking for a drain from Sullivan's Hotel, but they recommend that that portion of the petition asking for repairs to the sidewalks in front of said hotel be at once complied with.

We find that a large area of the township of Monaghan drains directly into the town near Mr. James Campbell's, thereby annually flooding valuable property in that neighborhood and inflicting serious loss on the owners, and we recommend that the Clerk request the township of Monaghan to at least assist in making an outlet for such water, failing which we recommend that $30 to appropriated provided the parties interested furnish a similar amount to do the required work, and that no money be expended on said portion of the boundary by this Corporation till the $30 is committed, and also that the Clerk at the same time call the attention of the Council of Monaghan to the necessity of deepening the Monaghan Drain southward from the town boundary, it being now higher than the town portion of the drain, thus stopping the free progress of the water.

We further recommend that the Town Engineer be instructed to take levels on Paterson and Brock streets to ascertain the best mode of taking the surface water off those streets.

Your Committee finally recommend that any portion of the above work may be done by contract or otherwise, as may be deemed expedient.

Mr. Cahill said the money actually expended amounted to $2,300. The amount recommended in the report was $869, but they had a large quantity of stone on hand as well as $200 worth of cedar, which would reduce the total expenditure to something like $2,400.

The Mayor aked if $2,000 had been expended in No. 2 Ward.

Mr. Cahill said all but $200 or $300 had been expended in the centre of the town. It was unfortunate that they could not make all the improvements they desired. There was a great deal of work to be done and they could not do it all at once. He thought that when the work recommended was done, it would cover a great deal of the causes of complaint.

On motion of Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Taylor, the report was adopted.

THE FINANCE REPORT.

On motion of Mr. Paterson, the following report of the Finance Committee was adopted :—

The Finance Committee recommended payment of the following accounts :—T. Beavis, repairing pound, $3 ; Times, $3.50 ; A. Hall, repairing water-cart, $19.86 ; James Best, goods Mrs. Pine, $1.98 ; Dr. Bell, examining lunatic, $3.00 ; W. Soullis, repairs to ladders, $1.00 ; George Stothem, glass for street lamps, etc., $10.90. They recommended the usual grant of $100 to the Mechanics' Institute. In the matter of John Garvey, asking damages, your Committee has referred the matter to the Town Solicitor his opinion, which, when received, will be laid before the Council.

Mr. Hartley, from the Joint Committee, presented the report concerning the proposed sale of the old Burying Ground, as passed by the County Council. [The report appeared in last week's EXAMINER.]

Messrs. Chamberlain, Yelland, Richardson and Hartley opposed the sale of the Park at present.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox declined to give an opinion on the subject, but thought the Park would be required in the future as a market square.

The Mayor explained that the town could not use the lot for any other than park purposes.

The report was finally adopted subject to the approval of the ratepayers.

Mr. Rutherford, from the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, reported :

"Your Committee beg to report that they cannot agree as to the location of the gas lamps referred to them, and as the present contract expires soon, they refer the whole matter back to the Council."

Mr. Cox was heard in support of an application from Mr. Poussette and others, for four gas lamps on Park street. He asked that the residents in that quarter of the town should either be allowed to put up gas lamps by special tax and be relieved from the general tax, or that the town should afford the light.

After a desultory and unedifying discussion, in which Mr. McNaughton raised and subsequently withdrew the point of order, the following motion was carried.

Moved by Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. Paterson,—That the gas lamps asked for by Mr. Poussette and others be put up, viz. :—One on the corner of Gilmour and Park streets, one on the corner of Hunter and Park streets, one on the corner of Elm and Park streets, and that two lamps each be placed in Nos. 1 and 4 Wards, the same to be located by the Fire, Water and Gas Committee.

During the discussion Mr. McNaughton complained of the crossing on the railway at Charlotte street, and Mr. Cox promised to have the same arranged to Mr. McNaughton's satisfaction.

Mr. Cahill drew attention of Mr. Cox to the approach to the Smith-street Bridge on the east side, where the track had been raised by the railway, and suggested that the approach should be raised.

Mr Cox said the Company would put some gravel on the approach east of the track as soon as they could spare the train. At the time the road was made they did not know how long they would use the track, but now that was settled and the matter would be seen to.

The Council then adjourned.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

Dear Sir.—My attention has been called to an article published in the Daily Review of June 22nd, headed "A Magnanimous Council," and purporting to tell how this wickedest of all municipal bodies, impelled by a spirit of malicious cussedness against the people of South Monaghan, and Bill Kerr in particular, allowed the owner of a brick house and wire fence to gravel his own lane by statute labor. He then goes on to lament the hard fortune which prevented his obtaining more than three loads of gravel for himself (that is where the shoe pinches) and complains that the road running past his own door was not in the best of order in the spring, a complaint applicable to nearly every road in the township at that time of the year. He also muddles in something about Squire Bridge, which I utterly deny, as there is no such man in our township. The whole thing is a miserable attempt to injure the Council, and more particularly the Reeve, of this municipality, by imputing political motives in their dealings with Mr. Lang, a charge to be noticed only with contempt. "Veritas," in his communication to the Review, has carefully abstained from giving facts as regards the gravelling of Mr. Lang's lane, leaving his readers to suppose that it was a very private bargain ; they (the people of South Monaghan) were to know nothing about ; that it was of no possible use to them, and that it was an outrage on their common sense and a shameful waste of means badly needed elsewhere. Now, sir, the facts of the matter are these : Some time since the Council of South Monaghan purchased a gravel pit from Mr Lang which is situated back from the road, and every spring, when road work is being done, gravel is drawn over Lang's lane for the use of several concession lines ; consequently, Mr. Lang finding his lane so largely used for township purposes, considered it unfair that he should be expected to keep it in repair and applied to the Council for permission to gravel it by statute labor, (the Council understanding that part of it used by them); no one objected, as it was considered only right it should be done. "Veritas" at the time seems to have been willan the lane should be gravelled, as he told Mr. Lang if it were him ("Veritas") he would gravel to the pit as well. Yet this man, who was so ready to advise in favor of, and who, no doubt, thought Mr. Lang was entitled to have, more statute labor done on his place, now publishes an untruthful account in order to serve purposes best known to himself. Perhaps he intends again coming forward for municipal honors, hoping that the people of this township—who showed how thoroughly they understood and what implicit confidence they placed in him when he formerly ran for Reeve and secured the respectable total of fifteen votes—will again support him next January. The barbed wire fence seems to be a thorn in the flesh of our full-moon complexioned gentleman, and no wonder, if that is the one he sat on when doing his statute labor, while over twenty loads of gravel were hauled out of the pit. There is a proverb that people who live in glass houses should not throw stones, nor should a reduction in the price of some sucking Berkshire pigs be sufficient compensation for the influence of a judge toward securing prizes at our agricultural fairs.

The Reeve and Council of South Monaghan are above party considerations in managing the affairs of the township, and even if they were not, not one of them dare so far venture to forget that respect due to the character of Mr. Lang as to hint to that gentleman that the gravelling of his lane would be the price of his support at the next election. Possibly "Veritas" is in the mark., and would wish our Council to provide some little job to fix him. He is a lover of fast horses and might like a gravelled drive near his house, so he could sit under his own fig tree and watch the young gentlemen with fancy equippages move past. Never mind, "Veritas," if you keep on getting three loads a year and the gravel does not run out, you will have a road of your own pretty soon and no thanks to the Council. Hoping we may hear no more of this miserable business

I remain
Yours,

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL :

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat ;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before ; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald. Agents.—Dear Sirs :—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

A TERRIBLE CRIME.

WHISKEY FINDS ANOTHER VICTIM—A SUICIDE'S GRAVE.

About half past twelve o'clock on Sunday last, while Ministers of the Gospel in the quiet churches were pronouncing the benediction upon their flocks, while the languid breezes' laden with the fragrance of the new-mown clover in the silent fields beyond, floated lazily over the town, while nature in its most gorgeous garb offered up its peaceful and grateful incense to the Giver of all Good, in an humble dwelling in the southern suburbs of the town, a man whose seat of reason had been usurped by the serpent that lurks in the rum bottle lying in wait for the crisis of human weakness which forms its opportunity, with pallid face, trembling fingers, wild eyes and phrenzied resolve, was seasoning his last drink of whiskey with the potion of Death, and hurrying his footsteps to the Judgment James Russell, a mason's laborer, aged 47 years, was the name of this victim of his own hand. It seems that the deceased had been up town on Friday, and drank heavily, taking a bottle home with him, which was taken from him and hid by his wife. On Saturday he complained of feeling "shaky," the consequence of the revulsion of nature against the vile poison he had outraged his stomach with, and was given liquor during the day, remaining home from work. In the evening a neighbor procured him another bottle, and shortly after noon on Sunday his wife discovered, by green on his whiskers and teeth, that the wretched man had taken poison. Dr. W. H. Burritt was summoned, everything possible to rescue him from the brink of eternity was done, but to no avail, and he died in agony about midnight. Coroner Kincaid held an inquest on Monday morning, the following comprising the jury:—T. Theobald, foreman, C. Culling, P. Gifford, J. Fuller, Ed. Webb, W. Squires, E. Dunsford, J. Russell, D. Waghorn, T. Armour, J. N. Woods and A. Morton. Jas. Gerrard, a neighbor, testified to deceased telling him that he had been drinking hard and felt shaky, asking Gerrard to bring him whiskey from town, which he did. Dr. Burritt's evidence was to the effect that death ensued from Paris green of which deceased had taken enough to kill ten men. The wife of deceased testified to the discovery of the poison being taken, and that he had once attempted suicide before. Finally the jury brought in the following verdict:—

"That the deceased, James Russell, came to his death on the 3rd day of July, in the year of our Lord 1881, by taking Paris green in a sufficient quantity to cause his death. The jury further agree that the deceased had been labouring under great excitement, caused by the use of liquor and disturbance in his family, and that the said James Russell deliberately took the poison with the intention of ending an existance that he was tired of."

Previous to their leaving Baltimore, a deputation waited upon Rev. W. R. Barker and his lady, to testify their regret at their departure. After a complimentory address read by Mr. C. A. Lapp, Miss Mitchell, on behalf of the Bible Class, presented Mrs. Barker with an elegant silver water-pitcher with appropriate inscription. Rev. Mr. B. made an eloquent and forcible reply.

The Lindsay Post says:—"Mr. E. E. Henderson leaves town this week to take the chief position in the hardware establishment of Mr. John Bertram, Peterborough. During the fifteen years or so in which he has been in the hardware business in Lindsay, M. Henderson has made an excellent reputation, and has the experience, tact and ability to manage successfully all the details of a large business like Mr. Bertram's. Mr. Henderson has, by his unfailing courtesy and many genial qualities, made many warm friends in the town and county, and was especially popular with the farmers and grangers. Mr. Henderson's departure from Lindsay will be regretted, but as he is not far away, in fact, in one of our own suburbs, we shall see him again occasionally."

(From our own Correspondent.)

WEATHER NOTES FOR JUNE.—The month now closed has been one of very low temperature for June, ranging on the aggregate 32° 10' above zero. Heavy frost on the 6th and 7th did considerable damage to fruit and the crops—late sown barley and Arnecta wheat suffering most. Of the latter, whatever may be the result it looks unfavorable at present, being very severely injured. Rain fell on 12 days, mostly slightly, only making for the month 2¾ inches. The hay harvest is now fairly under way, which will no doubt be a good average crop, but would have been considerable more only for the frost in the beginning of the month.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

On Wednesday of last week George Hasten, a lad, was brought in from Monaghan by his father and handed over to the police, a warrant having been issued for his arrest for having committed an assault with intent to do grievous bodily harm upon Darcy Dunlop, on the Cavan boundary, on the 21st instant. He was brought before the Magistrate and remanded. On Tuesday he was committed for trial at the Assizes.

On Thursday last a number of liquor cases were called, when the Inspector, Mr. Cox, succeeded in having Wm. Bell and Jno. Wilson fined $20 and costs, each, for selling on Sunday, and J. B. Dann, for selling without license, the same amount.

A charge against T. G. Choate for selling on Sunday was enlarged till Tuesday, as also charges against Mrs. Barbino, W. Kennealey, and Robt. Donoghue, (Ennismore.)

A case against P. Tagney, of Ennismore, was dismissed.

On Tuesday T. G. Choate, R. Donoghue, W. Kennealey and James Fox were fined $20 and costs, each, for violation of the License Act.

Thos. Halpin and Geo. Clarke were charged with fighting and the case was enlarged till to-morrow.

VENNOR'S PREDICTIONS FOR JULY.

A MONTH OF STORMS AND CASUALTIES.

July, though probably entering cool and showery in most sections, will rapidly merge into sultriness and excessive heat shortly after the 4th or 5th of the month. From the 5th to the 10th, excessive heat will continue with frequent and severe storms of wind, hail and thunder, during which casualties from lightning are much to be feared. Between the 10th and 15th of the month similar atmospheric conditions are likely to continue with thunder and lightning storms of almost daily occurrence and hurricanes of heated winds. Approaching the 20th, heavy showers, often accompanied by hail, will occur more frequently, with very sultry and muggy intervals. In the neighborhood of the 21st and 22nd days, torrents of rain will likely fall in Western Ontario and throughout a large portion of the United States, while in the Western and and South western States, in particular, cyclones, hurricanes and most destructive hail storms are likely to cause wide-spread havoc and loss of life and property. Unsettled and stormy weather with intervals of great heat will occur up to the 25th of the month, after which a decided and cooler change may take place, with cool to cold nights about the 27th and 28th. Hot weather, however, will again set in towards the last day of the month, or entry of August.

A REMARKABLE MAN-OF-WAR.

A remarkable addition to our navy was made yesterday afternoon (writes a London correspondent). The Polyphemus, as the new man-of-war which was then launched was christened by Mrs. Trevelyan, is an experiment, the result of which will be watched with keen interest by all naval men throughout the world. It strikingly resembles the "tipcat" in shape and is specially designed for offensive as opposed to defensive purposes. To this end it possesses a steel clad ram projecting under water for twelve feet, from the extremity of which Whitehead fish torpedoes will be ejected. From the deck torpedoes will also be discharged, and in addition four of the most powerful Nordenfelt guns will be carried on revolving turrets. The vessel is designed as a sort of rival to such monster ships as the Italia and the Lepanto, which it is thought she would be able to sink by means of her ram and torpedoes, and she is therefore so engined as to have a speed calculated at sixteen or seventeen knots an hour. I cannot say, however, that I envy the officers and crew of the Polyphemus the quarters assigned to them. From the construction of the ship all the light below will have to be artificial, and air will have to be pumped in by steam power. It is only charitable to hope that the new man-of-war will not be often in commission.

A loving wish, but not likely to be duly appreciated after a moment's thought, was that made in answer to the son of a fond father, who, when going to war, promised to bring home the head of an enemy. "I should be glad," quoth the parent, "to see you come home without a head, provided you come safe."

A TERRIBLE CRIME.

WHISKEY FINDS ANOTHER VICTIM—A SUICIDE'S GRAVE.

About half past twelve o'clock on Sunday last, while Ministers of the Gospel in the quiet churches were pronouncing the benediction upon their flocks, while the languid breezes' laden with the fragrance of the new-mown clover in the silent fields beyond, floated lazily over the town, while nature in its most gorgeous garb offered up its peaceful and grateful incense to the Giver of all Good, in an humble dwelling in the southern suburbs of the town, a man whose seat of reason had been usurped by the serpent that lurks in the rum bottle lying in wait for the crisis of human weakness which forms its opportunity, with pallid face, trembling fingers, wild eyes and phrenzied resolve, was seasoning his last drink of whiskey with the potion of Death, and hurrying his footsteps to the Judgment. James Russell, a mason's laborer, aged 47 years, was the name of this victim of his own hand. It seems that the deceased had been up town on Friday, and drank heavily, taking a bottle home with him, which was taken from him and hid by his wife. On Saturday he complained of feeling "shaky," the consequence of the revulsion of nature against the vile poison he had outraged his stomach with, and was given liquor during the day, remaining home from work. In the evening a neighbor procured him another bottle, and shortly after noon on Sunday his wife discovered, by green on his whiskers and teeth, that the wretched man had taken poison. Dr. W. H. Burritt was summoned, everything possible to rescue him from the brink of eternity was done, but to no avail, and he died in agony about midnight. Coroner Kincaid held an inquest on Monday morning, the following comprising the jury:—T. Theobald, foreman, C. Culling, P. Gifford, J. Fuller, Ed. Webb, W. Squires, E. Dunsford, J. Russell, D. Waghorn, T. Armour, J. N. Woods and A. Morton. Jas. Gerrard, a neighbor, testified to deceased telling him that he had been drinking hard and felt shaky, asking Gerrard to bring him whiskey from town, which he did. Dr. Burritt's evidence was to the effect that death ensued from Paris green of which diseased had taken enough to kill ten men. The wife of deceased testified to the discovery of the poison being taken, and that he had once attempted suicide before. Finally the jury brought in the following verdict:—

"That the deceased, James Russell, came to his death on the 3rd day of July, in the year of our Lord 1881, by taking Paris green in a sufficient quantity to cause his death. The jury further agree that the deceased had been labouring under great excitement, caused by the use of liquor and disturbance in his family, and that the said James Russell deliberately took the poison with the intention of ending an existence that he was tired of."

WEATHER NOTES FOR JUNE.—The month now closed has been one of very low temperature for June, ranging on the aggregate 52° 10' above zero. Heavy frost on the 6th and 7th did considerable damage to fruit and the crops—late sown barley and Arnecta wheat suffering most. Of the latter, whatever may be the result it looks unfavorable at present, being very severely injured. Rain fell on 12 days, mostly slightly, only making for the month 2¾ inches. The hay harvest is now fairly under way, which will no doubt be a good average crop, but would have been considerable more only for the frost in the beginning of the month.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

A case against P. Tagney, of Ennismore, was dismissed.

On Tuesday T. G. Choate, R. Donoghue, W. Kennealey and James Fox were fined $20 and costs, each, for violation of the License Act.

Thos. Halpin and Geo. Clarke were charged with fighting and the case was enlarged till to-morrow.

VENNOR'S PREDICTIONS FOR JULY.

A MONTH OF STORMS AND CASUALTIES.

July, though probably entering cool and showery in most sections, will rapidly merge into sultriness and excessive heat shortly after the 4th or 5th of the month. From the 5th to the 10th, excessive heat will continue with frequent and severe storms of wind, hail and thunder, during which casualties from lightning are much to be feared. Between the 10th and 15th of the month similar atmospheric conditions are likely to continue with thunder and lightning storms of almost daily occurrence and hurricanes of heated winds. Approaching the 20th, heavy showers, often accompanied by hail, will occur more frequently, with very sultry and muggy intervals. In the neighborhood of the 21st and 22nd days, torrents of rain will likely fall in Western Ontario and throughout a large portion of the United States, while in the Western and and South western States, in particular, cyclones, hurricanes and most destructive hail storms are likely to cause wide-spread havoc and loss of life and property. Unsettled and stormy weather with intervals of great heat will occur up to the 25th of the month, after which a decided and cooler change may take place, with cool to cold nights about the 27th and 28th. Hot weather, however, will again set in towards the last day of the month, or entry of August.

A REMARKABLE MAN-OF-WAR.

A remarkable addition to our navy was made yesterday afternoon (writes a London correspondent). The Polyphemus, as the new man-of-war which was then launched was christened by Mrs. Trevelyan, is an experiment, the result of which will be watched with keen interest by all naval men throughout the world. It strikingly resembles the "tipcat" in shape and is specially designed for offensive as opposed to defensive purposes. To this end it possesses a steel clad ram projecting under water for twelve feet, from the extremity of which Whitehead fish torpedoes will be ejected. From the deck torpedoes will also be discharged, and in addition four of the most powerful Nordenfelt guns will be carried on revolving turrets. The vessel is designed as a sort of rival to such monster ships as the Italia and the Lepanto, which it is thought she would be able to sink by means of her ram and torpedoes, and she is therefore so engined as to have a speed calculated at sixteen or seventeen knots an hour. I cannot say, however, that I envy the officers and crew of the Polyphemus the quarters assigned to them. From the construction of the ship all the light below will have to be artificial, and air will have to be pumped in by steam power. It is only charitable to hope that the new man-of-war will not be often in commission.

A loving wish, but not likely to be duly appreciated after a moment's thought, was that made in answer to the son of a fond father, who, when going to war, promised to bring home the head of an enemy. "I should be glad," quoth the parent, "to see you come home without a head, provided you come safe."

How to Catch a Horse.

If the horse is shy and hard to catch, take finely grated castor, oils of rhodium and cummin. Keep them in separate bottles, well corked. Put some of the oil of cummin on your hand and approach the horse on the windy side. He will thus move toward you. As soon as you can reach him, rub some of the cummin on his nose, give him a little of the castor on anything he likes, and get a few drops of the oil of rhodium on his tongue. After this you can make him do nearly everything you want. Treat him kindly, feed well, and your victory is certain. —Turf, Field and Farm.

The Best Market Apples.

The subject was discussed at a recent meeting of the Elmira Farmers' Club, and G. W. Cone, of Ontario county, who had given much attention to select the most profitable varieties, said he would choose first the Baldwin, then the Rambo and Fallwater. The last two ripen later than the Baldwin, and hang on the tree till they are harvested, distributing the labor of gathering as to time. The Rambo proves a strong grower and very productive, and although the fruit is not large, it sells well in market. The Fallwater is a magnificent grower, and bears good crops of large, smooth apples every year, and in Western New York keeps all winter. He objected to the Spy as too tardy a bearer, to the Swaar as too slow a grower, to the Tompking King as too short lived, to the Spitzenberg as a shy bearer, to the Rhode Island Greening for its low price, and to the Roxbury Russet as not keeping longer than other sorts, now that improved fruit houses are erected. But some other members of the club regarded the Greening as quite as valuable as the Baldwin and selling as well. Mr. Cone commenced orcharding nineteen years ago with forty sorts which he has reduced to the above list of three.—New England Farmer.

How to Drive a Hen.

When a woman has a hen to drive into the coop, she takes hold of her skirts with both hands shakes them quietly to the delinquent, and says: "Shoo there!" The hen takes one look at the object to convince herself that it is a woman, then stalks majestically into the coop. A man doesn't do that way. He goes out doors and says: "It is singular nobody can drive a hen but me," and picking up a stick of wood, hurls it at the offending biped and observes, "Get in there, you thief." The hen immediately loses her reason and dashes to the other end of the yard. The man straightway dashes after her. She comes back with her head down, her wings out and followed by an assortment of stove wood, fruit cans and crockery, and a very mad man in the rear. Then she skims under the barn, and over a fence or two, and around the house, and back again to the coop, and all the while talking as only an excited hen can talk, and all the while followed by things convenient for handling, and a man whose coat is on the saw-buck, and whose hat is on the ground, and whose perspiration has no limit. By this time the other hens have come out to take part in the debate and help dodge missles, and the man says every hen on the place shall be sold in the morning, and puts on his things and goes down the street, and the woman has every one of those hens housed and counted in two minutes.—Mobile Register.

Hay Making.

As the season of hay making approaches, one of the prominent questions which arises is the best time to cut the grass. This question should be decided according to the best interest of each individual farmer. Some varieties of grass will bear earlier and more frequent cutting than others, and seem to do all the better as a series of years. Grass like timothy, which renews itself by annual formation of bulbs, for the best result of several seasons, must be allowed to complete maturity and perfect seed. Cutting down the stems before the plant has come to maturity shortens the life of the plant, as the bulbs require a certain amount of nutriment to be returned from the stalk and leaves, and this is always done after maturity, never before. The point indicating completion of nutrition is indicated by dryness of the stem near the crown of the bulb. When these indications appear, the seeds are fully developed, and ripen fully as the ripening of the stem ascends. After this first appearance cutting ceases to injure, for the bulbs have received all necessary nutriment for the renewal and prolongation of the plant. If the grass be cut before thus matured, nutrition is arrested, proper growth ceases, and an effort to repair injury is made by sending out small bulbs which produce only weak and unhealthy stalks, and the plant ultimately succumbs from drought, cold or other natural causes.

Timothy left to take its natural course remains fresh and green during the winter, but this green portion should never be severed by any close cutting, or grazing, or the life of the plant is sacrificed. Most kinds of grasses are not injured so easily and may be cut at an earlier stage without injury to the plants. Grass cut when in full bloom, makes as good hay for feeding and fattening purposes as any stage, according to my observation, if we except timothy; that I found most fattening when cut after the maturity of the seed. The proper curing and saving of hay is of as much importance as the time of cutting, for unless properly done it matters little at what stage the grass is cut after the seed stem shoots. For my part I am in favor of saving and storing hay in tight barns in as green a state as is possible to save it and not have it blacken by heating. To do this little of the hot, burning sum rays should be allowed on it when spread after cutting. It will surprise many old style farmers how green hay may be put in the mow, in a tight barn, when cut while the grass is not wet, and thus cured.—Country Gentleman.

An active, intelligent girl about seven years of age, daughter of Mr. Smith, Uxbridge, while going out to the field to her father on the afternoon of Monday the 13th inst., had occasion to climb over a log fence and in doing so one of the logs rolled over striking her on the head and killed her instantly.

A horrible case of suicide occurred at Orono, on Wednesday of last week, John Simpson, cabinet maker, in a moment of desperation caused by financial difficulties and strong drink, cut his throat with a common dull case-knife. A correspondent of the Orillia Times makes the rather startling announcement that the waters of Lake Simcoe are gradually rising and encroaching on the land. In one place, which was an Indian foot path in 1823, steamboats now run in deep water. This writer says that in another place the water has risen, to his own knowledge, twenty feet within thirty years, so that boats can pass across the butt end of McInnes' Point now, where thirty years ago it was land and trees. The cause of the rise is a mystery.

A five-years old daughter of John Fountain, of Cameron, met with a dreadful accident on the 15th ult. She was kicked on the head by a horse while looking after cows in the pasture field, tearing away a portion of the scalp and skull two by three inches in extent, allowing the brain to protrude to the size of an orange. The child was found by the father lying in the field in a pool of blood and in an unconscious state. It was allowed to remain several hours without there being anything done, as the case was considered a hopeless, one by the heart-stricken parents and by all who saw it. Medical aid was subsequently procured, and the wound properly treated, the protruding brain being removed. At last accounts there were slight hopes of recovery.

The Executive Committee of the Lindsay Central Exhibition met on Thursday of last week, and appointed the show to be held on Oct. 4th, 5th and 6th. The prize list was taken into consideration and some amendments made. A special prize of $5 is to be given for the best lady equestrian attended by a gentleman. Slight reductions were made in the prizes for Durhams, Devons and Ayrshires. In revising the prizes for grain were reduced from $4, $3 and $2 to $3, $2 and $1, and Arnecta and White Russian were substituted for Fife and Club. Rye was substituted for two-rowed barley. The prizes for best lot of poultry were made $3 and $2 instead of $5 for one. Special prizes of $5, $3 and $2 for best walking teams, open to all, were added to the list.

Last Thursday afternoon as Dr. McCamus' steam yacht was coming up to Lindsay, the fireman let a stick of wood fall under the pitman which struck it of course with tremendous force and drove right through the bottom, making a hole about three feet by six inches. The water rushed in and though the bow was turned toward shore the vessel filled and sank in two minutes in about 6 feet of water. There were on board at the time Dr. McCamus, Miss McCamus, Dr. Bonnell, and Jackson Reid of Bobcaygeon, Mr. and Miss Fair of Peterboro, and four or five other gentlemen. The accident happened a mile below Green Point, perhaps six miles below Lindsay. Mr. W. McBurney, who was superintending the dredging on the new cut, observed the accident and came to their relief in a boat, gallantly rescuing the young ladies, who escaped with a slight wetting. The gentlemen, however, had a different experience, but were got off safely.—Post.

WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all druggists

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply; increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. CHAPTER IV.

FATE PLAYS INTO LADY GWENDOLINE'S HANDS.

Our story demands that the reader should leap over a space of five years.

Summer has begun; autumn has placed her artistic hand upon the ancient Cunningham woods, making them redden and glow like fire beneath her touch.

Decay is within the castle, as without. The year is dying, and Sir Hereward is stretched upon the bed from which he will never rise alive.

How these five years have passed with him there is not space minutely to enquire. Whether that second wedded life had not answered quite the expectations he had formed; whether there had been moments when, despite all efforts, the truth had forced itself in upon him that his son had been right, and he wrong, there is no need to speculate. If there had been regrets, he kept them, as proud men will, to himself.

But certain it is, perhaps because aware that his health was failing, his heart had long been yearning for his son—yearning in secret, for he had not ventured to make known this yielding to Lady Gwendoline.

As usual, in the union of June and December, it was the strong, healthful, self-reliant June that ruled. Not one in all Cunningham society would have said Sir Hereward's will had to be that of his beautiful wife. The men considered him a lucky old fellow; the ladies, that no husband could have so attentive and considerate a helpmate.

Yet the Baronet knew otherwise. Whether or not it arose from that disinclination to contend or assert authority which so often accompanies failing vital power, certain it is that Lady Gwendoline had long governed. Indeed, though he hardly could explain it, he was rather frightened of her, especially on the subject of Bertie. Thus he kept his longings to himself, waiting a favorable opportunity to speak; for see his son he felt he must. Once he had hinted his desire, and had been readily answered.

"Of course, Hereward, it must be as you please. No doubt I fall far short of what he can be to you. Have him here, by all means. Only, considering the flattering opinion he entertains of me, while he is in the castle you will excuse my leaving it."

"You, Gwendoline! As if I could permit that! Well, well, say no more about it now. In time, I hope, you will learn to love him."

"As he has already!" reflected Lady Cunningham, furiously.

The conversation had dropped there, but its subject ever haunted Gwendoline's head.

The Baronet had no need to speak. She knew perfectly well he had pardoned Bertie—that he was hungering to summon him back. In that case, how long would that which made her mistress of everything, last? How long before it would be annulled by another, reinstating Herbert in his rights?

"He shall never return here if I can help it," she reflected, "and no other will than that shall ever be made."

To prevent this, her affectionate care increased that she scarcely permitted Sir Hereward to be ten minutes alone.

Six month later, two fits following rapidly one on the other, laid the Baronet on his death bed.

"Gwendoline," he said one morning, after the doctor's visit, "it is no use for you or he trying to hide it from me. I know my end is near. I must see Herbert—dear Bertie! Surely you will let that I may say farewell to my son?"

"O! Oh, dearest," in tones of fond reproach, "you know not how you pain me! I will send for him this instant!"

"Thank you—thank you! Heaven bless you, Gwendoline!" And, tears of gratitude in his eyes and voice, he pressed her hand. "Darling you cannot tell how I have to see my boy!"

"You shall. I will telegraph at once. He will be here, no doubt, before to-morrow. But I forgot"—and a perplexed expression came into her eyes—"his address. We do not know it. How, then, send?"

A conscious blush passed over the dying man's countenance.

"I have it, Gwendoline," he said. "Something seemed to whisper me that you might come like this, and I wished to be prepared. You will find it in the left drawer of the escritoire."

A blue tinge, unpleasant to see, touched Lady Cunningham's lips and temples, but she said, smiling, "I perceive. You wanted to send him money without my knowing." Then, in a sudden burst of grief, bowing her head on her husband's hand, "Oh, Hereward! you could not have loved me—no, no—to have feared me thus!"

"Not love you, Gwen? You have been all in all to me, dearest. But I chose that no one to know—not even Bertie. I sent it anonymously, and had it posted in London."

"Forgive me, Hereward," she answered, sobbing. "If you hid it from me it was my own fault, for I made you think me pitiless against poor Bertie. By sending this telegram myself, summoning him here, I shall prove otherwise."

Swiftly she crossed to the escritoire. Then she drew forth the envelope bearing Herbert's address, she saw another paper lying on which were written about half a dozen dates, with sums of money after each.

It was the Baronet's memorandum of what he had sent.

Lady Cunningham crushed it in her hand for later perusal; and, sitting, down, wrote in a telegram paper. It ran:—

"DEAR HERBERT,—

"Your father grieves to say your father is not well. He longs to see you. Pray come at once. Forget the past sincerely as do he and I.

"GWEN."

"Thank you, Gwen," said the Baronet. "I cannot tell, dear, how happy you have made me?"

"And myself," she smiled, going back to finish the address; but it could not have been hurry nor carelessness that led her so to change it that no telegraph-office in all London could possibly have hit upon the right one.

"I will take it myself," she said. "It is an evening; the walk will do me good, and then, dearest, we shall know there is no mistake."

Sir Hereward rapidly agreeing, her maid summoned the nurse, put on her hat and shawl, and, refusing any attendance, set out for the town.

An hour had set before she returned. Among the groups of cedars on the crest of the hill which they gave the name—a good deal inky flashes against the red background.

Lady Cunningham had been unavoidably delayed; so, to gain time, turning from the path before reaching the lodge, she took a path running through a wooded, retired portion of the grounds.

Her pace was rapid; but her thoughts still ran upon the same string—the telegram.

"Dr. Gotely said to-day it was hardly possible that Hereward could live forty-eight hours. Then care must be taken to keep his mind composed. Before, therefore, the failure of the telegram is discovered—if it ever be—he will be past rectifying it. My revenge will not be balked. Herbert Cunningham shall never place foot here."

She stopped abruptly, arrested by a heavy tread of a man crushing the rustling leaves a few yards in front of her.

Pausing, she listened. The sound was retreating from her. Who could it be? One of the gardeners?

To ascertain, she hurried forward, peering through the tree-trunks, for under the masses of foliage twilight already reigned. Soon, however, she halted once more, a startled cry on her lip, her color fled.

The man had his back to her, but she recognized him instantly. It was Herbert Cunningham himself.

One moment she stood confounded, speechless, at this failure on the plans. What should she do?

In a second she had decided.

Clothing her features in a timid, anxious expression, quickening her steps, she called, nervously, "Herbert!"

At the sound he turned hastily round.

As his glance rested on the speaker, it grew as frigid, as cold as ice.

Not waiting for him, she said, "You have come, Herbert. Oh, how I have wished it—prayed for it! Surely Providence has sent you. But this hour I have sent a telegram summoning you."

"You!" he could not help ejaculating, discrediting.

"I! Oh, Herbert," almost humbly, "you have been cruel to me—have misunderstood and wronged me! In pity, do not, at such a time, continue to do so!"

The young man regarded her distrustfully.

"My father is ill—I have heard so," he said, coldly. "He has sent a telegram! He wishes to see me? Good Heaven! what do you mean?" he added, as Lady Cunningham, slightly shaking her head, averted her face.

"He has not sent. He expressed no wish to see you, Herbert. It is I who have sent—who thought you should be here."

"Not see me!—and he is so ill? Lady Cunningham, I will see him! No one shall prevent me!" he cried

"Go! Try!" she rejoined. "I, Herbert, will not hinder you. The path to the Castle is open to you as to me. Only, if you would save yourself from failure, insult, and humiliation, I entreat you to hear me first."

She had drawn back from him, and stood quietly in the path.

Amazed, halting, he regarded her curiously.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"That you should read me rightly at last; that you should know me as your friend, not your foe. I have substantially proved it before now."

"You?" he exclaimed, with a start and flush.

"Yes; but of that hereafter. Now I have sins enough on my own shoulders, I do not doubt, without having to bear the unjust one of separating a father from his son."

"And can you say that this sin is not yours, Lady Cunningham?" he demanded, sternly.

"Yes," came the unshaken reply, "and will prove it. Ah, you shall hear Sir Hereward himself declare it when you meet—for I have vowed that you should meet."

"You! Pardon me, this appears a mystery—a riddle I cannot read."

"Let me do so for you. Listen! When first I married Hereward, my anger was great against you. You may own that I had cause. But when time went on, and no children blessed our union, the fact of your banishment began to weigh on me. I looked around at the wealth of Cunningham, and knew—for I discovered your address—that you were in comparative poverty. I heard, from Sir Hereward, that he would never receive you back; yet I felt it was cruel, unnatural you should not be at least friends; therefore, at every available opportunity, I began to plead your cause. The result was to bring your father's anger on myself. He was obdurate. My mention of your name seemed only to make him more so. Therefore—therefore" her voice fell, her head dropped—"I did the best I could in secret."

"Do you mean," he asked, striding toward her, with emotion, "you anonymously sent me aid?"

She was silent.

"I cannot believe it!"

"Your disbelief, Herbert—my desire that you read me now aright—forces me to a confession I would willingly have avoided. You received an anonymous enclosure on the 19th March, the 20th September, the 31st of December."

"Heavens!" he ejaculated. "It is true! Forgive me, for I have maligned you indeed! You were generous."

"With what was your own," she laughed, lightly. "But I must hasten on. Your last words, Herbert, give me greater courage. When this illness came upon your father, I again urged reconciliation. Though repulsed, I repeated my entreaties daily. It seemed too awful a thing that he should die at enmity with you, his only son."

"Is he so bad as that?" asked the young man, a quiver in his voice.

"I grieve to say, yes. Herbert, bear it like a man. The Doctor fears he cannot survive longer than a fortnight."

"My dear father!" exclaimed the son, dropping his face, with a sob, in his hands. "Oh, I must see him!"

"You shall! Trust in me. When I heard that, I devised a plan, and telegraphed for you at once to come."

"And the plan?"

"To introduce you, notwithstanding his prohibition, secretly into his presence. I say secretly, for the servants—all strangers since you were here—have received imperative orders not to allow you to enter, though they use force."

"Great Heaven!" and the young man began with deep agitation to pace the path. "That such a love as once he bore me could turn to such a hate!"

"'Tis but for a few hours now, I am sure, if you will consent to my proposal," said Lady Cunningham, watching her companion as he paced to and fro in the gloom; both too occupied to observe the figure of a woman passing among the trees some little way off, who halted, looked toward them, then disappeared.

"I will agree to anything, so that I may see him, at least, once."

"You shall, but he must not know your intent, or he would refuse. Did you force your way into his presence, the scene—the shock would kill him; and, Herbert, I would not have his death on your hands."

"Good heavens, no!"

"My plan, therefore, is this. Of course you know the old postern at the at the foot of the west wing?"

"Perfectly."

"Well, when evening closes in I am always alone with Sir Hereward, relieving the nurse until night. To-morrow, soon after the moon has risen, come to the postern. It is never used; but I will take care it shall be opened ready for you. The old passage it gives into is dark—"

"That matters little," broke in the young man. "As a lad, I could traverse it blind-fold. It leads, by a flight of stairs and a private passage, to a sliding panel in my father's room."

"Exactly!" cried Lady Cunningham, delighted. "I see you have caught my idea. Ascend to the panel—tap at it—I will be ready to admit you—and success is assured; for Sir Hereward says you resemble your mother—hence he has but to look upon you to forgive."

"A thousand, thousand thanks!" ejaculated the young man, clasping her hand. "How, Lady Cunningham, can I win your pardon for the past?"

"By forgetting it," she answered, promptly. "It will be kinder to us both."

"But why should I not see my father to-night?"

"Because Sir Hereward is now under the influence of a soporific, from which it would be perilous to arouse him, and which may cause him to sleep till dawn, or you would not have found me here. The doctor expects it will make him stronger. Excuse me; are you alone at Weirbourne?—your wife—have you children?"

"I am a widower. My May died eighteen months ago on giving birth to her second child—my only one, for death robbed me of the first."

"Where will you stay until to-morrow?"

"At the inn."

"Will you, do you think, be recognised? It would be better not. Should your presence become known to your father, he might, conceiving it a plot to take advantage of his failing health, give such orders that even I would have to obey them. Illness makes him so irritable."

"That is true. Be assured that none shall recognize me."

"Then farewell, until to-morrow. I need not say be punctual," she remarked, extending her hand. "I must stop no longer. Never since Sir Hereward's illness have I left him so long."

Herbert Cunningham pressed a kiss on her white fingers. It sent a thrill through her, for it recalled that she never could forget nor forgive.

Again he would have thanked her, but she checked him, and hurried off among the trees.

"That those anonymous sums so required should have come from her!" thought the young man, as he watched the twilight shadows close round the graceful, stately figure. "How I have wronged her; or how she has changed."

At the same time her ladyship's thoughts ran, "what a fortunate meeting! I must not be idle, for there is much to do before to-morrow night. Oh, idiot! to trust a woman he has deceived, whose vanity he has wounded to the quick! Can time ever wipe out that? Never!"

Since that meeting in the grounds, twenty-four hours have gone by. To his nurse it was apparent Sir Hereward was sinking fast.

The feverish restlessness upon him was but hastening the end.

A lamp burned on the table of the oak bed-chamber, the heavy curtains of the bed were drawn back, and the Baronet, supported by pillows, ever turned his haggard eyes from the door to his wife, who stood in the recess of the casement window gazing intently down into the grounds, upon which the moon, ever and anon sailing from some massy pile of wrack, shone with a fitful light before it was again hidden.

"Gwendoline," called the Baronet, fretfully, "an hour must surely have elapsed since you last enquired. Ask again if no news, or telegram has arrived."

"It would be useless, Hereward. From here I command a free view of the road, and no one has approached. Be certain I am right. He has not waited to telegraph, even, but in person is hastening hither."

"In that case, the journey at the most is but nine hours. He would have arrived ere this," responded the Baronet, testily.

"Then—" she stopped abruptly.

"Then what? Why do you hesitate, Gwen?" he demanded, with the irritability of sickness.

"Out of fear of paining you, Hereward. I would have said he is not as forgiving as you. But that I will not believe."

"Could he be so cruel, so unnatural? No, no; impossible! I had the most to pardon. There, as you say, that is not to be believed, for mercenary motives alone, even if all affection was dead, would bring him. Does he not believe that he is disinherited?"

Believe!

Was it that word which made her ladyship start and pale so? Had it been uttered unconsciously? Was there meaning in it—meaning that threatened to balk that end for which she had toiled?

Leaning by the casement, she peered anxiously into the darkness, her hand pressed over her heart; then swiftly she glided back to the bed.

"He believes," she repeated. "Of course, Hereward, he would so believe; I had forgotten that. Ah, did he only know what he loses, he would not travel with such feet of lead."

The Baronet moved his hands and eyes nervously, and, finally, fixed the latter on his wife's face.

It was not easy to see, for his vision was failing fast, and her back was to the light.

"Gwen," he said, hurriedly, yet hesitating in reaching the confession, "blood is thicker than water. None feel that more than the old and dying."

He did not meet her eyes now; had he, it would have been a revelation.

"Herbert has been cruel, disobedient; but he is my only son. Not a child has blessed our union, so there will be more than enough for both. I have made that certain, unless—unless you marry again. Of course, I should not, after all, like the old place to go out of the family—to go to strangers."

He stopped, breathless, working his fingers with piteous feebleness. He seemed to wait for her to speak, but did not look at her.

A Great Cause of Human Misery

Is the Loss of

MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6c. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands every youth and every man in the land.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Autumn Sittings of the Court of Chancery, the Chancellor presiding, will be held at Peterborough on Oct. 7th; Lindsay, Oct. 3rd; and Cobourg Oct. 11th.

IN HARNESS AGAIN.—Many of Mr. John Moloney's old friends and customers will be glad to see him behind the counter again, Moloney & Co. having bought out the stock and business of F. E. Perry, and resplenished the stock for a first-class trade. We wish the firm an extensive and prosperous business.

VISITATION TO BRIDGENORTH.—Lindsay Lodge of Oddfellows, the Post says, "propose having a pic-nic excursion to Bridgenorth in two or three weeks, when the full moon affords (with the comet) a beautiful night. The scenery down that way is said to surpass the Thousand islands."

NARROW ESCAPE.—On Saturday afternoon, as Mr. A. W. Tully, who resides on the 2nd line of Smith, was coming into town with his wife, about half a mile from home, the horse ran away, smashing the buggy, and throwing Mr. and Mrs. Tully out. Fortunately neither were seriously hurt, though severely bruised.

ELOCUTION TOURNAMENT.—We presume it will be scarcely necessary to remind the public of the elocutionary entertainment to be given this evening in Bradburn's Hall. The high character of the programme, and the cheapness of the price of admission, ought to be sufficient to ensure a bumper house.

THE GLORIOUS 12TH.—The Orangemen of the County of Peterborough, intend joining their brethren of Hastings, in a grand celebration at Campbellford, on the 12th, and a cheap excursion will be run to and from that point on that day, on the Grand Junction R. R., tickets for the round trip from Peterborough will be only $1.00.

SUMMER EVENING CONCERTS.—Since the thoughtless and reprehensible conduct of persons visiting the Court House Green, and the hasty action of the County Council, have closed the Park, the Band are anxious for the town to provide them with a suitable place for their usual summer evening concerts, as they will be unable to play for the public amusement till something is done. Could not the Agricultural Grounds be made available once a week?

Three ply all wool Carpets now being offered at $1.25, is worth in the regular way $1.75 at Hall Innes & Co's.

SAD BEREAVEMENT.—The many friends of Rev. Henry Cullen, formerly of the township of Smith, now resident of Bloomfield, Iowa, will be grieved to learn of the untimely death of his wife, Mrs. Lolo Cullen, which took place within the first year of her marriage, and at the early age of nineteen years. The Chicago Interior, a religious journal, pays a striking tribute to the Christian virtues of the deceased lady. It says:—"All the consolations of the Gospel belong to her mourning friends. The writer had a most intimate acquaintance with Mrs. Cullen, and now that she is gone he loves to think of the Christian graces that shone so beautifully in her character. Her's was a pure and holy heart—a heart sanctified and ennobled for her love for the Saviour. It is seldom we see such consecration, such a firm faith and such a tireless devotion to the cause of Christ in one so young."

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—There being no quorum at the last regular meeting on Friday evening, a special meeting of the School Board will be held next week, for the purpose of striking a rate for the year.

JUST RECEIVED.—New Black Cashmeres, Black Bunting Prints, New Tapestry Carpets, and Lace Curtains, New Boots and Shoes, also a splendid lot of New Tweed Suits for men and boys. W. J. WALLACE, Lakefield. 20-tf

FOREIGN MISSION.—The ladies of St. John's Church met on Monday evening, and organized a Foreign Mission Society. The following were elected officers:—President, Mrs. Wallis; Vice-President, Mesdames Hatton and Dr. Geo. Burnham, jr.; Secretary, Miss Kirkpatrick; Treasurer, Miss Wallis.

USE THE celebrated "Lardine Oil" on your machinery. Best and cheapest oil in the market. Does not clog or gum. Has good heavy body and will not thin in summer. Sold in Peterborough by Messrs. McKee & Davidson; and in Lakefield by W. H. Casement. Try it and you will use no other. 25-52t

THE GAME OF CRICKET.—The first Cricket Match of the season, on Peterborough ground, will be played on Friday; the Yorkville club vs. a Peterborough eleven. The club request a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen. The former will be admitted free, as will contributing members. Admission for others, 10 cents.

Great Clearing Sale of Carpets at Hall, Innes & Co's.

SPECIAL SERVICES.—Special anniversary services will be held in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, on Sunday next, morning and evening, when the sermon will be preached by Rev. W. E. Cooper, of Port Hope. The public will also please bear in mind the excursion and pic-nic to Campbelltown, on Monday next. As the proceeds are to be devoted to the Parsonage Fund, it is hoped there will be a large attendance.

MILK WEED.—A writer in the Providence Journal predicts a useful future for the milk weed, which has heretofore been considered only a cumberer of the ground. Its seeds yield a finer oil than linseed; its gum can be used in place of Indian rubber; and from its floss a fabric resembling Irish poplin has been made; while the young shoots are used in the spring by some people instead of asparagus, which they resemble in flavor.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PIC-NIC.—St Paul's Sunday School will celebrate their anniversary this year by an excursion on the Grand Junction and pic-nic at Campbellford, on Thursday, 14th inst. A very low rate has been secured and a special train will convey the excursionists, and as the tickets are placed at the low rate of 25 cents, it is likely it will be generally patronised. In case of rain on Thursday the pic-nic will take place on the following day.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—On Monday morning as Teddy Webb, a mason in employ of Mr. D. Carlysle, was putting the last bricks on the chimney on the north west corner of Cluxton's new block, his foot slipped on the scaffold and he fell, bringing a portion of the chimney with him. He struck the second scaffold with his feet, the rebound giving him sufficient impetus to turn an involuntary somersault, from which he lit astride a narrow board, that accidentally happened to be lying across the joists of the third floor. Had it not been for this he must have fallen a distance of 20 feet below before striking the next row of joists, and in all probability would have gone through to the cellar and been killed outright or terribly injured. His escape is almost miraculous.

MUTUAL AID.—The subject of protection to the widow and orphan, when the protecting arm of the husband and father has been removed, has caused much serious reflection among the well disposed of mankind. Acknowledging the mutual dependence existing in the human race, and for the purpose of giving the principle tangible shape and making it practical in its effect, the Grange of Canada has established the Canadian Mutual Aid—an association whose advantages are open to all, and which at small cost gives reliable aid at the time of need. Everyone, especially the heads of families should have a policy in this association. Further information may be obtained from D. KENNEDY, General Agent, Peterborough P. O.

ST. PAUL'S TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.—A meeting of St. Paul's congregation was held on Monday evening of last week, Rev. E. F. Torrance in the chair, at which a Temperance Society was organised, with the following officers:—President, Rev. Mr. Torrance; Vice-President, Col. Haultain; Sec'y, Miss E. Beckett, Treas., G. C. Smith; Committee: R. Kingan, Sheriff Hall, Jas. Saulter, and others. During the evening several excellent pieces were rendered by the choir. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Torrance, Col. Haultain and Mr. Kingan. Prof. Burke gave a recitation. A paper by Miss E. Beckett, on "The Church and Total Abstinence," was read by Mr. Pentland, of which a synopsis will be given next week.

RAISING ACCIDENT.—An accident occurred at a "raising" at Mr. W. J. Miller's, in Otonabee, on Tuesday of last week which might have been attended with fatal consequences, but which happily did not result in any serious harm to any one. As the party were about putting the purloin plate in place, the scaffolding gave way, precipitating all on it to the ground. George Shearer fell 24 feet into a cellar, and though pretty well "shook up," got off without breaking any bones. James Miller fell 15 feet and was not hurt. T. McFarlane, in falling caught a beam and held on till rescued. John McFee caught the pole of the scaffold and escaped uninjured. In nine cases out of ten such an accident would have been attended with fatal or serious casualty, and those who received the fall may congratulate themselves on a narrow escape.

THE BUILDING BOOM.—On Tuesday afternoon a flag hoisted on the new block of Mr. Wm. Cluxton, corner of George and Hunter streets, indicated that the masonry of the building had been completed. Mr. D. Carlysle, who had the contract for this work, under Mr. A. Rutherford, deserves credit for the remarkably expeditious manner in which the work has been done, as well as for the superior style of the masonry. An idea may be gathered of the extent of the job, from the fact that the building consumed 300,000 bricks. Mr. Carlysle has the contract for rebuilding St. John's Church, for some $9,000, Mr. A. Rutherfard having a sub-contract, under him, for the carpenter-work. This is to be commenced immediately. Mr. Carlysle has also secured a contract to build a dwelling for Mr. T. W. Robinson, on the Bakewell property, which will cost some $3,500.

Boys' Tweed Suits are being sold by I Robinson & Co. for $3 and upwards, and men's good all wool suits for $8.00 and upwards. 10-tf

THE EXCURSION FROM BELLEVILLE.—The Intelligencer says:—"As we anticipated, the excursion to Peterborough, on Friday next, is likely to be the most largely attended of the season. Peterborough is a town well worth visiting; excursionists will be landed at the Crystal Palace grounds, (!!!) where dinner will be served."

Best 5 frame Brussels for $1 a yard at Hall, Innes & Co's.

B. C. CHURCH.—The Observer reports the following contributions from the congregation of Ashburnham, towards the connexional debt:—Mr. J. Sargent, $5; Mr. Smiley, $5; Mr. Tennyson, $5; Mr. Jory, $5; Mr. R. Mowry, $5; Mr. Minorgan, $5; Mr. McGregor, $3; Mr. J Armstrong, $2; Mr. McNeil, $2; Mr. Dawson, $2, Mrs. Smith, $1; Rev. T. W. Blatchford, $50. Total, $90. * * Rev. Mr. Joliffe and lady, previous to leaving Toronto for Peterborough, were presented with a handsome address and a purse of $40.

THE COLORADO BEETLE.—Experienced gardeners say that the potato bug bears signs of succumbing to the rule of nature, that "Little fleas, have smaller fleas upon their backs to bite 'em, and smaller fleas have lesser fleas, and so on ad infinitum." Apparently from the ravages of some industrious parasite, the constitution of the potato bug appears to be breaking up, and consequently his usual avocations are not pursued with his wonted vigor and effectiveness. The operations of the parasites may be seen by the naked eye in the shape of numerous small white spots on the back of the insect. They are more abundant on the female than on the male; and it is also noticed that the eggs take longer to hatch than formerly. These signs of—It is hoped—the approaching extinction of the beetle in this locality have been noticed to a slight extent in previous years, but they are so unmistakable in their tendency this season that the heart of the potato grower is glad within him.

Ladies this is a bona-fide sale so please call in and see the Bargains at Hall, Innes & Co's.

CRACKSMEN AT WORK.—Two daring robberies took place in town on Thursday night last, showing by their boldness and method, that we have had the honor of entertaining professional cracksmen amongst us. The most serious depredation occurred at the residence of Mr. Dalton Ullyott, whose pants were removed from his bed-room during the night, and found lying on the hall floor in the morning, minus $263 in cash, no one in the house having been disturbed during the night. Mr. Ullyott is of opinion that the thief must have secreted himself in the house during the evening, as the doors were securely fastened previous to the family retiring. During the same night, mysterious visitors entered the house of Mr. J. F. Austin, on Aylmer street, and went through his clothes to the extent of $23.25, leaving no clue behind them. The boldness, secrecy and complete success of these robberies, show plainly that the thieves were no ordinary bunglers, and people will do well to see that their bolts are drawn before trusting themselves to the embraces of Morpheus.

RAILWAY NOTES.—The work of laying steel rails from Curran's crossing to the station, is being rapidly completed..... Numerous lumber trains are daily passing down the Midland. The increased business is very great, and although the equipment of the road has been greatly improved, it is taxed to the utmost to carry the rapidly growing trade.....On Thursday of last week, the adjourned meeting of the Provisional Directors of the Ontario and Quebec Railway, was held at Toronto, when $1,000,000 stock was subscribed, and $100,000 paid in and deposited. A meeting will be held in Montreal, on the 19th inst., for the election of a permanent board. A conference was afterwards held with Col. Gray, chairman of the Great Western Railway, of Canada, and Mr. Broughton, the general manager of the company, at which arrangements were made for the hearty co-operation of that company in the scheme. Communications were also read from representatives of the Quebec Government road, and other railways interested in the early completion of this link in the chain of independent railway connection through Canada.

Carpets! Carpets! Carpets! cheap at Hall, Innes & Co's.

THE FIREMEN'S HALL.—At the close of the Council meeting on Monday evening, by invitation of Chief Rutherford, the Council paid a visit to the Fire Hall, Simcoe street. This hall has been refitted and refurnished by the Firemen at a cost of some $400, and presents an appearance equal, we fancy, if not superior, to any in the Dominion. The Chief welcomed the Council to the hall, and intimated that the Firemen would be glad to place their room at the disposal of the Council, for receptions or other occasions. He also intimated, that, as the furniture and fittings, on entering the hall, became the property of the town, and as the Firemen had been at large personal expense, they would expect something from the Council. After music and songs by members of the Brigade, the Mayor, Mr. Rutherford, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, and Mr. Stevenson, Chairman of of the Town Trust, spoke congratulating the Firemen on the improvements made, and promising as far at they were able, that their request for assistance would recieve favorable consideration. The latter gentleman spoke highly of the efficiency and sobriety of the brigade. Chief Rutherford modestly replied, intimating that the members of the brigade would always be found ready to discharge their duty to the town, to the best of their ability.

RESTORED TO HEALTH AND STRENGTH.—From Hon. W. H. Jones, of Vermont. "I have been troubled from my boyhood with cronic or hereditary lung complaint. Some years since, early in the Winter, I took cold, which has usually settled into a severe cough, which continued to increase as the season advanced, although I made use of all the cough remedies I had knowledge of. My family physician also prescribed for me, but I experienced no relief. During all this time I was gradually running down, losing flesh, and strength, until my friends as well as myself, became very much alarmed, thinking I should waste away in consumption. While in Boston, during the spring following, I was induced to try Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. After one day's trial I was sensible that it was relieving me; in ten days time my cough had entirely ceased, and I was soon restored to health and strength. I have ever since kept the Balsam in my house, and whenever any member of my family has a cough or cold, it is immediately resorted to. No family should be without it."

HAMPTON NEWS.

From our own Correspondent.

The S. S. Anniversary of the Methodist Church came off on Dominion Day, and was very interesting and successful. The Rev. W. R. Barker presided over the meeting. Choice music was furnished by the school. Addresses were delivered by Rev. D. Rogers of the London Conference and by the Rev. G. Cochrane of Toronto. The addresses of Mr. Cochrane was most interesting. He gave an account of his trip to Japan, and for upwards of an hour he delighted the audience with allusions to the manners, customs, and mythology of the people of that Empire. The proceeds of the anniversary were eighty dollars.

"CROWN JEWEL FLOUR"

NOTICE.

This Flour is made of No. 1 Hard Wheat by the new process, combined with the best methods and machinery in operation in the best Hungarian Mills, and will produce from 30 to 40 pounds more Bread per Barrel than the best superior wheat Flour. Therefore, the first cost though higher, is fully compensated in the increased yield of Bread as well as being a much better quality and more nutritious, having a much larger percentage of gluten and less of starch than ordinary wheat Flour. To those who may not be familiar with the use of this kind of Flour, we suggest mixing it moderately soft, which will require considerably more water than ordinarily used.

OBSEQUIES OF THE LATE MR. SCOTT.

The Law Society of Peterborough on learning of the death of Mr. W. H. Scott, Q.C., one of their members, met on Tuesday afternoon, and passed the following resolution:—

"Resolved,—That the Peterborough Law Association deeply laments the death of one of its members, the late W. H. Scott, Q.C. His commanding ability and uniform courtesy of manner in his intercourse with the members of the profession and with the general public render his demise a public loss as well as a source of sincere regret to his brothers in the profession.

"This Society would respectfully tender to Mrs. Scott and the members of his family their sympathy in this dark hour.

"Resolved further,—That in testimony of their respect for the deceased, the members of this Association do attend the funeral in a body."

On Tuesday evening a special meeting of the Town Council was called, the late Mr. Scott having been for several years Chief Magistrate of the town, when the following resolution was adopted:—

"Resolved,—That this Council do record its deep regret on hearing of the death of the late W. H. Scott, M. P. P., who was Mayor of this town for several years, and our representative in the Local Legislature, for the past seven years.

"That the Council join with their fellow-citizens in lamenting the death of so distinguished and respected a member of the community, and offer their respectful condolence to his bereaved family in their great loss; and that this Council attend the funeral, in their corporate capacity, as a slight mark of respect to his memory, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to his family."

The remains arrived from Orangeville on Tuesday morning, and were conveyed to the residence of Dr. Boucher, his brother-in-law, whence the funeral was appointed to proceed. Mr. W. R. Meredith, leader of the Ontario Opposition and Mr. A. Lauder, attended on behalf of the political colleagues of deceased in the Legislature.

The funeral cortege left Dr. Boucher's residence, on Water street, at 3 p.m., headed by the Fire Brigade Band, the members of the Brigade in uniform following, the late Mr. Scott having been identified with the Brigade. The members of the Law Association followed the hearse, every member of the profession being in attendance. Then followed the Town Council and officials, and after them a large concourse of citizens. As the procession passed down George street, all places of business were closed, and the air of gloom which prevaded the town generally, told how widely and sincerely felt was the deep regret with which Peterborough parted with one of its ablest and most honored citizens.

Great Clearing Sale of Carpets at Hall, Innes & Co's.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

On Friday last George Clark and Thos. Halpin were charged with fighting on the street and fined $2 and $2.50 costs each.

Thos. Ryan, for a similar offence, did not appear.

Charles and Anna Cook were charged on Saturday with keeping a disorderly house. P. C. McGhee testified to hearing loud and blasphemous talk in the house, but the P. M. thought the evidence insufficient.

Dennis Hallihan took a Sunday afternoon nap on the street, was run in by the Chief, spent the night in the cells, and was fined $1 by the Magistrate on Monday morning.

THE TWELFTH OF JULY.

The Orangemen of the County and many from the adjoining townships celebratdd the anniversary of the battle of Battle of the Boyne, on Tuesday, by a grand excursion to Campbellford. The weather was most favourable throughout, and a very large gathering of the Orangemen and their friends took advantage of the occasion. At 7 o'clock the Fire Brigade Band took the special for Lakefield, and accompanied the two lodges from Lakefield and Nassau to town. A lodge from Millbrook and another from Cavan came up from the south, and about 9 o'clock a procession was formed, headed by Marshalls McWilliams and Geo. Hall, on horseback, and marched from the station by Charlotte, George, Brock, Water and Hunter streets to the Ashburnham station, where they embarked for Campbellford by special train of some thirteen cars. The company comprised two Orange Lodges from Peterborough, the Britons and True Blues, and Lodges from Lakefield, Nassau, Millbrook and Cavan. With the Fire Brigade Band, Fife and Drum bands, banners, etc., they presented an imposing array. At Campbellford speeches were made, and a good time spent generally, the excursion returning about 8 o'clock in the evening. Sobriety and good conduct marked the proceedings of the day.

Three ply all wool Carpets now being offered at $1.25, is worth in the regular way $1.75 at Hall Innes & Co's.

ECCENTRICITIES OF GENIUS.

From the Review.

"A MONSTROSITY.—We were shown by a young man from Allandale, a young kitten, having one head, rather larger than usual, two noses, two mouths, two ears and four eyes. It lived for three or four days only, and was examined by a large number of people, who all pronounced it a wonderful freak of nature."

"FISHERY.—On thursday afternoon Mr. Edward Tierney and some others were fishing at Chemong Lake. Mr. Tierney hooked and successfully landed a fine maskinonge, which, on being weighed, tipped the beam at 16 pounds. That weight is only fair, but the fishey part of the story does not come in there. The fish was brought to town, and, upon being cleaned, a quart beer bottle, bearing Labatt's label, was found in the inside of it. We are assured by several gentlemen that the story is correct in every particular, and have been shown the bottle. What puzzles the public is how the bottle got inside of the maskinonge."

The puzzled public will now wait confidently for some one to find a maskinonge inside of a beer bottle, and we feel sure that the enterprize of our contemporary is fully equal to the emergency.

RAILWAY NOTES.

Extensive Grand Trunk improvements are to be made at Port Hope.

The Midland Railway Co. have fitted thirty-six additional cars for the carriage of iron ore.

A train on the Midland railway struck and killed a cow belonging to Mr. Wm. Jackson east of Lindsay station, last Thursday.

At the Midland Railway Board meeting last week, the Secretary-Treasurer was authorized to send a cheque for $540 to the widow of the late Mr. D. Cheers.

A party of surveyors under Mr. J. C. Bailey, C. E., arrived at Coldwater some days ago for the purpose of making a trial survey of a route for the route of the Ontario and Sault Ste. Marie railway. The practicability of a route to the west of the Muskoka lakes will, therefore, soon be ascertained.

The Traffic returns of the Midland Railway for week ending June 30th 1881, were:—Passengers and Mails, $2718,88, Freight, $10345,85, Total, $13065,73, as compared with $8794,77 for the corresponding week of of 1880, being an increase of $4270,96, and the aggregate traffic to date is $156504.45, being an increase of $18279.77, over 1880.

The Port Hope News of last week said:—"The Midland Railway Board met at the Head Offices on Tuesday. A large amount of business was transacted. Among other matters disposed of, was the ratification of an agreement whereby the Midland Railway has secured control of the Toronto & Nipissing line." The President of the Railway gives the above statement a most unqualified contradiction.

The Hamilton Times says:—The return of Dr. Schultz from new York is daily expected. It is known here that he has made an arrangement with a strong Company—stronger than the Canada Pacific Syndicate, as our readers will see when we are at liberty to mention names—for the building of the Manitoba South-Western Colonization railway. The importance of keeping this line out of the clutches of Messrs. Stephen & Co. has been already explained, and Schultz is to be congratulated on his prompt action and its satisfactory result.

At a meeting held last week at Toronto, the following board of directors of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway was elected:—Wm. Gooderham, jr., George Gooderham, H. P. Dwight, W. H. Beatty, W. B. Scarth, Toronto; John Haggart, Perth; and John Rochester, Ottawa. These gentlemen constituted the board last year, with the exception of Mr. George Gooderham, who replaces the late Mr. R. J. Reikie of Montreal. At a subsequent meeting on the same day, Mr. Wm. Gooderham was elected president.

It will pay you to call in and inspect the Carpets now being offered at Hall, Innes & Co's.

BRIEF MENTION.

The last fortnightly pay list on street and bridge account amounted to $751.26, including $370.69 to the Dickson estate and $64 to D. A. Macdonald, for lumber, and $26.24 to Bertram & Co. for rails.

Through the efforts of the Mayor admission to the Orillia Idiot Asylum has been secured for Emma Starr, an idiot girl whose father was drowned in Little Lake a few years ago.

Mr. Carnegie, Census Commissioner for West Peterborough, has received and disbursed $830.26, expenses of himself and ten enumerators.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE FOR AUGUST.—Is one of the most interesting numbers yet issued of this popular periodical. The leading article, by George J. Manson, "The Jews in the Great Metropolis", will not fail to attract particular attention; it is admirably illustrated. Alfred H. ANDREWS' BAZAR FOR JULY, is on our table. In its editorial columns are announcements of interest to the ladies. In the past, Andrews' Bazar has been in the in the front rank of Fashion publications, hence with its augmented capital and largely increased facilities, the life ambition of its founder, to give the best Fashion paper in the world at the lowest price, only $1.00 per year, cannot fail of realization. The present number is filled to repletion with Fashion News, and handsomely illustrated. Our lady readers will do well to send 10c. for a sample copy to THE QUEEN PUBLISHING COMPANY, Tribune Buildings, New York.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of The Living Age dated July 2nd and July 7th, contain articles from the Contemporary, Nineteenth Century, Fortnightly, Blackwood, Macmillan, Fraser, and Argosy, with an instalment of "The Frere's," by Mrs. Alexander, and the usual amount of poetry. A new volume began with the No. for July 2nd. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year), the subscription price, ($8), is low; while for $10.50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

FOR JOLLY FOLKS.—Dr. Dio Lewis' Monthly for Jolly Folks, is the title of a new medical monthly published by the Eastern Book Company, Boston, Mass., at $1 a year; sample 10 cents. It is in*valuable in the household,* as it contains useful information for old and young of both sexes. Careful and thoughtful perusal must result in a saving to many, of many dollars in doctors' bills. Don't fail to send for a sample copy.

RHEUMATISM OF THE BLOOD AND DEBILITY.—Haverhill, Mass., March 17, 1881. Gentlemen,—Thirteen years ago I was troubled with rheumatism of the blood. My blood was in such poor condition that when I retired my arms would become so paralyzed that I could not move the clothes to cover me. I used various remedies, and tried rubbing, but nothing seemed to help me. At last Peruvian Syrup was recommended, and on taking two small bottles I was completely restored to health, and had no occasion to use it again for ten years. About three years ago I was taken with kidney complaint, and had dreadful pains in my back and side. At times, when in the street, I would have such severe attacks that I would be obliged to sit down on a door step, and I would cry like a child. After suffering for some time I remembered what the Peruvian Syrup had formerly done for me, and the use of one large bottle entirely cured me. A few years since my sister's health was completely broken down. She was so weak that she could do no work. She consulted Dr. Durkee, of Roxbury, who recommended Peruvian Syrup. He said it was just the remedy to meet her case, and the only one he knew of. The result proved the correctness of his opinion, for the use of one bottle completely cured her. Yours very truly. Mrs. Carrie A. Davis, No. 5 Nichols street.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 14, 1881.

Sir Samuel Tilley's Brother-in-Law.

The Mail wastes much space, at an alarming sacrifice of truthfulness, in a vain endeavor to prove that Mr. Toller, described above as the Finance Minister's brother-in-law, was appointed over the heads of older and more deserving officers to the head of the "banking department" of the finance bureau, because he was "just the man to select for the position." Mr. Toller was first appointed to the Civil Service for no other reason than that he was Mr. Tilley's brother-in-law, and he was then thrust over the heads of older officers for the same reason. Mr. Tilley was then engaged in providing for his relations before the crash of defeat came. Some time ago Mr. Toller was called—by a tuft-hunting and humbugging "Civil Service Commission," who were anxious to burn incense under the nose of a Minister who was providing them with easy additions to their regular salaries—to give evidence on banking matters, and that the Mail takes as another proof of his special qualifications. Of his actual "banking experience" it is only necessary to recall the fact that it was not of a kind that promised his promotion to any elevated position in the service of the banks, which look to the business capacity and not to the relations of an official, and he deserted that field for the haven provided for him at the public expense by his brother-in-law. Sir Samuel Tilley recently created another fat berth at the public crib; and what more natural than that he should see special qualifications in his distinguished brother-in-law to fill the place and draw the salary? And this at the very time the Civil Service Commission were making a report recommending promotion for merit! There were better men, more competent men, more experienced men, men who were entitled to promotion by length of service, and men even who possessed superior political claims on the Great Grab party; but, unfortunately for them, none of them were blessed with a brother-in-law at the head of the Department. The Mail may dispense ingenious fiction by the yard, but it can't assail this unalterable fact.

Hon. Mr. Blake's Eastward Trip.

The Moncton Times promises to Hon. Messrs. Blake and Huntington a hearty welcome to the County of Westmoreland, and we doubt not that the same will be extended to the foremost Canadian statesman, throughout the Maritime Provinces. The truculent attacks, as silly as they were savage, of the Mail upon Mr. Blake, in anticipation of this visit, will probably, if they have no other effect, rouse some curiosity among Lower Province Conservatives to see and hear a man whom hate and fear have led the Tory organs to depict in colors as black as the reputation of Sir Charles Tupper in the neighborhood of Spring Hill, and in a light as odious as the bread-tax is among the New Brunswick bread-winners. The Mail's attacks will really do Mr. Blake the greatest of good service on his political tour, for people will be led to enquire into, and discover what base fabrications are, the vile personal attacks to which he has been subjected, and they will see for themselves how utterly foreign to his manner, his disposition and his speech, are the characteristics which these satirists have ascribed to him. But of all the foolish things which the latter required esthete of the Mail has said of the Opposition leader, the charge of "cowardice" is perhaps the most foolish. No one ever dreamed, in 1877 and 1878, of attempting on behalf of the then Government to turn the N. P. Tory pic-nics into fields of political discussion, and no one ever intimated that the Opposition orators of that day did not invite their opponents to hear their views expounded because of cowardice. It would be ridiculous to suppose that a lengthy exposition of public and political matters, of three or four hours, is to be answered off-hand by an orator on the other side in a speech of equal length, and so on ad infinitum, or that an assemblage of farmers or artizans, met for the purpose of hearing the views of the head of a party, can be held together to suffer the same torments which members of the House of Commons are paid for enduring. Parliament is the arena and the only arena for such disputations. The addresses of Mr. Blake will not be alone to his immediate audiences, but to the whole country—to the people whom they will reach through the columns of the Press, as well as to personal hearers—and by them they will be considered, and weighed and digested. Sir Charles Tupper will have the same means of reaching the same audience, and is at liberty, if he can, to confute Mr. Blake at his leisure; but it will be news to no one more than to Sir Charles himself, who is now virtually the Conservative leader, that he, who has so often winced before Mr. Blake's unerring logic, is a cause of fear to one who has worsted him in debate so frequently. It was no coward who, in the Ontario Legislature, at the head of a following of 22, led his party to victory over a Government of twice the strength, by virtue of the invincible weapons of right and justice. It was no coward who in 1873 faced a Government with a majority of 75, and in a House of their own following ousted them from power with their own misdeeds. It was no coward who has now assumed the responsibilities and duties of leadership over a small minority in the House of Commons, to fight the cause of the people in Parliament and the country, relying solely on the justice of his cause, and confident that the good sense, prudence, intelligence and discernment of the People, will sustain him in the effort to shake off false doctrines and false guides from the throat of the Dominion.

North-West Developement.

The Winnipeg papers, both Conservative and Liberal, give in their columns a striking proof of the utter incompetency and inefficiency of Sir John Macdonald's own especial department of Government. The Times, Tory, says:

"Newly arrived IMMIGRANTS ARE EXPERIENCING SOME DIFFICULTY IN OBTAINING INFORMATION as to the details of the recent land regulations. The change of the route of the C. P. R. has changed the areas of the railway belts, and OLD AS WELL AS NEW SETTLERS ARE IN A DILEMMA IN CONSEQUENCE. On enquiring at the Lands Office it was found that special instructions in this regard had not yet arrived from Ottawa, nor maps showing locations made by settlers up to a recent date, and they report themselves as besieged for the information above referred to."

This, coming from a Government organ, is significant enough, and we can well imagine that matters must be very bad indeed, when a newspaper whose very existence is based on Government patronage, is compelled to draw the attention of that Government to its shortcomings. The Free Press gives a farther insight into the deplorable mismanagement at Ottawa. It says:

"THREE MONTHS OF THE IMMIGRATION SEASON ARE OVER; AND THE VERY INFORMATION MOST ESSENTIALLY REQUIRED BY INTENDING SETTLERS IS NOT IN THE POSSESSION OF THE GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS. No maps or documents or verbal information can be obtained at the Dominion Land Office in this city. NEW LAND REGULATIONS HAVE BEEN PROMULGATED, BUT THE OFFICIALS CANNOT VENTURE TO INSTRUCT IMMIGRANTS HOW TO ACT UNDER THEM. THE RAILWAY BELTS HAVE BEEN CHANGED BY THE ALTERATION OF THE RAILWAY ROUTE, BUT NOBODY CAN TELL WHERE THE NEW BELTS ARE OR WHAT WILL BE DONE REGARDING SETTLERS ON THE OLD ONES WHO TOOK UP AND PURCHASED LANDS ON THE FAITH OF THE RAILWAY LOCATION. "Special instructions," says the Times, "have not yet arrived from Ottawa." Why have they not? Has there not been plenty of time to prepare the them? Nothing but absolutely illimitable negligence of duty and the densest ignorance of the North-West can account for the delay. Immigrants have been arriving in considerable numbers for three months; complaints of the state of affairs have appeared in the Free Press and in several Journals in Eastern Canada; representations have certainly been made to the Ottawa Government; yet nothing has been done. According to the Times, the Winnipeg Lands Office is besieged for information, which cannot be given because the Government will not forward "special instructions." IT IS ENOUGH TO DISCOURAGE AND DISGUST EVERY IMMIGRANT TO FIND HIS PROGRESS THUS DELIBERATELY RETARDED AT THE VERY THRESHOLD OF THE NORTH-WEST. We know, as a matter of fact, that a number have become DISHEARTENED THROUGH THEIR LOSS OF TIME AND MONEY AND, WEARY WITH WAITING ON THE PLEASURE OF AN INCAPABLE GOVERNMENT, HAVE TURNED THEIR STEPS TO THE UNITED STATES. Thus the experience of 1880 seems about to be repeated in 1881. The land regulations and the Government's folly will again drive away thousands of settlers; and NEW CANADIAN SETTLEMENTS WILL ARISE IN MINNESOTTA AND DAKOTA TO INDUCE MANY MORE CANADIANS TO JOIN THEM. When the immigration season is about over, and irreparable injury has been done, those "special instructions" may possibly arrive from Ottawa.

"The history of the present Government in its relation to the settlement of the North-west has been one CONTINUOUS RECORD OF STUPIDITY, CARELESSNESS, FOLLY AND HARM. From their abominable eighty-acre regulations, through their crass blundering of last year, down to their inexcusable delays at the present time, they have never managed to do the right thing at the right time. They have HAMPERED THEIR OFFICIALS IN THEIR WORK, DRIVEN AWAY OLD SETTLERS, PREVENTED NEW IMMIGRANTS FROM REMAINING STOPPED INTENDING SETTLERS FROM COMING TO THE COUNTRY. They have never ceased in their labor of mischief since their accession to power. And we much fear they will continue to work hard for the damage of the North-West until their proper doom befalls them at the hands of the indignant people. The cause of immigration to the North-West could not better served than by the speedy downfall of Tupper's Tory Government."

ST. LUKE'S ANNIVERSARY.

Sunday last was the fifth anniversary of the erection of the parish of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, and the services had, accordingly, especial reference to the occasion. Concerning the institution and progress of this now flourishing parish we take the following from the Parish Magazine:—

"The founder of this parish, and its most liberal benefactor, was the Rev. M. Burnham. He it was with whom the plan originated, and to him is due not merely the gift of a site for the building, but also such large donations towards the erection of both school room and church, (and indeed for two years towards the incumbent's salary also,) as are sufficient to show not only his generosity, but his zeal for the Church, and his desire that nothing should be wanting to secure the permanent success of Ashburnham parish. After resigning the care of St. Mark's, Otonabee, he secured the formation of a new district to be added to it, by the help of the Rector of Peterborough and the Bishop of the Diocese. Work was then begun on the school room as a temporary place for service in the village, about the 1st of June, 1878, and in little over a month the building was completed."

The following are the principal events in the history of the Parish:

1876—July 9.—School room opened for Divine service. Bishop Bethune preached at 11 a.m., and the Incumbent, Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, for the first time here, in the evening. July 13.—Vestry organised. Parish entitled St. Luke's. Messrs. Burnham and Strickland appointed Churchwardens. July 27.—Bible Class commenced. Aug. 6.—First administration of Holy Communion in the parish. Aug. 27.—First public Baptism. Oct. 15.—Confirmation administered by Bishop Bethune; 34 candidates.

1877.—May 10.—Ascension Day. Foundation stone of church laid with appropriate services. Sept. 23.—St. Luke's Church opened. Confirmation administered to 37 persons.

1878.—March 6.—Daily service commenced in Lent. March 10.—First early celebration of Holy Communion. May 17.—Consecration of the Church. Canon Stennett preached.

1879.—July 9.—Confirmation administered by Bishop Sweatman; 51 candidates. Sept. 28—Harvest Thanksgiving Services inaugurated. Church decorated for first time.

1880—March 28.—Easter Day. New pipe organ opened. Nov. 17.—Parochial Association established.

There was a large attendance at the church on Sunday morning, the service being read by the Incumbent, Rev. Mr. Cooper of Port Hope preaching the sermon, taking for his text, 2 Cor. xiii. 5.

"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith: prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?"

He reminded them that this was the birthday of the parish—that five years ago this parish was established and set off for the work of God. Such a day as this should be devoted to stricter communion with God, and to self-examination to see if the trust committed to each one had been faithfully fulfilled. The parish had enjoyed many special privileges and for these they would have to give an account. Each one would be held responsible for the work God sets him to do. Some might say they did not see that they had any special work to do. It was folly to talk thus. Each one had his personal influence, from the boy at school to the gray-haired man, and it was their duty to use this for the advancement of the work of God. There was such a thing as unprofitableness. He reminded them of the parable of the talents. The careful man had shown the greatest respect for the talent confided to him. He had wrapped it a napkin, and carefully restored it as he had received it. But it was not given him for that purpose. It was given him to use with diligence in the service of the Master, and according to the diligence with which each one used the talent entrusted to him will his reward be. This parish was one of the bright spots of which there were so few in the diocese. Had its privileges been improved? God knew and the Devil knew. Whether they labored with both hands earnestly to advance the work of God, was watched, not only by Christ from his seat at the right hand of God, and the holy angels, but by the Enemy who wanted to drag them down. They had opportunities for worship which few had. Their church was open often for communion. They had blessings here which many did not enjoy. Did they enjoy these blessings fully? Did they profit by them? They must remember that to whom much is given, from them much is also required. He said there never was a day in which there was greater reverence shown outwardly to God's Book, the Bible, nor in which there was greater refusal to believe its doctrines. Outwardly there was great respect for the Word, but inwardly there was no regard for it. What good would intellectual knowledge of the Scriptures be to a man dying, if the great saving truth of the Bible be overlooked? Fools, to put the phantom of the intellect in the place of the living God! He warned them of the danger of paying their devotion to a book, and not to the great living truth of the Gospel. True religion was not of the head but of the heart. He exhorted them to search their hearts, to realize their privileges, duties and responsibilities, and to earnestly endeavor to pursue them to the glory of God and to their own eternal welfare.

THE CHURCH AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

The following is the paper of Miss E. Beckett, read by Mr. Pentland at the last meeting of the St. Paul's Temperance Association:

"If the amount of liquor consumed by different individuals were the criterion of sobriety, there would doubtless be a reversion of public opinion, and many now ranking first would be last and the last first. It is not only men who drink till they are intoxicated that are guilty of intemperance; neither are they the persons injured most thereby; for many medical men declare that a man who gets drunk once a month receives less harm physically, than a man who never loses self-control, but drinks habitually more than he ought. The drinking of the latter may be held blameless, but which suffer most morally may be hard to determine. The Moderate drinker boasts that he "lives freely," but his dissatisfaction when deprived of his accustomed beverage manifestly proclaims him under bondage. How often has the changed attitude of many in regard to total abstinence reminded us of Him, who all too late, "locks the door when the steed is stolen?" Methinks if mothers, wives and sisters were truer advocates of this cause, the miseries arising from intemperance would be greatly lessened. Weak and powerless in deed must be the remonstrances of such, with the erring one, when on some occasions they freely partake of the alluring cup with apparent enjoyment, and lend their countenance to that which destroys all his moral nobleness, and brands the name with infamy. The language of many is: indeed we will not give up our liberty by signing the pledge, that may do very well for the drunkards, but we can drink or let it alone. To such, we would say, even suppose you do resign your liberty, which is at best but a doubtful one, if by so doing your good pattern would lead just one, who, unable to govern his propensity for strong drink, debases his God-like nature, to live a sober and righteous life: would not your self-denial be amply rewarded? But why should the church deal with the Temperance question, many ask? Why, simply because she has to deal with the salvation of immortal souls, and it is a well known fact that intemperance is one of the most powerful enemies with which the church has to contend in her spiritual warfare.

What so paralyses the labors of Christian workers, or so effectually hinders the showers of grace from descending, as the prevalence of this monstrous iniquity in our midst? Is it right to treat with indifference that which ruins both soul and body, or content ourselves by bemoaning the profligacy of the times, while, rather than incur displeasure by frowning on the soul-destroying traffic, excuse our conduct in throwing the responsibility on the State and surrender unconditionally to the inevitable evil? Are we free from guiltiness in this matter, and have we at all times acted as deeply conscious of being our brother's keeper? Is not our half-heartedness, nay our apathy, in this cause enough to condemn us; alas, has not relative or social interest, kept us dumb and silenced our conscience by a false cry of peace?

Let us then come before the Lord with the language of confession on our lips, resolutely determined to do what we can for the mitigation of this evil, so may the fulfillment of the promised blessing be expected, for in this, as in other things, Providence helps those who help themselves. Say not you have no influence, for our Saviour says: "He that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." And bear in mind the words of the Apostle, "No man liveth to himself," and we that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Not to please ourselves! Ah, ponder well these words; talk not of following Christ unless you are willing to deny yourself even as he had. Be willing to give up what seems to you a lawful right, or forego what at most is only a momentary gratification, for sake of thy weaker brother. Thus abstaining from the veriest appearance of this evil, the intemperate may not, as has too often been the case, use you as a shield in their sinful practices, or perchance worse than all, find you a stumbling block in the way of reform. Surely if the followers of religion knew what a stigma is cast on our Holy Religion, by its tippling professors, if they knew how the world judges christianity by such, and if they knew the amount of deception used in its secret indulgence, surely, for the honor of the Cross, they would arouse themselves to heartier interest in the matter of total abstenance. What can be the worldling's opinion of religion as seen in him who one hour frequents the bar-room, and the next is engaged in religious exercises? What, more painful to the child of God than the taunting remarks of the unbelievers against such inconsistencies, or the indisputable assertions of liquor dealers that church members are among their best customers? What is the reason some Christians mourn over their spiritual deadness, sighing for the light of God's countenance, and have no vivid anticipation of future blessedness and purity? Their religious life is dull and heavy, their prayers have no fervency, their christian work is a burden to themselves and no blessing to others. Let such forever banish rum from their presence and the answer will be found in a life inspired by new strength, peace and happiness.

Do we want to save souls, do we want to hasten the Redeemer's kingdom, and do we want to see the desert rejoice and blossom as the rose? Then, let us with united heart and hand go forth in this great work confident of victory in the blessed assurance that the right arm of the Lord doeth valiantly, saying in the unselfish and heroic language of Reul, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world lasteth."

Third Annual Meeting—Satisfactory Financial Exhibit—Amended By-Laws—Congratulatory Resolutions, Etc.

On Tuesday afternoon of last week the shareholders of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company (Limited) held their third annual meeting at the Company's offices, Water street, the Vice-President, Mr. John Walton in the chair, Mr. G. M. Roger acting as Secretary.

Mr. A. P. Poussette read the following

ANNUAL REPORT.

The Directors have pleasure in presenting their third annual report, showing a continuance of prosperity notwithstanding the reduced rates of interest which have prevailed for some months past. It will be remembered that when the Company commenced business, in the year 1878, the rate prevailing upon mortgage securities was eight and a half per cent. per annum, and the banks were paying five per cent. per annum on deposits, so that the Company was practically insured against any loss which might arise from uninvested funds, as it was only paying the same rate upon borrowed money. Since that time the banks have reduced their rate, first to four per cent. and then to three per cent., and an unprecedentedly sudden fall in the rate of interest on mortgage securities has had to be contended against. These changes in our sources of profit naturally account for the small surplus earnings. The business of the year has consisted of:

New Loans	$118,921 74
Renewals	24,830 00
Total	$143,751 64

Of these sums $31,330 have been lent at eight per cent., and the remaining $112,421.74 at seven per cent., and the average rate of interest borne by the Company's investments is eight per cent. In no case has any loan been made below the ruling rate, the borrowing public apparently being willing to pay the Company a higher rate than one having its Head Office out of Peterborough. The payments of interest during the year amount to the sum of $34,654, and the repayments of principal in the large sum of $67,848.56, so that the investment account has only been increased by the sum of $51,713.08, but these large repayments indicate the very satisfactory nature of the Company's investments, as most of these have been made through other companies which have granted larger advances upon the same security as that held by the Company. It will be observed that the amount of funds on hand is rather large, but by reference to the other side of the account it will be seen that the larger portion of this sum is already appropriated. The Auditors have made their usual thorough examination of the books and securities, and their report appended to the statement of assets and liabilities, and of profit and loss, is submitted herewith.

AUDITORS' REPORT.

To the Directors of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company (Limited):—

GENTLEMEN.—We have audited the books and accounts of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Company (limited), for the year ending 31st May, 1881. The above statement of Assets and Liabilities and Profit and Loss Account agree with the ledger. We have also inspected the mortgages and find the aggregate thereof agrees with the amount under the head of the mortgage securities.

E. PEARSE,
CHARLES D. MACDONALD, } Auditors
Peterborough, 8th July, 1881.

On motion of Mr. J. Walton, seconded by Mr. A. P. Poussette, the above report was received and adopted.

Mr. Poussette in seconding the motion drew attention to the prosperous business of the year. The Glasgow agents of the Company had received the large sum of $100,000 for debentures, which had been advantageously placed. Toronto companies were offering money freely at 6 per cent, but they found that farmers preferred a Company having its head office here than to take upon more favorable rates from outsiders. Great pains had been taken to make the business advantages of the Company widely known throughout the country, and he felt assured they would ultimately monopolize the farmers' business. While other companies were loaning at lower rates they could not expect so many applications as during the last two years, but he was confident that within two years money would revert back to an 8 per cent. value. Owing to the expense of giving wide publicity to the business of the Company the surplus was only $900, but on the whole he thought they had reason to regard the report as a very satisfactory one.

ELECTION OF DIRECTORS.

The following Board of Directors was elected unanimously:—Messrs. Gen. Haultain, Col. Haultain, Rev. V. Clementi, R. Hall, John Walton, A. C. Dunlop, A. P. Poussette, and H. J. LeFevre.

On motion of Mr. A. Hall, seconded by Mr. J. Hall, Messrs. C. D. Macdonald and E. Pearse were re-appointed Auditors.

AMENDED BY-LAWS.

Mr. Poussette said when the by-laws were amended last year to meet the requirements of the Glasgow stock exchange for the facilitation of business by their Glasgow agents, it was thought that all that was necessary had been done, but it appeared some further change was necessary for the expedition of business.

A new By-law to replace By-law No. XIV respecting transfer of shares was then passed through its different stages and adopted.

COMPLIMENTARY RESOLUTIONS.

Col. Haultain moved a vote of thanks to the Board in Scotland and the Glasgow agents. In doing so he said the Board had had under consideration the propriety of reducing the dividend, as it at one time appeared necessary. He was glad to see they had a surplus after paying 8 per cent, and thought they might continue for a time before reducing it.

Rev. V. Clementi, in seconding the motion, said he had been of opinion some time ago that 8% was too high a rate. He had private investments in mortgages and only realized 7% and 6%. They had to consider the fact that the price of money was down and they had to compete with other institutions offering lower rates.

Mr. W. Finlayson, of the firm of Finlayson & Auld, the Glasgow agents, expressed the confidence of the Scottish shareholders in the Canadian Board. He had had his apprehensions at first, but was surprised and pleased at a dividend of 8%. From communication with American capitalists he had been convinced that money would rise in value in a short time, and thought it would not be advisable to reduce the dividend to 7% if it could be avoided, owing to the impression it would create at home, and the difficulty of making people so far away comprehend the conditions which might render it necessary. He had compared the expenses of management of the Company with those of similar institution, and found that the shareholders had every reason to be gratified at the economy exercised.

Rev. Mr. Clementi moved a vote of thanks to the Managers, Messrs. Poussette & Roger, for their able and economical management of the affairs of the Company for the past year, the motion being seconded by Mr. LeFevre and carried unanimously.

Mr. Poussette, in returning thanks, said on behalf of himself and his partner that they would always be ready as in the past to devote their best efforts to the interests of the Company. He was somewhat disappointed that the profits were not so large as in former years, but the Managers were not responsible for that. They had to pay 5% interest on debentures, and as the banks only allowed 2%, they lost money till the capital was invested. For fear of disturbing the business in Scotland, however, they had been unwilling to stop the sale of debentures.

Col. Haultain said the work of the Board of Directors devolved principally on the Investment Committee, who met frequently and devoted considerable time to the affairs of the company, for which they received no remuneration. He moved, seconded by Mr. Finlayson, a vote of thanks to these gentlemen: Messrs. Gen. Haultain, John Walton and Richard Hall, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. John Walton acknowledged the vote, and after a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting adjourned.

Immediately after the adjournment of the shareholders a meeting of the Directors took place, when the following officers were re-elected for the ensuing year:—

PRESIDENT—Major-Gen. Haultain.
VICE-PRESIDENT—Mr. John Walton.
MANAGERS—Messrs. Poussette & Roger
INVESTMENT COMMITTEE—Messrs. Gen. Haultain, John Walton and Richard Hall.

BELLEVILLE TO PETERBOROUGH.

Visit of the Bay City People to Town—Guests of Canada Methodist Hospitality—Welcome by the Mayor.

Friday last brought with it an event of considerable import, being the day set apart for the monster excursion of the people of Belleville, under the auspices of the Bridge-street C. M. Church, to the town of Peterborough, showing how closely these two places have been brought by the opening and operation of the Grand Junction Railway. Probably the town of Peterborough owes the prominence it has attained in the district, and the good repute it enjoys abroad generally—two things which not a little contribute to its progress—as much to the liberal facilities which have been afforded by the President of the Midland Railway, on that road, and on the Grand Junction since he assumed its management, as to anything else, and the policy is one which proves not only advantageous to the town, but to the railways as well. It is of no slight importance that the advantages which our town offers as a centre of business, its unrivalled, though unfortunately inutilized, facilities for manufacturing, and the splendid tract of agricultural country by which it is surrounded, should be brought as much, as frequently and as prominently as possible, before the attention of the general public, and the opportunities which these excursions, or incursions, afford, will not be wholly lost, and must result in many ways favorably to town. The unbounded hospitality with which a former excursion from here to Belleville was greeted by the people of the Bridge-street C. M. Church of that town, afforded a proper incentive to the members of the George-street Church and the citizens generally, to emulate the spirit shown to them in Belleville, and the ladies of the church, always noted for their generous provision for occasions of this kind, fairly outdid themselves in the prodigal lavishness of the good things of life arrayed in tasteful and boundless profusion in the basement of the church, in anticipation of the visit of the Bellevillians. Covers were laid in the spacious apartment for 480 people, and the improvised larder was provisioned for a siege of no ordinary magnitude. And it was just as well that this store was not limited, for when the excursion train was sighted across the river, and it became apparent that the enemy was prepared to hurl sixteen carloads of pent-up famine into the citadel of plenty, it was seen nothing but an abundant store could have averted a humiliating catastrophe.

It was fully half-past two before the excursionists, accompanied by the Fire Brigade Band and the 15th Batt. Band, of Belleville, made their appearance at the church, where after a hymn by the choir, and prayer by Rev. Mr. Workman, Rev. Mr. Shaw welcomed the visitors. He said he would not make a speech, as the train had been so late that he had no doubt most of them would prefer a visit to the regions below, where dinner was waiting. He was glad to see Peterborough linked to Belleville with a band of iron, and that the Grand Junction had in some respects united their interests. Some days since "Peter" had paid a visit to the "Belle" of the bay, and she had been so much interested in him that she had come to return the visit. He hoped that in this case the course of true love would always run smooth. Under the circumstance he thought they would prefer a welcome more in deeds than in words. The Mayor would present an address of welcome, after which they would adjourn down stairs where provision was made for them.

Mayor Smith then read the following address:

To the Rev. Dr. Jeffers:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—It is my pleasing duty, as Mayor of Peterborough, to extend to you the greeting of our people and to bid you welcome to our town.

In the past the communication between Belleville and Peterborough has not been of a character to facilitate that free and happy intercourse which has been inaugurated this year.

Let me here say that to the energy and enterprise of the people of Belleville the consummation of this happy result is chiefly due. Our people have not in the past realized the the important results that appear likely to accrue from the construction of the Grand Junction Railway, but we are in hopes that as time passes we may more fully appreciate your enterprise, and that only good may flow to you and to us from its construction.

We bid you welcome to our town, and if we could make your visit much more pleasant than it is likely to be, we would even then feel that we had but poorly returned the kind attention which you so lavishly bestowed upon our people who recently visited you; indeed, your hospitable and generous welcome so impressed them that only good will flow to you to-day from the hundreds whom you entertained, and from many others who have heard of your kindness.

Let us hope that the iron bond which unites our towns may be but an emblem of the deep regard in which we may ever hold each other, and that the interchange of courtesies, so happily begun, may ever continue.

(Signed), H. H. SMITH,
Mayor.

Dr. Jeffers said he believed the company was hungry (laughter) and would not tolerate a speech. He knew they were welcome. He knew the generous heart of Peterborough and he knew that of his own people, and that the welcome was appreciated. He was glad they had come, and he felt happy.

Mr. D. W. Dumble then announced the arrangements for refreshment, and the crowd surged into the basement, where the din of plates, the clatter of knives and forks, the hustle of waiters and the buzz of conversation, which continued for the next hour and a half, told of a mighty havoc by the invading forces, as the abundance of the "fragments" gathered after the feast attested the sufficiency of the resources of the fortress.

The company dispersed, and the train being detained till 6.15, had plenty of time to view the sights. At the hour named they they took their departure, apparently well pleased with their visit.

OVER-FEEDING PIGS FOR EXHIBITION.

Just about this season of the year many breeders are tempted into the forcing process, with a view to making a fine display at the fairs, and showing enormous weights for age. This forcing process is all well enough if it is the design of the breeder to convert these pigs into pork at the earliest age consistent with economy; but when the pigs are intended to be used for breeding purposes, it cannot be too strongly condemned. A course of feeding that overloads the pigs with fat, or forces him into an unnatural growth, is quite likely to result in a loss of the reproductive powers, and even if it is designed to keep these pigs until they are matured animals, with a view to the production of good bacon and hams, such a course of feeding is not the proper one. For these purposes, the pigs should be kept on a mixed diet, with plenty of bone and muscle-forming food, and ample opportunity for exercise. They should have the run of a good pasture—clover being the best of all—with a moderate supply of corn. And we may here be pardoned for repeating the often-given caution to the novice, not to buy pigs at the fairs that show signs of having been rudely forced, for the result will, in a majority of cases, be unsatisfactory—National Live Stock Journal.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 14, 1881.

The County and the Grand Junction Bonus.

The County of Peterborough is at last to be congratulated on the favorable issue of the litigation which has for some time been in progress, in regard to the alleged bonus to the Grand Junction Railway. On Friday last the Ontario Court of Appeal by an unanimous decision freed the County from the liability to pay the $75,000 claimed by the Grand Junction Railway Company, which was imposed on them by the Court of Queen's Bench. We give below a synopsis of the decision, which places the costs of the case, in both Courts, upon the Grand Junction representative, Mr. Bickford. It should be borne in mind that the new management of the Grand Junction Railway declined, in purchasing the road, to have anything to do with the alleged bonus, which was retained by Mr. Bickford and his friends as their perquisite, of which we wish them joy. Of course the case may be carried to the Supreme Court or to the Privy Council, if the claimants choose to undergo the expense; but it is almost a certainty that the decision of the Court of Appeal will be confirmed in either case. We congratulate the County Council, and especially the Warden, Mr. Sanderson, and the late Warden, Mr. Burnham, M. P., on this successful issue of their determination and persistence in resisting an unjust claim in the interests of the ratepayers of the County, and also Mr. Edwards, Solicitor of the County, who has handled the case in its different stages with conspicuous skill and ability. The following in brief is the judgment of the Court delivered through Mr. Justice Burton:—

The Court of Queen's Bench made absolute a rule for a mandamus upon the Corporation of the County of Peterborough to issue debentures for the sum of $75,000 and interest thereon, from the 16th December, 1870, and to deliver the same to the trustees appointed for receiving and holding of moneys or securities for moneys awarded by way of bonus toward the construction of the Grand Junction Railway, and this appeal is against that order.

I am reluctant to pronounce an opinion upon the constitutionality of a statute, but I do not see how we can avoid doing so in the present case. The Dominion Act of 1870 is entitled "An Act to revive the charter of the Grand Junction Railroad."

The By-Law of the county professing to grant the bonus in question was voted upon by the ratepayers on the 23rd November in the same year. At that time municipalities had no general power to assist railways by a bonus. Special charters had been granted to certain railway companies which gave this power to municipalities thus to aid the particular undertaking referred to in those charters, but there was no authority at that time to grant a bonus to the Grand Junction Railway. The by-law was to be void unless the construction was commenced within the county before the 1st May, 1872, but no time was named therein for its completion:

It is clear that when the Dominion Legislature assumed to revive the charter of a Provincial railway and to vest all the corporate powers, rights and privileges of that resuscitated company in a new company, without any declaration that it was for the general advantage of Canada, or for the advantage of two or more of the Provinces, it exceeded its powers, and that an Act of the Provincial Legislature was necessary to confer upon such an organization corporate rights and powers.

The right of the applicants to enforce a delivery of the debentures must depend on subsequent legislation by the Dominion Parliament, but the Local Legislature passed an Act professing to deal with the subject on the 15th February, 1871. Legislation like that of the Act I am describing is not of a character calculated to raise the confidence of the public in a legislative body entrusted with the important powers of dealing with such subjects as are comprised within the words "Property and Civil Rights." In the enacting part of the Bill in question a few words are inserted referring to a by-law of Peterborough—nowhere before referred to, either in the petition, preamble, or published notices—and which, it is stated, was approved of by a majority of the duly qualified voters, and declaring that such by-law shall be legal, valid, and binding, as if the same had received the third reading of the County Council of Peterborough, and legal, valid and binding upon the said corporation, (and other corporations mentioned in the Bill), and on all others, etc.; and the corporations shall proceed to issue debentures and act upon the by laws in all respects in the same manner as if the said by-laws had been proposed after the passing of this Act. This mode of proceeding strikes us as dangerous legislation, but I apprehend that it placed the by-law in the same position as if it had been adopted at a time when it was within the competence of a municipality to aid a railway corporation by a bonus, for on the same day an Act was assented to whereby municipalities were empowered to grant bonuses to railways.

Still, however, although the railway law was declared valid, and the municipal corporations were authorized to grant a bonus, there was no railway company to receive it. The parties seem to have became aware of this in 1874, when they procured the passage of an Act through the Local Legislature, professedly consolidating the various Acts relating to the company, but in reality creating a corporation competent to construct the railway referred to in it. The applicants appear to me to be on the horns of a dilemma.

If the Dominion Parliament had no power to legislate upon the matter, being a local work, there was no corporation in existence at the time of passing the by-law. If, on the other hand, the Dominion Parliament had power to deal with it, the Local Legislature had none; and that Legislature extending the time for the completion of the work would be ultra vires quo casque vis, the result is arrived at—it appears to me to be equally fatal to the applicants' right to succeed.

I think the applicants have not made out a case entitling them to the mandamus. The appeal, therefore, should be allowed, with costs, and the bill in the Court below discharged, with costs.

Mr. Justice Burton also held that so far as the present application is concerned it must fail, on the ground that even if the company was properly incorporated in 1870 and the By-Law itself valid, the Trustees to whom the County is now asked to hand over the debentures are not Trustees appointed by the Legislature, as mentioned in the By-Law.

Mr. Justice Patterson also delivered a long and exhaustive judgment reviewing fully the history of the Grand Junction legislation, and holding, as held by Mr. Justice Burton, that there was no Company incorporated to receive the By-Law in 1870, and that the By-Law was therefore void and that the Trustees to whom the County is asked to deliver up the debentures are not in any event entitled to them. He held as a further ground of refusing the application that there was no valid commencement of the work within two years, as required by By-Law, inasmuch as the plans were not filed within that time, which he considered to be necessary before there could be any lawful commencement of the work. The other two Judges concurred, the judgment thus being unanimous.

The Late Mr. W. H. Scott, M. P. P.

On Tuesday morning the people of the town and county were shocked by the news, not unexpected though it was, of the death, on Monday evening, at the residence of his brother in Orangeville, of Mr. W. H. Scott, the representative of the West Riding of the County in the Legislature. The late Mr. Scott's career is thus presented in the Parliamentary Companion:

"Mr. Scott was the third surviving son of the late John Scott, of Brampton Ont., formerly of Aberdeenshire, Scotland, who was one of the earliest settlers of Peel, and brother of Mr. A. F. Scott, Judge of the County Court of Peel. Born at Brampton, Nov. 5, 1737, he was educated at Toronto University, where he took the degree of B.A. in 1860. He was married on March 19, 1863, to Jane, a daughter of the late Mr. George Wright, who represented West York in the Canada Assembly from 1837 to 1854. She died October 8, 1876. He was afterwards married on October 23rd, 1878, to Margaret R., daughter of the late R. M. Boucher, Esq., Judge of the County Court of Peterborough. He was President of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, and President of the Liberal Conservative Club of Peterborough. An unsuccessful candidate for West Peterborough in the House of Commons at the general elections of 1875; but was first returned to Parliament for his present seat in the Ontario Assembly in June, 1874. Although defeated in the general election of 1875, he was again returned on October 26, 1875, on the sitting member being unseated; and re-elected at last general elections. He was created a Q.C. in 1876."

In disposition and temperament the deceased gentleman was most amiable and kind hearted, and in his public and private associations he readily acquired a warm place in the esteem and regard of all with whom he was brought in contact. In political matters, his views and his habits of expression were moderate and always marked by the most courteous consideration for those who differed from him. He avoided bitterness and acerbity in discussion and debate, and as he had always the regard of his political opponents in the county, he possessed, more than any other member on his side of the house, the respect of the predominant party in the Legislature. Though not the political leader of his party in this Province, he was pre-eminently the first man in their ranks, and possessed abilities and personal qualities that could not have failed, had he lived, to raise him to high public honor and distinction. Faults he had, but these are not to be remembered. The people who knew and respected him will remember only his kindly genial voice and presence, his great promise too sadly unfulfilled, and the arduous, and, we believe, patriotic and unselfish exertions to promote a railway scheme, in which for the time it appeared that the future of the town was bound up, to which, we believe we are not wrong in averring, he sacrificed his private interests, his political promise and his physical strength. The public have a share in the sorrow of his family and friends in their affliction, and will extend to them a real and earnest sympathy.

If you are in want of a good Parlor Carpet now is your chance to secure one 25 per cent cheaper than if you had bought it in the ordinary way. Hall, Innes & Co.

Editorial Notes.

GALT recently rejoiced in a stove factory, but the people of Walkerton tempted the struggling industry with a bonus of $3,000, and now the Tory organs point to the removal of the factory as another evidence of the "hum."

THE gold-headed cane epidemic has set in. The Catholics of Oshawa held a picnic on Dominion Day, when voting took place for a gold-headed cane, the candidates being Sir John Macdonald and Hon. E. Blake. The latter won the cane by a large majority.

THE Toronto World has abandoned its evening edition and is now the only exclusively morning paper in Toronto. We congratulate it on its enterprise and sustained success, and predict for it a prosperous future.

THE Minister of Marine, Hon. J. C. Pope, is a melancholy example of the hollowness of the alleged "hum." He has failed in business with liabilities amounting to $130,000; assets $60,000. He is endeavoring to get his creditors to take his property and release him.

THE Mail makes an idiotic attempts to organize the Methodist and Presbyterian bodies in the interest of the Taxation Party. In a recent article it said: "No "Methodist or Presbyterian can be ex- "pected long to adhere to a party, the "leaders of which systematically, and "without cause or provocation, belittle "the laudable and generous efforts of his "church, in the best of all patriotic "causes." The imputation presented is not sillier than most of the Mail charges against Mr. Blake, and shows the pitiable extremities to which the organ is reduced in the arduous task of discovering a weak spot in Mr. Blake's armour. Drowning men catch at straws, but straws of this kind will not save the Mail's party from its inevitable and well-deserved fate in the general elections.

AT THE Conservative celebration at Ballyduff, after the recent East Durham election, Capt. Graham commented favorably on the strictly neutral attitude of the Midland railway influence. Mr. Hastings, the Pt. Hope Times says, "in "a brief and forcible speech eulogised "the officials of the road for the stand "taken in election matters. Mr. Cox, he "said was a Reformer, but was a thorough "gentleman, and those of every side of "politics, and indeed all those whom he "came in contact with readily concede "that fact. Though a sound Reformer "he had upon accepting office issued a "circular forbidding any use whatever of "undue influence in regard to employees "voting, granting those under him per- "fect liberty of conscience in the exercise "of their franchise, and this he (Mr. "Hastings) considered was really the ac- "tion of a thorough straightforward "gentleman." The remarks were received with applause.

Mr. Geo. Chalmer's new shingle mill, at Young's point, has been leased to Mr. W. J. Kearns, of Peterborough, formerly with Mr. Sperry and latterly employed by Mr. T. G. Hazlitt. The new mill will cut 12,000 to 15,000 shingles per day.

Mr. Lewis Gleason, of the 5th con., Haldimand, has raised and marketed over 1,500 quarts of strawberries, from less than a quarter of an acre, and expects to gather quite a lot more before the season is over. At an average selling price of 5cts. a quart (he realized more) the produce of that quarter of an acre will amount to between $80 and $100.

The Port Hope Times says that for some six or seven Sundays past, there have been systematic audacious robberies from the smoking-car of the Midland Railway, in which the book-agent's boxes are deposited, and which is left standing near the scale siding, locked, until the resumption of traffic on Monday. On Sunday of last week, some $31 worth of books, fruit, prize packages, candies, etc., were stolen.

A piece of pretty sharp practice was played by one of the creditors of Mr. L. H. Staples, of Woodville, who left that place clandestinely, some weeks ago, says the Monetary Times, and went to Buffalo. There he was overtaken by a Hamilton creditor, with an American officer of the law, and was frightened so much at prison vaults that he disgorged about $1,100 and over $100 for expenses. The ownership of his real estate, which was made over to his wife, will be tested in the courts by the creditors. Before the matter is finally settled, this dishonest retailer will deeply regret his attempt to "beat" those who trusted him with their goods.

When the N. P. first came in force the Napanee Town Council (a majority of whom were Conservatives) passed a by-law, which was afterwards voted on by the people and carried by a narrow majority, that the town give a bonus of $4,000 towards starting a woollen factory, of which the head was to be one Sylvester Taylor. A resolution was passed by the council that the town was to take a chattel mortgage on the machinery and goods in the said factory, and also to see that the property was insured for at least $2,000. The chattel mortgage was given but the insurance was allowed to lapse, if ever given, and about two months since the property was burned, and the town loses the $4,000. Taylor has skipped the place. Great indignation is manifested by the ratepayers at the action of the council. There is strong talk of suing the councillors personally, not only for the $4,000, but also for the indemnity which they have voted themselves.

Rathbun's drive of 190,000 logs was two weeks getting past Yyoung's Point, the bow being at that place, while the stern was at Jack's creek, head of the Lake. Mr. Thos. Callahan, the veteran foreman, was walking boss, Dennis Callahan and Pat Cassidy, foremen, and M. McMahon, clerk. There were 708 men employed on the drive, and the people of the Point give the gentlemen named the greatest credit for the good behaviour enforced, as well as for the prompt and liberal settlement of all their expenses. Mr. Callahan had also supervision of the drive on Peterboro' division, and deserves the greatest credit for the ability which he handled the various duties devolving upon him. Mr. J. E. Kearney, of Young's Point, from whom we obtain the above information, informs us that the drive has now reached Hastings, having made remarkably good time without a mishap. It is understood that Rathbun & son will probably undertake the operation of Benedict's limits next season.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

THE SCHOOL FINANCES—PASSING THE ESTIMATES—RESIGNATION OF MR. DENNISTOUN.

The School Board held an adjourned meeting on Tuesday evening, Mr. Stevenson in the chair. Present—Messrs. Best, Wrighton, Burnham, Stratton, Cox, Robinson, Rutherford and McClelland.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read approved.

Mr. McClelland asked if Mr. Jeffers had received the balance of his salary.

The Chairman thought he had been paid up.

The Secretary said there was still a portion of salary for the month of April due him.

A communication from Mr. J. F. Dennistoun, tendering his resignation as a member of the Board, was received, and on motion of Mr. Wrighton, Mr. Dennistoun's resignation was accepted.

A communication from John Dixon, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, was received. It showed the school attendance to be as follows:—

	On Roll.	Av. Attendance
April	163	137
May	162	139
June	149	124

Accounts were received as follows:—J. McKee, $1.55; A. Hall, $13.65; Review Office, $17.50. Principal Dixon, expenses to Toronto and supplies for school, $10.02; John Bertram, $2.32.

On motion of Mr. McClelland, seconded by Mr. Best, the above accounts were referred to the Finance Committee, excepting that of the Principal, which was ordered to be paid at once.

The Secretary then read the following report of the Finance Committee, embodying the Estimate of Revenue and Expenditure for the Peterborough Public Schools for the year ending Dec. 1st, 1881:

EXPENDITURE.

Proportion of Principal's Salary	100 00

Rent charged to Collegiate Institute	760 00
Surplus from Town Treasurer	86 42
		2,241 42
Amount Required		$5,000 00

RECAPITULATION.

For the Collegiate Institute	$3,324 00
For the Public Schools	5,000 00
Total Assessment	$8,324 00

The Chairman said these estimates had been cut down to the lowest point, but he thought if nothing unforseen happened, they could be carried out within the sum named. The amount required was $300 more than last year, but they must bear in mind that last year they began with a surplus of $1,200, whereas this year they had only $6, and last year they had the County grant of $750 which had been refused this year, so that the estimated expenditure was really lower than last year. The reduction in the salaries also, only took effect on September 1st, so that they would reap only a small portion of the benefit in this year's operations. The Government grant would probably be somewhat larger than last year.

Mr. Stratton moved, seconded by Mr. Burnham, that the report of the Finance Committee, with the estimates for the year be received and adopted, and that the Secretary be instructed to make a requisition to the Council for the amount required, the same to be paid on December 31st.—Carried.

Mr. Stratton moved, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that Mr. Jeffers be paid his salary in full up to the 30th April, for services to the Board.—Carried.

Mr. Stratton moved, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that a cheque be drawn in favor of the Principal for $35.65, to assist the Literary Association of the Institute in defraying the cost of the elocutionary classes.

Mr. Rutherford said the notice of motion asked for a grant of $40, and contended that was a new motion.

The Chairman ruled the motion in order.

Mr. Cox enquired how this expenditure has been incurred. He thought it was establishing a wrong precedent to allow expenses to be incurred without the authority of the Board.

The Chairman explained that the Principal had attended the May meeting of the Board to ask them to assist in paying the cost of instruction in elocution, as there had been much complaint of the backwardness of the pupils in reading. There was no quorum, however, but sufficient members of the Board individually encouraged him to proceed with the classes, which was done.

Mr. Rutherford offered an amendment refusing to pay the account.

The motion was then put and carried, Mr. Rutherford only voting nay.

After some discussion on the Auburn school question, which was relegated to a committee formerly appointed, the Board adjourned.

MASONIC ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment of Peterborough Lodge, A. F. & A. M., on Wednesday evening of last week, was, in every way, a grand success. The chair was occupied by Mr. Wm. Toole, W. M., who gave an interesting address, as did also Mr. Miller of Omemee. Mr. Heathfield presided at the organ. Mr. and Mrs. Stephens of Port Hope and Messrs. A. Elliott and A. L. Davis, gave duets, Miss Roche and Messrs. Morrison and Galletly solos, and Mr. Burke and Miss M. Kilmison recitations. At the close of the literary entertainment, the large party adjourned to a more substantial but equally pleasing feast of ice-cream and strawberries, in the Orange Hall, adjoining. The Committee are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts.

At the meeting of the National Grand Priory, at Hamilton, on Tuesday, R. E. Sir Knight Rev. V. Clementi, was elected Grand Chaplain, E. H. D. Hall was present as Grand Pursuivant.

Facts, Fragments and Fancies for Farmers.

Farmers' Breeding Fast Stock.

There is a good deal said by the agricultural journals about this question, and there is a prevailing opinion that farmers should not breed fast stock. We can hardly arrive at such a conclusion. If there is more money in breeding thoroughbreds than common horses, we say breed the thoroughbreds. It is claimed that fast horses mean idleness, race-tracks, gambling, whiskey-drinking and swindling. That may be so, but no one ever objects to the farmer raising barley, corn, rye and hops, because such products are required for the manufacture of whiskey and malt liquors. There is as much propriety in one as there is in the other. We believe that horse racing is pernicious in its tendencies. We have the same opinion in regard to drinking liquors unless used for medicinal purposes, but that is no reason why barley, rye, corn and hops should not be cultivated. The farmer can breed fast horses and yet not patronize the race tracks, unless he chooses to do so. If he can raise a horse that is worth, when four or five years old, five hundred dollars, is it not his privilege, and is it not much better, than to grow a plug, or a dung-hill, that is only worth seventy-five or a hundred dollars at that age? We say let the farmers make all the money they can off their farms in a legitimate way. The more they make the better it is for all of us.

What an Old Farmer Says.

This is the advice of an old man who has tilled the soil for forty years:

I am an old man, upwards of three score years, two score of which I have been rich and have all I need; do not owe a dollar; have given my children a good education, and when I am called away shall leave enough to keep the wolf from the door. My experience has taught me that:

1. One acre of land, well tilled and well prepared, produces more than two which received only the same amount of labor used on one.

2. One cow, horse, mule, sheep or hog well fed is more profitable than two kept on the same amount necessary to keep one well.

3. One acre of clover grass is worth more than two of cotton where no grass or clover is raised.

4. No farmer who buys oats, corn, or wheat, fodder and hay, can keep the sheriff from the door to the end.

5. The farmer who never reads papers, sneers at book-farming and improvements always has a leaky roof, poor stock, broken down fences, and always complains of bad seasons.

6. The farmer who is above his business and entrusts it to another to manage, soon has no business to attend to.

7. The farmer whose habitual beverage is cold water is healthier, wealthier and wiser than he who does not refuse to drink.

To Destroy Caterpillars.

Pour a little coal or kerosene oil on their nests; it will kill every one. My apple trees were about to be eaten up. I had tried burning the nests, and after scorching the limbs of trees found the insects still lived, or so many of them as to require the work to be done over and over again; but saturating the nest with oil kills the worms, with no injury to the tree. I used about three quarts of oil for my trees. Much oil is necessarily wasted, unless a utensil could be made especially for the purpose. I found it did not answer to shower the oil, as it did not penetrate quickly through the nest. Pour it on.—Country Gentleman.

How and When to Plough.

Don't turn the soil when so wet that it will cake into hard lumps. The soil is too wet to be plowed whenever the mouldboard is smeared, does not keep clean and bright when passing through the furrow. A soil that is late in becoming dry enough for the plow, needs draining. The success of a crop largely depends upon the proper preparation of the seed-beds. The soil must not only be loose, deep and mellow, but it should contain all the essential elements of plant food, and these in an available form. This requires thorough tillage—plowing, harrowing, etc.—and a good supply of well-rotted manure, or its equivalent, in some other form. It is folly to expect good crops from a poorly prepared soil, and one lacking the food upon which the plants can feed.

Domestic Economy.

A low priced steak by long continued hammering, and then rolling in well seasoned flour before frying, will be very tender and retain its moisture quite unlike the proverbial 'fried leather' of the American cook. Even plate beef, thoroughly stewed and browned, and a nice gravy made, is a dinner dish fit for any ordinary earthly mortal. A soup bone is a profitable and good investment, if managed rightly. It should be put over to broil early in the morning in cold water, and boiled slowly. Any tough piece of meat by this plan can be boiled thoroughly tender, picked from the bones, seasoned and pressed and thus be made into a charming tea or lunch dish.

If the fact can be demonstrated to a cook that meat can be made tender by softening the fibres with the action of a little vinegar, there will be no reason why she should send a tough steak to the table. If she can be convinced that it is better to turn it over on a plate containing a little vinegar, salad oil, and pepper, for four or five times in a couple of hours, instead of trying to make it thin by battering it with a rolling pin or cleaver, and so forcing out all its juices, she must be obstinate indeed if she prefers the latter method.

Intelligent Farming.

A very practical address was delivered the other day by Mr. James Laidlaw before the Puslinch Farmers' club. Mr. Laidlaw advocated the more liberal education of farmers, a better system of farming, and the use of fertilizers. A man may farm well without an education, but the same man educated will be a far better agriculturist. He will take a wider and more liberal view of his calling, and will appreciate more readily than another the advantages of a rotation of crops, if he is so trained as to be able to reduce his theories to practice. On the subject of the use of fertilizers, Mr. Laidlaw gave some interesting facts. Speaking from experience, he said gypsum or land plaster when applied to hay to the extent of 200 or 250 lbs. to the acre, except in very dry seasons, had been attended with the best results, and when applied to turnips mixed with salt, about 250 lbs. each, the results had also been good, particularly in a dry fall. His experience with salt on all kinds of crops had been considerable, and he found the application produced good results, in some cases doubling the crops. The most marked results had been on spring wheat and barley, using from one to six hundred lbs. per acre, but the quantity used over three hundred pounds seemed to have no effect. In using gypsum and salt he had frequently left portions of the field without any application, and the effect was always in favor of the application.

Dairymen in Canada and the United States.

Over the United States, especially over the Western ones, Canada has the immense advantages of a summer rainfall, which prevents the land from being parched and scorched with extensive heat and drought. Wheat will ripen at latitude 56 degrees, and barley at 55 degrees, which is from three to four hundred miles north of the Orkney and Shetland islands; but this occurs only in the north-west of Canada, for in the north-east, in the direction of Hudson's Bay, the Arctic currents that sweep down the coast of Labrador lowers the temperature, and push further south the limits of grains and grasses. But wherever wheat and barley will ripen, in a climate whose summer rainfall can be depended on, there is a good prospect for grasses and roots generally; and though the winters are severe, making the wintering of live stock an arduous duty, they begin and leave off again with a regularity which enables the farmer to make nicer calculations than he can think of doing in the British Islands; and, as the frosts are keen, and last as a rule for a considerable period, the ground is mellowed and pulverised to a degree which greatly lessens the work of preparing it for the seed, while the gradual melting of the snow in Spring gives to the soil a supply of moisture which is of great service to the newly germinated seeds.

Over a considerable portion of the United States west of St. Louis—west, that is, of the 78th Meridiant, the summer rainfall is altogether insufficient for the needs of vegetation. During four or five months of the year, and they the most important agricultural months, grasses cannot flourish, and roots and green crops are out of the question, so that the vast district west of Illinois, reaching to the pacific, is not adapted to dairying, and never can be, unless vast forests are planted to increase the rainfall, and irrigation works on a vast scale are carried out wherever water for the purpose may be had. All this tells against the expansion of American dairying to the unlimited extent which would otherwise have been possible; and Canada promises at no distant period of the world's history to become almost as great a stock-raising and dairying country as its neighbor, the United States—pursuits for which its soil, climate, and general characteristics appear to be eminently suitable. The soil and climate of Canada, in fact, throughout a vast area, are favorable to the growth of many useful pasture and storage grasses, and the country in general is well watered, while both the land and labor are cheaper, and taxation lighter than in the United States.

On Dominion Day a fire at Cambray burned Roberts' hotel and stables, two buildings of the Roy estate and the sheds and stables of J. H. Lytle.

John Henderson, of Belleville, has been committed for trial on the charge of attempting rape on a little girl aged eight years.

During the heavy thunder storm which took place last week, the barn of Mr. Geo. Laird, near Hallowell Mills, was struck by lightning and considerably damaged.

Mary Fraser, Box 386, Port Hope, advertises for information of "Angus D. Fraser; 36, light complexion, scar under chin, left wife and children, September, 1880."

Millbrook, says the Messenger, is arroused over supposed incendiary attempts. Fair's foundry and Gordon's empty house were unsuccessfully operated on a few days ago.

No Hospital Needed.—No palatial hospital needed for Hop Bitters patients, nor large-salaried talented puffers to tell what Hop Bitters will do or cure, as they tell their own story by their certain and absolute cures at home.—New York Independent. 27-2t

The News says Port Hope Harbor tolls to July 1st, this year, exceed the receipts for the corresponding period of 1880 by over $1,100. Of course, this increase is due almost altogether to the increase in the quantity of lumber shipped.

Mr. Ed. P. Gillogly, of Reaboro, has a young thoroughbred Berkshire pig which first saw the light of day on the 5th of last April, and on the 5th of July, just three months after, he kicked the beam at 103lbs.

On Friday night, 1st inst., whilst hunting in the township of Sinclair, Henry Lasseter, a farmer, was taken for a deer and shot dead by a farmer named Alfred Wilder. An inquest was held by Corner Reece, on Saturday, and a verdict of manslaughter was returned by the jury against Wilder.

Jacob H. Bloomer, of Virgille, N. Y., writes:—"Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured a badly swelled neck and sore throat on my son in forty-eight hours; one one application also removed the pain from a very sore toe; my wife's foot was also much inflamed—so much so that she could not walk about the house; she applied the Oil, and in twenty-four hours was entirely cured."

The Colborne Express of the 7th, says:—On Tuesday evening, Scripture & Bro's. foundry was found to be on fire in the engine house. By dint of hard labor and a few burns, the fire was extinguished, but not before a considerable part of the woodwork inside was burned. The fire is supposed to have originated by a spark smouldering in the shavings near the boiler.

On Dominion Day some-one entered Tait's mill, Orillia, and drove three spikes into a log, but the sawyer was on the lookout for such things and spied the spikes before the saw got near them. Mr. Tait, we understand, offers a reward of $100, for information as to the perpetrator.

The Trent Valley Advocate says;—A report of a sad accident at Codrington, has reached us. It appears that on Saturday, 25th June, a five year old son of Mr. Charles Rose, was riding in a waggon with his father, near that place, when a jolt of the waggon threw him off forward, and the wheel passed over his head, killing him instantly.

Thousands of children are lost annually from cholera infantum, diarrhœa, and summer complaints, whose lives might be preserved by using Extract of Wild Strawberry. Physicians recommended and use it constantly. It is a remedy well known, and more highly valued the longer known. It is for sale at all drug stores, and is within reach of every one. See Advertisments in other column. 27-2t

At Napanee on the night of the 7th inst., Wm. Hickey, a laborer, who was on his way to pass the remainder of his days with a sister, Mrs. Wm. McCormick, of Tyendinaga, was robbed at Belleville swing bridge about twelve o'clock. He was stooping down lighting his pipe, when he was seized by the neck from behind by a burly ruffian, who was instantly joined by another. Hickey was stunned somewhat by a blow on the head, and the two robbers had his boots and pants off in a twinkling, and their victim thrown into the river. In the pockets there was between $75 and $80. Hickey came to himself, when he struck out for shore. For about two hours he was groping along the long stretch of the Rathbun wharf, which was so slippery that he could not get out. At last he got hold of a boom-chain and his cries brought assistance, and he was rescued, almost dead. One of the robbers was a large and the other a small built man. No arrests.

The most pleasant, rapid, reliable and effectual remedy yet discovered for diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera morbus, cholera infantum, and all summer complaints, is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It is unsurpassed as a reliable specific in the above diseases, is well known as a great remedial agent, and is more highly valued the longer it is known. Travellers and tourists should carry a supply in their haversack. For sale by all Dealers in Medicines 27-2t

If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother, and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle. 6-1y.

The Alembic of the Body.—The stomach is the alembic of the human system. In it those wondrous chemical changes take place which result in the transmutation of food into blood. When it is vigorous the necessary processes of digestion and assimilation go on uninterrupted, and the system is suitably nourished. When it is feeble or disordered, they are obstructed, and being in consequence ill supplied with blood of a vitalizing quality, the physical organism becomes week and feeble, the nerves suffer, the liver and bowels are semi-paralyzed, and appetite and sleep fail. These disastrous consequences may, however, be prevented, or remedied with the supreme stomachic and aperient, Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, a medicine of rare purity and efficacy, which reforms a disordered and repairs a weakened state of the digestive organs, overcomes biliousness, relieves the bowels when obstructed without straining or weakening them, and promotes the exit from the system of impurities which infect the blood, which cause serious organic maladies. No objectionable mineral contaminates it, and its value is not marred by a subsequent re-action prejudical to the general health. Far perferable is it to the ordinary nauseous drugs used to produce a similar effect, but which are frequently ineffective as well as unpleasant; nor is it a cheap and valueless medicine, puffed into existence. It is used for dyspepsia, biliousness, affections of the blood, kidney complaints, famale weakness, lumbago, &c., and in all blood diseases it is unequalled. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

NO RISK.

Thomas' Eclectric Oil! Worth ten times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not it is time you did.

Pain cannot stay where it is used. It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common Sore Throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an old Standing Cough. One or two bottles cures bad cases of Piles or Kidney Troubles. Six to eight applications cure any case of Excoriated Nipples or Inflamed Breast. One bottle has cured Lame Back of eight years' standing. Daniel Plank, of Brookfield, Tioga Co., Pa., says: "I went thirty miles for a bottle of our Oil, which affected a wonderful cure of a Crooked Limb, by six applications."—Another who had had Asthma for years, says:—"I have half a bottle left, and $100 would not buy it if I could not get no more."—Rufus Robinson, of Nunda, N. Y., writes: "One small bottle of your Eclectric Oil restored the voice where the person had not spoken above a whisper for five years."—Rev. J Mallory, of Wyoming, N. Y., writes: "Your Eclectric Oil cured me of Bronchitis in one week."

It is composed of six of the Best Oils that are known. It is as good for internal as for external use, and is believed to be immeasurably superior to anything ever made. Will save you much suffering and many dollars of expense.

Beware of Imitations.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and Take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 25 cents. GEORGE HILLIARD

A Widow's Wiles;

OR,

BITTER VENGEANCE

BY RACHEL BERNHARDT.

CHAPTER IV.

Lady Cunningham was pale as death. ...ere were blue lines about the mouth ...d nose, arising from a severe muscular ...traction. Her grey eyes throbbed, ...tracted, and dilated with a dangerous ...ght.

Commanding her voice, she said, quietly, "You are anxious for Herbert's return to ...ke a new will, Hereward?"

"Gwen," he rejoined in a low tone, "...epth is so uncertain—I—I have felt ill ... long, that I did not wait until the ...venth hour. I have made it already."

"What?"

The word was simple enough, but the ...ne in which it was uttered brought his ...es quickly upon her.

For a space a veil seemed lifted, and ... saw her clearly.

"Great Heaven, Gwen!" he cried; "...on't look like that! What would you ...?"

"What should I do?" she rejoined. "...hat have I not a right to do? This ...ow my love and nursing have been ...turned—by deceit, secrecy, ingratitude! ...here is the will? Who has it?

"What would you do with it? Gwen...line, remember he is my only child—my ... I have left you rich—rich!"

"Do I say otherwise? You have de...ceived me, mistrusted me. Where is the ...ill? Herbert shall never enter this room ...ill I know. Who has it?"

"No one."

"You have hidden it. Where?"

He made a feeble attempt to lift his ..., but dropped helpless on the pillow. "Gwen, fetch the nurse; I—I am ...rse!" he gasped.

She saw it, and had no wish he should ... until she had learned where was that ...ill which disinherited her.

Swiftly she moved to the door, but ...sted half-way, and involuntarily looked ...ck with haggard, startled eyes.

A sudden, muffled cry had seemed to ...ng through the room. It had not come ...m the bed, but from behind the panel...ng.

Had he heard it?

Quickly she stepped to Sir Hereward. ...is eyes were open, the muscles of the ... relaxed.

Uttering a shriek, Lady Cunningham ...shed to the door. She found the nurse ... the corridor.

"Come, come!" she cried; "I fear Sir ...erward is much worse."

The woman hurried in, and looked ...on the patient. Then she dropped the ...rtain, saying, solemnly, "Your ladyship ...er it—pray, bear it—he is dead!"

CHAPTER V.

LADY GWENDOLINE'S PROTEGEE—A CHAMPION.

At the opening of this present chapter, ...ople who had known Sir Hereward ...rsonally or otherwise, spoke of "his ...uth fifteen years ago," for such is the ...riod elapsed. Few, however, did ...ink of it; though, at the time, it had ...used much curiosity, speculation, in...rest, surmise, and wonderment.

Would Sir Herbert attend the funeral? ...d he been forgiven? Was he the heir? ...ould he and his wife instantly take ...ssession of the Castle, ousting her ...dyship? What was the nature of the ...ronet's will?

These queries for eight days kept the ...ll neighborhood in a constant state of ...ilderment. Every train was watched ... Sir Herbert's arrival, yet in vain.

It was rumored that Lady Cunningham ...d dispatched a special messenger to ...ndon, to announce his father's death, ...d bring him back.

This, too, was a failure. Herbert's ...ndlady had stated her lodger had left ... house a few days before, without ...ying where he was going, and had ...ver returned. Surely, he would ap...ar on the day of the funeral, if only to ...ar the will read.

But, no; Sir Herbert Cunningham put ... no appearance. The remains of the ...te Baronet were consigned to the family ...ult without a son's hallowing tear, at ...hich none showed more amazement, ...re distress that her ladyship.

But wonderment was yet added on the ...ading of the will, made on the day ...hen Herbert had been banished, and the ...wyer last been summoned.

Herbert's name was not mentioned.

After bequests to friends and servants, ... left everything to Lady Cunningham. ...ly in the event of her not marrying ... (that was the strangest part of it), ...as it to pass back to his nearest of kin, ... that the son, no doubt, was implied, ...t not named. It seemed little to ...dify, for he put in no claim nor effort ... contest the will.

For two years Lady Cunningham re...ided at the Castle, leading a widowed ...e, receiving a few guests. Then she ...nt abroad, people said, to get married ... make Cunningham her's and her ...endants' forever.

...t it proved otherwise. In twelve ...nths she returned to the Castle, slightly ...re aged, but yet fascinating and ...utiful; while it was soon apparent it ... no recluse's life she intended to lead. ...th her she brought a lovely girl as ... companion, and attendant. Lady ...ningham mentioned her as the ...phan daughter of a cousin of her late ...band, who, being penniless, she had ...en out of charity.

Hilda Horne was not much over seven...en"; her figure was slight, her features ...fined and delicate, her expression sweet ...d gentle, her eyes beautiful as dew...ped violets, but with a timid, shrink... look in them, which some said was ...tural, others a feminine art to attract ... for it certainly was attractive to the ...alrous heart masculine—while others ...ted it was owing to her ladyship's ...per, which rumor affirmed was any...ing but as amiable behind the scenes as ... society. It went further. It stated ...ere were times, when Lady Cunningham ...s awful, terrifying all who approached ...r, when her wrath would usually fall ...on Hilda.

After these outbreaks, her ladyship ...erally had a bad night, and could be ...ard pacing, pacing the oaken bedcham...r, talking at times as if some one bore ... company.

There was only one person who came ... her presence at such times with whom ... never quarrelled. This was Jane ...rner, a sallow-faced, dark-haired, ...lent woman, with a hair lip and a halt ... her gait. She had been Gwendoline's ...rvant before her marriage, and though ... had overtaken her, Lady Cunningham ...d not pension her off.

She remained at the Castle, keeping in ... proper place, though the other ...mestics declared she lived like a lady. ... Lady Cunningham's passion always ...cided when Jane Derner appeared; ...le Hilda had even known the servant ... enter and check these restless mid...ght vigils.

Among those who attributed Hilda's ...imid, shrinking expression to the third ...ated reason, and decidedly not to the ...econd, was Jack Bramber, son of old Lord Bramber, who had lately rented The Lodge.

During the first large ball given by Lady Cunningham, he had come upon the girl, simply attired in plainest white, ...tanding nervously behind the curtains of a window recess.

Hardly knowing who she was, but pitying her isolation in a scene of so much gayety, notwithstanding she received his advances in a scared manner, he entered into conversation.

He started at first from compassion; but as his genial nature and merry blue eyes, giving her confidence, drew her out, he continued it from interest.

The small lips more than once smiled; the deep violet eyes met his as brightly as his own; and Jack Bramber, in less than ten minutes, came to the conclusion he had never before seen so sweetly pretty a countenance nor so lovable a girl.

Love gives no warning when it sows its seed. A quarter of an hour ago, Jack had been heart-whole; and now a seed had fallen on it that was to bear rapid leaf and flower.

Suddenly the band struck up a lively waltz, whereupon Jack Bramber asked Hilda to be his partner.

"I?" ejaculated the girl, amazed, and retreating into her timidity like a snail into its shell. "You are very kind. But, oh, no, thank you! I am not one of the guests, you see."

"No; but you are one of the family," retorted Jack. "And I am sure you can dance like a fairy."

"Then it would be only from seeing others," she smiled, sadly, drawing back. "I have never learned."

"But you like it?"

"Oh, yes," came the instant response.

"Then we will try together, and I will teach you."

Before she was aware, his strong arm was around her slender waist, and in another second he would have whirled her out among the dancers, had his gaze not rested on Hilda's countenance.

Its pale terror frightened him.

"Good heavens!" he ejaculated.

"Oh, don't—please, don't!" gasped the girl. "Her ladyship would never pardon me. I know you mean it kindly, but it would be an injury to me. And I'm sure you would not wish to do me harm."

"Harm—I? Not for worlds!" exclaimed the young man, slackening his hold, not altogether releasing it; for his companion seemed really in need of some support. "Why in Heaven's name, should her ladyship object? Aren't you her relation?"

"Yes—or, rather, no. My father was cousin to her ladyship's first husband. He—he died when I was very young, and left me penniless, without a friend. Lady Cunningham says he is not dead; that he ran away and deserted me. But I am sure that is not true; for I remember him the kindest, dearest father. Still, her ladyship took me out of charity."

"Charity!" repeated Jack, contemptuously.

"It is not always easy to bear, is it?" asked Hilda, raising her violet eyes, with touching naive confidence, to her new friend.

"Easy?—it must be one of the most difficult things possible."

"Yes. I have been taught, and have in secret learned myself a good deal; for I should like to go away and be a governess, somewhere, earning my own living. But her ladyship will not hear of it. She hardly lets me out of her sight."

"Does she—love you?"

"I don't think she cares for me at all."

"I was going to say she has a confoundedly strange way of showing her affection," remarked Jack.

"Oh!" cried Hilda, with a trembling start; "here she comes! Pray don't let her see you with me! Please do not say you have been talking to me, or she will never let you do so again!"

As she spoke, she raised her hand to the window-catch, preparatory to flight into the dark grounds.

He put his hand on hers.

"But I will speak to you!" he said, firmly. "Her ladyship shall not prevent me,"

"But she will prevent me," said Hilda.

"Then I will keep our secret, by all means. But, Miss Horne, you will let me see you again? I must! I am sure we might be capital friends!"

"Oh, pray let me go!" she pleaded.

"Not until you have told me where I may see you to-morrow, and apologize for my rudeness. Yet I don't mean it as rudeness. I only want to see you."

"I shall be among the trees on the east side of the grounds to-morrow at eight. I always walk there," answered Hilda, turning a scared glance toward her ladyship, who has been detained by one of her guests.

"Thank you! I want—I would so much like to be your friend!" said Jack, with earnest chivalry, while he opened the window himself.

Hilda turned upon him a grateful look as she darted through.

"Confound it all!" muttered Jack, watching the slim, white figure vanish in the darkness; "to take such a beautiful girl as that 'out of charity,' and treat her so shamefully! Her ladyship must have the heart of stone! I'll just try if I can't alter matters!"

It sometimes happens in endeavoring to set things right we create greater wrong.

It is quite possible that Jack Bramber was about to experience that.

"Playing backgard, Mr. Bramber?" remarked a low, musical voice behind him, while a fan tapped his arm. "Can so dark a night have greater charms for you than the entertainment I have provided for your pleasure?"

"That would be impossible!" answered Jack, inclining his handsome head. "But the fact is, I was attracted by the beauty of a star. I think it must have been the twin sister of Venus. Certainly I never saw one that so struck me."

"Really you are enthusiastic!" laughed her ladyship. "I fancy your star must have acquired splendor from contrast with the darkness around it."

"That is very probable," was the quiet response.

"May I see your star?"

"I fear it has gone now. An unkind cloud soared it. But your ladyship, no doubt, will soon have another opportunity."

"Not worth troubling about!" she retorted, smiling, making her lovely shoulders, making the diamond necklet she wore flash forth fifty hues. "Are you not going to join the dance? It is a square one next. Or, perhaps, you have forsworn Terpsichore?"

"No if your ladyship will honor me by becoming my partner!"

"I am sorry, but your uncle has already got my promise."

"My uncle!" ejaculated Jack, in a surprise he could not quite check. "I did not think he still danced."

"Then he will astonish you. I can answer that he dances much better than many younger men."

"Really, then,"—and he looked meaningly at his companion—"it must be from inspiration."

"Perhaps it is," laughed Lady Cunningham. "I will say I hope it is. I think Lord Bramber most charming."

Jack would have liked to have made the long face he felt; but he said, instead, "So do I, this old Castle! Outside and in, I think it is quite a picture."

"Pray is that meant to refer to your uncle's age?" questioned lady Cunningham, tapping her jewelled fan on her glove. "Men should not be judged by years, but by their nature. Some are old—worn out at thirty."

"That is true; but really I intend no reference to my uncle, I assure you. I thought but of the Castle. It is very, very ancient, is it not? Played its part, and held its own, in the Civil Wars, no doubt! Possibly—though that is not a pleasant idea—has had murders committed in it! In that case, of course," he laughed, lightly, "in some stated corridor or room the spirit still perambulates. Alas, poor ghost!"

Did her ladyship's cheek grow paler despite the suspicion of rouge tinging it?

However, she answered in a tone as light as his, "I believe no ancient house or race is considered quite perfect without a ghost, so I have no doubt Cunningham has one—at least, I shall maintain so! Excuse me, Mr. Bramber, but I will now release you from your escort," (they had been moving through the vast ball-room). "Here is your uncle," she added, dismissing Jack with a bow, as a tall, well looking, elderly gentleman—a "beau" in dress and appearance—came toward them.

Jack, by no means loth to be free (for within the last hour he had taken a great dislike to his hostess), lounged through the ball and other rooms in quest of Hilda Horne.

He thought it quite probable that she would have stolen in by another window.

So she had, but only to creep away up to her own little room on the second story, throw herself on her bed, and weep tears that, could Jack have seen them, would have made his honest heart ache with pity and indignation.

Yet for many, many years Hilda had never been so happy. And Jack—how his cheeks would have burned!—was the cause.

The ball was yet progressing gayly; Jack Bramber was moving about, smiling outwardly, but with brooding annoyance in his breast, and Lady Cunningham was still listening to Lord Bramber's whispered compliments, when Hilda Horne finally fell asleep, these words on her lips—"I shall see him again to-morrow."

CHAPTER VI.

AN UNPLEASANT ANNOUNCEMENT—OLD JAMES STONE.

THE gilt French clock on the mantlepiece of the Lodge morning-room had just eleven.

The door-windows were open; breakfast was on the table; but, as yet, the only occupant of the apartment was Jack Bramber. Dressed in a light gray suit, he walked the floor, his head bent, and whistling thoughtfully.

It need scarcely be said that the interview among the trees with Hilda had taken place, and the result had thrown him into a state of perplexity.

Two things he found difficult to answer. Why did Lady Cunningham treat her husband's relation so unnaturally?—had the father really run away, a black sheep altogether, and did he (Jack) love Hilda Horne? If not, he was behaving most dishonorably; for he had got her promise to see him again.

"But I do love her," he ejaculated, halting, and sternly regarding a portrait of his paternal uncle. "What's the good of beating about the bush? As pity is akin to love, so is love akin to pity. If I didn't love Hilda Horne, why should the treatment she receives make me so indignant? It's a first sight affair, that's certain. But it's awkward about the father. Suppose he could crop up again? Besides, there's my uncle. I'm his heir, certainly, as far as the title? But his money? He's such a stickler about birth and position."

A step in the hall caused him to break off his reflections. Jack had breakfasted long before, but he always bore Lord Bramber company at his more substantial repast, and had been waiting for him. Now the door opened, and his uncle entered.

Lord Bramber, when young, had been one of the handsomest and most gentlemanly men of his time, and he could not forget it. He never would.

A beau at twenty, he practiced the beau at sixty-seven, and would if he should live to be a hundred.

Skilfully applied cosmetics and unguents kept his complexion smooth and free from sallowness, but rendered it a dead white, scarcely improved by the slight, delicate color on the cheek. His hair and mustache were dyed, and Jack fully believed, though not quite certain, that his uncle wore stays.

Attired in a rich cashmere dressing-gown, and holding a scented cambric handkerchief in his white hand, Lord Bramber dropped gracefully into his chair by the table.

"Good morning, Jack," he remarked, in easy tones. "Fear I've kept you waiting, eh? You youngsters are up at dawn, I believe? It used not to be so in my time. We, as Sheridan did, 'liked the day to be well aired first.' Well, what do you think of our charming neighbor? Those sardines, please."

Jack shot a scrutinizing glance at his uncle before he replied. Finally, he evaded a decided response.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries.

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

CHANGED HANDS.—The sale of the mills, limits, etc., of the firm of McDougall & Co., of Harwood, to R. C. Smith, of Fenelon Falls, has been completed, and the purchaser has entered upon possession. As stated some time ago, the mill property at Harwood will probably be transferred to a location more convenient to the limits.

ALLEGED THEFT OF A COW.—Last Friday Wm. Cavanagh of Dummer was tried before Acting-Judge Dennistoun for alleged hypothecation of a cow, the property of the Messrs. Wasson of Warsaw. The County Attorney prosecuted, the prisoner being defended by John Burnham M P. who secured his client's acquittal on the evidence.

NUISANCE CASE.—Yesterday Mr. R. Wainwright was tried before the Police Magistrate on charge of maintaining a public nuisance within the corporation, the nuisance complained of being a slaughter house, and the complainant Mr. D. W. Dumble. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate sent the case up for trial.

The whole of Hall, Innes & Co's stock of Carpets must be cleared out in thirty days, to give room for new goods.

MALTOPEPSYN.—The medicine bearing this name, introduced by Hazen Morse, of Toronto, is rapidly acquiring popularity, through its remarkable efficacy in obstinate or any form of indigestion, as well as in diarrhœa. It is not a "patent medicine" in the ordinary sense of the term, but a scientific remedy, endorsed by the most experienced medical authority. The afflicted would do well to give it a trial.

REV. DR. CLEARY.—Most of our readers will be concerned to know that Rev. Dr. Cleary, R. C. Bishop of the Diocese, had a narrow escape from a serious accident at Brockville, on Friday last. Attempting the board the G. T. R. train while in motion, he caught the hand rail, but missed his footing, being dragged quite a distance, his robe being entangled in the wheels. Fortunately he sustained no injury, but he ran a risk of a very serious kind.

THE TRENT CANAL SURVEY.—Mr. Thos Rubidge, C. E., arrived in town on Saturday evening last, from Trenton, where he had been engaged in organizing a party to make examination of the nine mile rapids section of the proposed improvements. On Monday, in company with Mr. Belcher, Engineer of the Trent Works, he made a personal examination of the probable route to Mud Lake and immediately placed surveyors at work. Mr. A. J. Belcher has charge of the Mud Lake party, and Mr. R. B. Rogers and Mr. C. E. Ranney, have been despatched to Crow Bay. Mr. Rubidge will make his head-quarters here, and will push the work vigorously.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY. The Directors of this Society met last Thursday evening, Mr. J. H. Roper in the chair, when the date of the annual show was fixed for Sept. 8th next. It was decided to have no poultry show in connection with the exhibition this year. Some changes were made in the prize list, and competition was thrown open to all residents of the town and county, the only limitation being the wise one that no article which has heretofore received a prize will be allowed to compete a second time. There will be one judge in each class, and the judges will be as far as possible non-residents.

—COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE EXAMINATIONS. The following promotions have been made in the Collegiate Institute classes, as the result of the last quarter's examinations. Form I. to Form II: - Bell, L., Huston, J., Henry, M., Lough, H., Montgomery, E., Pearce, E., Roper, H., Sherin, G., White, W., Wrighton, N. From Form II to Form III:—Allingham, A., Brown, R., Brown, M. B., Bennett, G., Campbell, F., Cameron, A., Delaney, W., Dean, M., Dixon, F., Franks, J., Hall, R., Hamilton, S., Jeffrey, W., Lackie, A., Latimer, R., Lynch, A., Schneider, G., Smith, P., Smith, W., Young, N. Several pupils who failed to obtain the requisite number of marks, have been recommended for promotion by the teachers. These cases will be decided upon at the commencement of the term.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—A telegram from Omemee says that on Monday "A young man named John Jamieson, son of George Jamieson, residing near Mount Pleasant, a village about four miles from this place, while mowing yesterday on his father's farm, had his body nearly severed by his horses running away and throwing him in front of the knives. He is still alive, but no hopes of his recovery is entertained."

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD.—This board met on Thursday evening last. Present. The Chairman, Thos. Kelly, Esq., and Messrs. McGrath, Grant, Cahill, Hourigan, Sullivan and Lemay. The resignation of Mr. P. Rudkins was accepted, a gratuity of $50 voted and the following resolution passed:—"That this Board, in accepting the resignation of Mr. P. Rudkins, deeply regret being obliged to part with the invaluable services of so exemplary and assiduous a young man, and wish to express their solicitude for his future welfare." A committee consisting of the chairman, and Messrs. Sullivan and Grant was appointed to consider the question of engagement of teachers. The committee reported to an adjourned meeting of the Board which was held on Monday night when Messrs. Lynch and Holden were re-engaged for the ensuing year.

THE ELOCUTION TOURNAMENT.—The Concert and Elocution Tournament given on Thursday evening last, under the auspices of the Literary Association of the Collegiate Institute, was fairly attended, though not to such a degree as its merits deserved. The musical part of the programme comprised a duet by Misses Lech and Davidson, a song by Miss C. Ellsworth, a solo by Miss M. Edmison, instrumental, and a vocal duet by Miss E. Stratton and Mr. J. D. Graham; all of whom deserve praise for the excellence of their contribution to the evening's enjoyment, and received the applause of the audience. Much interest was excited by the fact that the recitations were competitive, the committee to whom the award was entrusted, consisting of Rev. Messrs. Torrance and Bell, Jas. Stratton, I. P. S., and E. B. Edwards, M. A., Mr. J. F. Jeffers, being called in as umpire. The parties entering into the competition all did remarkably well, exhibiting a general proficiency which must have been gratifying to those who take an interest in the working of our educational institutions, but there were wide divergencies of opinion, we understand, among the judges, and certainly among the audience, as to the relative merits of the different competitors. The decision of the judges, as finally agreed on, by way compromise, was as follows:—1st, J. D. Graham; 2nd, Miss M. Edmison; 3rd, Miss Ellsworth; 4th, Max. Dennistoun; 5th, Miss Fair. There were others who were in the opinion of a large portion of the audience entitled to a place on the list. Miss F. Campbell recited with sympathy, expression and correctness of gesture; Miss Duff's recitation was also marked by the favourable opinion of the audience; Miss E. Ludgate chose a difficult piece, and recited it in a most admirable manner; Miss N. Wrighton's recitation found more favor with the audience than it did with the judges, apparently. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Douglas were also favourably received. In fact, the general superiority of the efforts of those taking part rendered the judges' work a very difficult one, and those who were not placed among the winners have the satisfaction of knowing that their efforts were fully appreciated. Prof. Burke rendered valuable assistance, and the tableaux were well carried out.

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.

Mr. D. Chisholm, of Port Hope, left on Tuesday on a trip to Scotland.

We regret to learn of the death, at Cobourg, of Mrs. Justice Armour.

A. Hugel, ex-President of the Midland, visited town on Friday last.

R. Cronn, an old resident, now of Winnipeg, was in town during the past few days.

Master W. Rogers' name appears among Trinity College School (Port Hope) prize winners.

Rev. William Stewart assumed, last week, the editorship of the Canadian Baptist, as the associate of Rev. Mr. Muir.

Wm. Bird, of Peterborough, won 1st prize and $12, in a one hour "go-as-you-please," at Cobourg, on Dominion Day.

Mr. F. Lane, formerly of Peterborough, has, we see by the Winnipeg Times, been appointed Registrar of Mountain City.

It is reported that Hon. James C. Pope, of Prince Edward Island, brewer and ship-builder, has failed with liabilities of $130,000.

R Luttrell, who was some months ago Superintendent of the Grand Junction Railway, has been appointed agent of the Grand Trunk station at Hamilton.

Mr. George Young, of the Trenton Courier; Capt. Howard, of the Hastings Star, and Mr. Rennie, of the Belleville D. & D. Institute, were among the excursionists last week.

At the commencement exercises of St. Michael's college, Toronto, Mr. J. B. Collins, of Lindsay, delivered the opening address. He also carried off the Dowling silver medal for his English essay, and was awarded honors in mental philosophy.

Mr. T. R. Hewson, P. L. S., with a staff of assistants, has left Cobourg for the North-West, where Mr. Hewson will be engaged in surveying new townships. Their location will be four hundred miles west of Winnipeg. Mr. Hewson expects to return in February.

The many friends of Father Stafford, the respected Parish Priest of Lindsay, will be pleased to learn of an improvement in the rev. gentleman's health. His last communication is dated 22nd June, when he was staying at Durrant's Hotel, George st., Portman square, London.

Mr. J. R. Trayes, President of the Press Association, and Editor of the Port Hope Times, was in town on Friday, perfecting the arrangements. A slight alteration in the programme will probably be made to enable the Association to inspect the Trent Valley route, from the foot of the lake.

Prior to his departure to Lindsay, Mr. F. H. Dobbin, late of the Review, was presented with an address signed by the employees of Toker & Co., accompanied by a handsome silver butter cooler, and an elegant set of jewellery, for Mrs. Dobbin. Mr. D. made an appropriate reply. We join the Review in saying:—"In parting with him we do so with regret, but wish himself and family long life and prosperity."

SPORTING NOTES.

CRICKET.

The cricket match, Yorkville vs. Peterborough, on Friday last, resulted in a draw being declared, on account of there not being time to finish. Peterborough, however, practically won the game, their score in one innings standing 150 to Yorkville 64, first innings, with 36 in second, and 7 wickets down. The non-combatants in the second innings only scored 12 runs altogether in the first innings, so that it is probable the game would have been won by Peterborough without having to go to bat a second time. The following is the score:—

On Saturday the Peterborough Juniors played an Omemee eleven, the game resulting in favor of the latter by one run. Indeed the Omemee players demonstrated their ability to give our first eleven a hard rub, since out of the total score of 91 runs scored by the "juniors," 63 were made by two of the best players of the club who are certainly not "juniors." Mr. J. N. Kirchoffer, of Millbrook, the well-known captain of the Port Hope cricket club, has organized an eleven called the "Canadian Zingari," to visit and play games at Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, and other places.

A game will be played to-day, between the 1st eleven of the Hastings club and the second eleven of Peterborough, on the Ashburnham grounds. Wickets will be pitched at 10:30 a. m. A close and interesting game may be expected. All are invited to attend.

LACROSSE.

The return lacrosse match between the Peterboro' and Cobourg Lacrosse Clubs, will be played here on Thursday the 21st of July.

On Monday afternoon a game of Lacrosse will be played between the second twelves of the Peterborough and Millbrook clubs. The following team will hold up the Peterborough end:—

J. Coughlin ..... Field Captain.
W. Hallett ..... Goal.
M. Tierney ..... Point.
J. Rickey ..... Cover Point.
A. Yelland and S. Clegg ..... Defence Field.
J. Lynch ..... Centre Field.
E. Rogers, J. Craig, J. Armstrong, and C. Coughlan ..... Home Field.
P. Corkery and W. Morrow ..... Home.

AQUATIC.

At the monthly meeting of the Club, six new members were elected. Unfortunately the four-oared crew, which has given so good an account of the club in the past, has been broken up by adverse circumstances—Mr. W. P. Shaw having removed from town, Mr. R. B. Rogers abandoned rowing in favor of cricket, and the other two being unable to practice from business engagements. The club has also lost Mr. Frank Dobbin by removal. There are, however, some young scullers coming to the front.

Manhattan Feed!

—FOR—

HORSES, CATTLE, MILCH COWS, SHEEP AND PIGS.

IT is a source of health, because it keeps the organs in a natural healty tone. It acts as a relish, promotes perfect digestion, and purifies the blood, therebr keeping the coat in a free and glossy condition. TRY IT! BUY IT!

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

Prescott, Ont., May 3rd, 1881.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & CO., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc.,
GEO. LABATT,
Manager P. B. & M. Co.

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents,—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

"CROWN JEWEL FLOUR"

NOTICE.

This Flour is made of No. 1 Hard Wheat by the new process, combined with the best methods and machinery in operation in the best Hungarian Mills, and will produce from 30 to 40 pounds more Bread per Barrel than the best superior white Flour. Therefore, the first cost though higher, is fully compensated in the increased yield of Bread as well as being a much better quality and more nutritious, having a much larger percentage of gluten and less of starch than ordinary wheat Flour. To those who may not be familiar with the use of this kind of Flour, we suggest mixing it moderately soft, which will require considerably more water than ordinarily used.

KNEAD THOROUGHLY, and bake with a strong heat and in such a manner that bottom and top shall be equally well baked.

THE IRISH LAND BILL.

Progress in the House of Commons.

A Trenchant Rebuke to the Obstructionists by Mr. Gladstone.

A London despatch of July 15 says that in the House of Commons Mr. John Bright complained of the Irish obstruction against the Land Bill. He said the Irish members dared not vote against the emigration clause. Mr. Parnell protested against Mr. Bright's statement. He intended to vote against the clause himself. Mr. Parnell asked Mr Gladstone what limitation the Government proposed to place on emigration expenditure. Clause 26 was finally passed at 3.30 by 126 to 23. Leamy (Liberal Home Ruler) moved to report progress. Mr. Gladstone then energetically attacked the Home Rulers, who sought by obstruction of the emigration clause to re-establish their damaged reputation as the true friends of Ireland. (Tremendous applause.) The House sat daily witnessing with indescribable pain the success of a small handful of members, and the degradation inflicted upon this noble assembly, which for generations had defended the right of the minority. An insignificant minority were attempting by mere persistence of words, without thought, to prevent the deliberate convictions of the House, and to take the legislative functions out of the hands of the majority to replace them in power. The majority in the House must now choose between succumbing to attacks made with such unblushing openness, and carrying the clause to a definite conclusion at this sitting. (Tremendous cheers.) Progress was then reported and the House was counted out at 3.40 a.m. It is stated that Ministers had arranged to sit all night to pass the emigration clause if necessary. The feeling of indignation against the six members who impeded the the Bill ran very high, even on the benches where hitherto the Home Rulers found generous support. Capt. Nolan has resigned his functions as the Parnelite whip.

Davitt, while in prison, will occupy his time in writing a political and historical work.

The World's London special says:—Parnell and his associates made their last stand against the Land Bill on the emigrant clause. State aid to emigration is much opposed by the clergy for many obvious reasons, one being that every emigrant who sails from Queenstown represents a loss to the parish priest of twenty or thirty shillings a year. Parnell felt, therefore, that it was comparatively safe for him to annoy the Government by obstructing the emigration clause. He succeeded in delaying the progress of the Bill, and in filling Mr. Gladstone with rage that found vent on Thursday night in a speech of great power and vehemence. Otherwise the week's work resulted in dead loss to the Parnellites.

Agricultural laborers in many parts of the County of Cork, dissatisfied with deriving no benefits from the improved circumstances of the farmers consequent on the payment of reduced rents, contemplate striking for higher wages during harvest. The movement is fast gaining ground.

The revelations of the Imperial State Attorney, appointed to examine the police system of the Orenburg department, and who was stripped of the office, expose frightful abuses, which have been printed and are being scattered far and wide throught the country. Some of the State convicts of Siberia found a way of sending diaries to the revolutionary press, and these have a vast circulation. The Czar is either kept in ignorance of the critical condition of affairs, or afraid to take action. A revolution such as has never been witnessed is not far off.

Advices from St. Petersburg report Russia fast drifting into anarchy. The Czar is still a close prisoner at Peterhoff. Occasionally, when the business of state requires his presence at the capital, he leaves the fortress and enters St. Petersburg almost by stealth, and returns quickly. The new Minister has abandoned the promised reforms, and is crushing out by high-handed measures the aspirations of the people for representative government, and reconstruction of the municipal system upon a broader and freer basis. The peasants are in a terrible plight. Officials from the highest to the lowest are sunk in the deepest corruption.

He armed his followers and led them in person. An indiscriminate slaughter ensued, over 1,000 women and children being massacred. The bodies were collected in a pile and burned. Kuba has been taken to Honolulu to answer for his crime.

Soon after her father came and wanted her to go home with him, but this she refused to do. Leaving instructions with Mr. Smith to watch her closely, and to keep her door locked at night, the father went home, intending to return to-morrow with the girl's mother, but this morning the girl escaped observation long enough to make the attempt upon her life. Family matters appear to be the cause of her trouble.

STONY LAKE.

From our own Correspondent.

The Orangemen of the Stony Lake and Warsaw lodges celebrated the 12th of July by an excursion and pic-nic on the steamer Cruiser, Capt. Sacret. Quite a number came from Lakefield and Young's Point. The Stony Lake Lodge embarked at Gilchrist's Bay, and the Warsaw lodge at McCracken's, the band proceeding to Gin Island, where the party had dinner. The afternoon was spent sailing on the lake. The small fare and large attendance left quite a surplus in the hands of the managing committee for the benefit of the lodge, and the day was a most successful one in every respect.

TEMPEST IN A TEA-POT.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR,—The editor of the Review must have some dirty work in view for the writer who subscribes himself "Veritas," in that paper, and doubtless "Barkis is Will-as" to perform the same. Otherwise we should not have a whole editorial column of the mammoth daily devoted to another asinine production from Veritas. So far as the gravelling of Mr. Lang's lane is concerned, the statements of all who have written on the subject agree, excepting only Mr. Veritas, and if he had only put his own name to the farrago of nonsense which he thus signs, the matter would never have been deemed worthy of attention. Mr. Veritas likens me to Bealam—I can only return the compliment, and credit him as representing Bealam's beast of burden who spoke.

Yours truly,
BYSTANDER.
South Monaghan, July 17, 1881.

THE WEST RIDING VACANCY.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

SIR.—As the rank and file of the Conservative party have no show in the columns of the Review, except they be willing to jump as the "machine" pulls the wires, allow me to say on behalf of many voters who think as I do, that the Conservatives of the County would like in the ensuing contest to have the opportunity of nominating a man of their own choice. It is whispered about that we have got to accept either the editor of the Review, the Mayor of the town, or Mr. R. A. Morrow. All this appears to have been settled by one or two wire-pullers, without as much as saying "by your leave," to the people they expect to follow them blind. Why should not good, sound, able men like Wm. Cluxton, Dr. O'Sullivan, Mr. Wm. Mills or C. Stapleton have a chance for our ballots? They are all men of ability, fair public speakers, and the public have confidence in them. To be sure Dr. O'Sullivan went back on us on the Orange Bills, but he has claims on the party, and I don't know that the Mayor of Peterborough is any safer to be trusted on that question than the Doctor. Mr. Mills would make a good representative and would be capable of expressing himself on the floor of the House with dignity and effect. Mr Cluxton is worth them all put together. Mr. Carnegie has been tried before and sold the County on the Railway question. They have enough of orators in the House already, and though no doubt Mr. Morrow might electrify the House and the Province, the chances don't lie in that direction. Taking it all round I don't see that we can improve on Mr. Mills, and if he will only anticipate the "machine" and come out as an Independent Conservative, he will find the party ready to rally round him, to the confusion of the wire-pullers who are working the oracle in the dark, and who think they carry the Conservative party in the hollow of their hands. I take the liberty of asking you to insert this, though it may not meet your own views, as many of your subscribers are, like myself, Conservative, and we have always found you ready to give us fair play.

Yours truly,
AN INDEPENDENT TORY.

THE PERSONAL ATTACKS ON MR. BLAKE.

(From the Whitby Chronicle.)

The persistent attacks of the Mail upon Mr. Blake are part of the party programme which it was settled should be carried out systematically. Something must be done to stem the tide of popular favor running so strongly in favor of the Liberal leader. And so it was agreed that Blake should be assailed personally—that the Mail should "go for him"—and that certain hireling writers on the Government press should have that special task assigned them.

The dirty work is now being performed.

We well remember that early in Mr. Blake's political career, tactics of a similar kind were adopted by his opponents. The Telegraph of that day—owned by Messrs. Robertson & Cook and edited by Mr. Daniel Morrison—was made the medium of assault, and every morning Mr. Blake and his belongings got what was considered a scarifying. The attacks were as persistent and as systematic then as those of the Mail are now, and the writing, if anything, more vigorous. But they fell harmlessly upon Mr. Blake; he remained unscathed, and his popularity every day grew greater, while the poor Telegraph went fast down to the tomb of buried and forgotten Canadian newspapers.

We would be sorry indeed that the Mail should share the fate of the Telegraph—such would be a public loss—nor is there the slightest ground for apprehension on that head. The Mail is a credit to Canadian journalistic enterprise and deserves success. But is this pitching into Blake personally, with a set purpose, disregarding truth and decency and the fair weapons of honest discussion and criticism, the right way to establish a high character for the Mail?

Mr. Blake is known to be a man of unblemished reputation. A native Canadian, his great abilities, his learning, his eloquence, and his integrity of character make Canadians proud of him. His political aspirations are high-minded and patriotic; his political principles are not assailed; but the man, Edward Blake. He is one of the few men in public life whose character, public and private, stands above reproach. The people believe in him, and the Mail and the Government party might as well try to keep out the rising tide of the Atlantic with a pitchfork as to force back the tide of Edward Blake's popularity by employing writers to blacken his good name.

A Slander Revived.

Among other of the old-time exploded charges originated in the Toronto Telegraph, and formulated throughout the country press of the Tory party in 1871 and 1872, was the famous "speak now" affair. This charge, revived by the Toronto Mail and the Montreal Gazette, was to the effect that Mr. Blake, while leader of the Opposition after the general elections of 1871, defeated the Government of Mr. Sandfield Macdonald by intrigue, and that he corruptly induced one of the members of the Government, Hon E. B. Wood, to betray his colleagues, and thus accomplished the downfall of the coalition Ministry. As a proof of this, the celebrated eructation of a legislative spittoon, a piece of paper bearing the words, "You had better speak now," was in the possession of Hon. M. C. Cameron, who caused it to be photographed and widely disseminated throughout the country. The authenticity of the document was never disputed, but the corrupt atmosphere with which it was surrounded by the imaginings of a class of politicians who had no conception of common honesty in political life, was speedily, simply and effectually dispersed by the statement of the facts before a Parliamentary Committee; and as the slander has been revived, the public should also recall these facts, which are these: The Government of Sandfield Macdonald was defeated at the polls. After the general elections, it was only by selecting Mr. R. W. Scott, elected as an opponent of his Government, and supported by Mr. Blake, that he was able even to elect a Speaker. In the debate on the address, the Government was defeated on Want of Confidence votes three several time by Mr. Blake, yet Sandfield Macdonald refused to yield to the majority of the House, and accept the adverse votes by resignation. Mr. Wood differed with his leader as to the propriety of the course to be pursued after being defeated in the House, and on Friday's sitting announced his resignation of his portfolio, but continued nevertheless to vote for the Government, so long as the Government clung to office. Owing to statements made by members, Mr. Wood desired before the close of the debate to explain his reasons for his resignation, and as the control of the House and the debate had passed with the majority into Mr. Blake's hands, he intimated this desire in a note to Mr. Blake, on the following Monday, asking if the debate was likely to continue another day. Mr. Blake thought it would, and so informed him; but during the afternoon the resistance of the minority, led by the Government, collapsed, and the debate approaching a sudden conclusion, Mr. Blake wrote the note, "You had better speak now," and sent it across the floor to Mr. Wood, who read it, tore it up, and threw it into a spittoon. Mr. Wood, however, did not speak. Mr. M. C. Cameron procured Mr. T. R. Ferguson, of "sore toes" notoriety, to fish the fragments of the note out of their filthy receptacle, wiped them off, pasted them together, and the "speak now" slander was formulated. Mr. Cameron preferred a charge and asked for a Committee, which was granted. Mr. Blake and Mr. Wood appeared before the Committee, explained the matter, and gave Mr. Cameron's charge an emphatic and unqualified denial. Mr. Cameron, ashamed of the matter, and knowing the utter want of foundation for the charge he had made, refused to appear before the Committee, who reported the charge to the House, unanimously declaring it to be untrue, and that report stands on the journals of the House. And now, in the absence of any real ground on which to base a charge against Mr. Blake, the Tory organs revive this ten years old ghost of a dead and decomposed slander, with the same foul relish for the work, with which it was originally fished out of the spittoon with Mr. Ferguson's fingers. We wish them joy of it.

A False Cry.

Opposition journals are extremely fond of seeking to fasten the term "Free Trade Party" upon the opponents of the present Government, and similar tactics served them in good stead in 1878. As a matter of fact there is no such thing as a Free Trade party in the Dominion. Many leading Liberals are avowed believers in the theory of Free Trade, just as Sir John Macdonald has been during his political career. Many others are firm believers in the theory of incidental Protection, and indeed it was the Liberals of Lower Canada who first organized public sentiment in favor of protection to home industries, at the time when the Government of Sir John Macdonald was maintaining a tariff of 12 per cent., which was increased by the late Government to 17½ per cent. As a matter of fact, Free Trade, per se, is an impossibility in Canada so long as we carry out the principle of indirect taxation, and even in the event of that difficulty being removed, would never be put in force so long as the United States maintain a hostile tariff on their side of the line. The difference actually between the two parties is this: The Tory party adopt the policy of Protection pure and simple. They put a tariff on imported articles whether home manufactures are to be benefitted thereby or not. They prohibit importations of manufactures by a tax, but they at the same time put a duty on raw material, which nullifies any benefit to the manufacturer, except he resort to increased prices. This the producer is compelled to do, and thus the revenue is forced out of the pockets of the consumer, who, instead of having to pay the manufacturer's profit simply, has to pay the additional amount by which the cost of production is increased by the tax on raw material. The late Government imposed a moderately protective duty on iron manufactures, for instance, but they left the duty on coal and raw material free. The present Government increase the duty on the manufactured article, but they also impose a duty on coal and iron, so that while the consumer has to pay an increased price corresponding to the increased duties, the manufacturer is only assisted by the difference between the two classes of duty. It is the principle of true British political economy, maintained by the Liberal party, that taxation upon the people is only justified by the requirements of the revenue, and that to go beyond that point is robbery, spoilation and injustice. The present Government boast of a large surplus as the fruit of their tariff, and claim credit to their fiscal system for producing the result. The true state of the case is, that every dollar of the surplus is a dollar unnecessarily, unjustly and arbitrarily extorted from the earnings of the people. The Government reproach the late Finance Minister with a series of deficits. There are two kinds of deficits—one of that kind which, during Sir John Macdonald's time before Confederation, was created by reckless extravagance and grossly unwarrantable expenditures; the other, such as are attributable to Sir Richard Cartwright, caused by the shrinkage of the revenue in an unprosperous year, and the wise conduct of the Government in recognizing that at such a time people can worst bear increased burdens, and refusing to create a surplus by augmenting the taxation. Sir Richard recognised that returning prosperity would in a short time restore the equilibrum between revenue and expenditure, and had his tariff not been altered at all, that equilibrum would long since have been restored without any necessity for the excessive taxation which is now squeezing ill-gotten surpluses out of the people's industry. The Opposition organs pertinaciously claim that the restoration of the Liberal party would abolish the whole fabric of the National Policy. Nothing can be farther from the truth. One of the fundamental principles held by the Liberal leaders is that permanence and stability are above all things as far as possible to be observed in the tariff regulations of the country, and nothing could justify any radical or extensive disturbance of the conditions under which business and industry have been brought. The policy of a Liberal government succeeding the present would be as a matter of course to abolish the odious and unjust taxes on coal and on bread, which impoverish the people of Ontario and the Maritime provinces without benefitting either the mining or agricultural interests. They would no doubt destroy the sugar monopoly, lower the duty on tea and coffee, and create as nearly as possible what is known as "a free breakfast table," and would in more than one direction transfer a portion of taxation now placed upon articles of common consumption, to those articles properly classed under the head of luxuries, which under the present system escape lightly. They would lop off excrescences which bear hardly on the consumer without corresponding benefit to the producer, and would retain duties without disturbance where experience has shown a beneficial effect, or where removal or alteration would be attended with evil consequences. The increased necessities of the revenue, as well as a regard for the public welfare, would prevent any radical change, but readjustment would be effected to lighten as far as possible the burdens of the people.

Political Notes.

THE Minerve, of Montreal, points out that one-half of our bank capital, or over eighty millions of dollars, lies idle in the banks, and considers such a state of affairs a national evil. A good Tory paper like the Minerve should appeal to the apostles of the N. P. for a prophecy.

THE news, from Tory sources, that Mr. Hurteau, M. P. for l'Assomption, was to be appointed Warden of the St. Vincent Penitentiary, is now contradicted. It seem that the Tory party, finding the chances of electing a successor to Mr. Hurteau on the same side of politics a dubious one, prudently withdrew the nomination.

WE give elsewhere some pertinent remarks from the independent Tory organ at Whitby, which fairly convey the public appreciation of the dastardly personal attacks of the Toronto Mail upon Mr. Blake. We can not, however, regret those attacks, except as a disgrace to journalism, because of the great good they will do to Mr. Blake's cause.

THE Toronto Mail attributes the shooting of President Garfield to the "curse of political patronage." And the Sarnia Observer remarks:—"Yet the Mail took "very kindly to the 'curse' when its "political friends began to use it after "the American fashion, by turning out "Reform office-holders to make room for "Tory applicants."

THE Orange Sentinel, an uncompromising Conservative paper, is amazed at the brazen audacity of the Mail management. It says:—"This attempt of the Mail "people to ride two horses is getting "quite interesting; running a Protestant "paper in the morning and an anti-"Protestant one in the evening; opposing "the Grand Trunk in the morning edition "and favoring it in the evening; making "leagues with its rivals to 'keep up "rates' for the morning editions, and "almost giving its papers away in the "evening. We once saw a yokel who "was trying to ride two horses in a circus-"ring—a trick similar to the Pulptower "act—fall among the sawdust, and the "audience laugh at his discomfiture." The Sentinel may rest assured that the public understand and appreciate the tortuous policy of the Mail thoroughly, and neither Protestants nor Catholics are likely to be humbugged in the least degree by it.

ON Wednesday last at Lachute, Judge Belanger, after a deliberation of nearly once year, decided the Argenteuil election case, unseating the respondent, J. J. C. Abbott, with costs. The acts of corruption were by Jas. Goodwin & Co, Grenville Canal contractors, and their foreman, and acts of intimidation were also declared proven. Mr. Richard White, of the Montreal Gazette, was also declared guilty of corrupt practices, for having given railway tickets to persons to take them to the county to vote for Abbott. It is clear, therefore, that during the whole of last session, while Abbott sat and voted in the House, Dr. Christie was the real representative of the County. Abbott's majority was about sixty, while the number of votes proved to the satisfaction of the judge, whose bias, if any, was not in favor of the Liberal candidate, to have been corruptly influenced, was over one hundred votes. Mr. Abbott is now Solicitor of the Canada Pacific Railway Syndicate, and it is to be hoped, considering his personal relations with members of the Government and his connection with the Syndicate, a sense of decency, if not duty, will prevent him from again becoming a candidate.

Editorial Jottings.

MISS FANNIE PARNELL writes from New Jersey as follows:—"I trust the "patriotic ladies of Toronto will not wait "for me to organize a league, but will go "ahead at once; so that if, as I hope, I "am able to visit Toronto in the fall, I "may find a prosperous ladies' league "already there." We fancy the patriotic ladies of Toronto will find enough to occupy their attention in wrestling with their domestic duties. If any of them have any time or their husbands' money to spare, they will likely find a better use for it than defraying the expenses of the idle adventurers who are by their factious, selfish and seditious conduct, endeavoring to drive Ireland to distraction, and to cripple the efforts of Ireland's real friends to introduce reform and restore prosperity.

TORY NEWSPAPERS are fond of boasting the immaculacy of our Canadian Bench, but when a Judge is compelled to bring the corrupt practices of their party into the light for punishment, they sing quite a different tune. The Montreal Gazette scolds Judge Belanger like an irate fish-wife, for unseating Mr. Abbott, forgetful of the fact that it was the corruption of his friends which was responsible.

DR. BUCKE, of the London Lunatic Asylum, in estimating the mental status of the assassin Guitteau, avers the existence of a class of "moral idiots," to which the would-be murderer belongs. Doubtless Ananias belonged to this class of unfortunate irresponsibles, and Judas Iscariot, and the Impenitent Thief. Dr. Bucke is right in supposing the race not to be extinct, as is proved by the Guitteau tragedy, and a villainous article in the Port Hope News of last week.

AN employee of the Dominion Government, at Ottawa, secured the contract to furnish a new-fangled gate for the locks of the new Welland Canal, and a trial of them has resulted in showing that they are as immovable as the masonry to which they are attached. An effort has been made to remedy the difficulty by the use of a Turbine water-wheel, but this failed to induce a movement. A wheel of greater power is to be applied, and if this proves unavailing the canal cannot be opened this year, thus entailing untold loss on our shipping interests. But then hangers-on must be rewarded at any cost.

On Wednesday of last week a fire broke out in what is known as Mowry's old saw mill, at Minden, and in a very short time was entirely consumed. The boarding houses near by also took fire and were destroyed. The mill had not been running for some time. The fire was either caused caused by a spark from a passing boat or from Green & Ellis' mill. The mill was the property of Mr. Hilliard, M. P., of Peterborough.

On Tuesday of last week, Mr. Frederick Neale, of the firm of Neale & Deans, wine and liquor merchants, Oshawa, suddenly dropped dead. On Thursday of last week the neighborhood of Colborne harbor was thrown into a state of excitement, by the sad news of a little daughter of David Kerneghan had been drowned in the mill pond of Niles Bros. The children had been in the habit of building rafts and sailing on the pond and the child must have been on one of these excursions, when the timber composing the raft became separated and she fell into the water with the above result.

On Sunday, the 3rd inst., Mrs. Samuel Lyle, of Galway, committed suicide by browning herself in the Burnt River. She left the house some time before daybreak, and her body was found during the forenoon in the eddy at the foot of Johnston's Rapids, over a mile from her home. She had been for some time afflicted with that terrible disease cancer in the stomach, and lately showed symptoms of mental aberration, under the influence of which it is supposed she committed the rash act.

A FOOL ONCE MORE.—"For ten years my wife was confined to her bed with such a complication of ailments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbug stuff. Six months ago I saw a U. S. flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more. I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her, she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it cost me only two dollars. Such folly pays.—H. W., Detroit, Mich.—Free Press. 29-2t

On Wednesday last, says the West Durham News, the Rev. J. Little, Presbyterian Minister, at Bowmanville, was presented with $134 in gold, by members of his congregation. At the Sabbath School Pic-nic held on Tuesday, the scholars presented him with a handsome Travelling Case and a likeness of himself in an elegant frame for his aged mother. The Rev. gentleman left for New York on Friday, from which place he sails for Europe on Saturday. We wish him a pleasant trip and a safe return.

A VEXED CLERGYMAN.—even the patience of Job would become exhausted were he a preacher and endeavoring to interest his audience while they were keeping up an incessant coughing, making it impossible for him to be heard. Yet, how very easy can all this be avoided by simply using Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Trial bottle given away at Tayler & Macdonald's Drug Store.

A four-year old son of Dr. Bell, of Lakefield, had a narrow escape from drowning in Stoney Lake, on Thursday of last week, while with a camping party. He fell into deep water, while fishing, and had sunk for the third time, when his brother Allan, aged 11, gallantly plunged in to the rescue, and diving, secured the little fellow and brought him safely ashore, where he was revived and properly attended to. The rescuer is entitled to recognition for his brave and noble act.

On Saturday of last week, Mr. John Muntz of the township of Glamorgan, was leading a savage bull from one place to another when the yoke or some arrangement by which he usually controlled the animal gave way, and the savage brute immediately turned on him, goring him in a frightful manner, tearing the lower part of his body very badly, also inflicting a gash about two inches in length in the upper and inner part of the left thigh, barely escaping the main artery. A man who was present at the time set a large dog on the infuriated beast and succeeded in driving him off.

WOMAN'S TRUE FRIEND.—A friend in need is a friend indeed. This none can deny, especially when assistance is rendered when one is sorely afflicted with disease, more particularly those complaints and weaknesses so common to our female population. Every woman should know that Electric Bitters are woman's true friend, and will positiverl restore her to health, even when all other remedies fail. A single trial always proves our assertion. They are pleasant to the taste and only cost fifty cents a bottle. Agents, Taylor & Macdonald.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week, the premises known as the Yankee Mills, at Lindsay, was completely destroyed by fire. Some thousands of telegraph poles and railroad ties lying between the mill and the track awaiting shipment were burned. The fire was said to have been started by a spark from a passing steamer lodging about the premises. The Post says the mill was insured in the Lancashire company for $6,000, and until Saturday last the Royal Insurance Co. held a policy for $3,000, but at that time the company allowed it to expire, which for them at least has proved to be a fortunate circumstance.

HONORED AND BLEST.—When a board of eminent phyiscians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispenced with, many were skeptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.—Democrat. 29-2t

A letter from Mr. W. Coe, one of the Souris District party, has been received by the Millbrook Messenger dated Fair View Farm, June 8, 1881, in which the writer informs Mr. W. Fallis, to whom the letter is addressed, that he has forty acres ploughed, fenced up, and summer firewood in. On the Saturday night previous, they were visited with a real Nor-western storm, blowing down several of their tents, and leaving most of them like drowned rats—considerably dampening their ideas, on awakening. A number of laughable and remarkable incidents occurred. For the rest of the night it was not found comfortable to again retire to rest. He states that Hank Croker was found hanging on to a stump to save himself from being blown away with his tent.

The Orillia Times says:—On Monday morning last John Nolan, an inmate of the Asylum, attacked on of the attendants, Mr. M. H. Duffy, with a hoe and inflicted a wound which it is feared will prove fatal. The Superintendent had ordered Duffy to take Nolan and have some long grass cut away from near one of the paths at the rear of the Asylum building. Nolan was engaged hoeing at the time. Duffy approached him and in his usual kindly way said, "Come, John, get your scythe and let's go and cut some grass up here." Nolan kept on hoeing without answering or looking up. Gardener Jackson was in the vicinity picking currants at the time, and Duffy stooped down and engaged in conversation with him for a moment, not wishing to provoke the idiot with over persistency. While in that position he observed Nolan rapidly walking towards him, but not suspecting anything he was unprepared for the attack which quickly followed. As soon as he was within reach the idiot turned and dealt Duffy a fearful blow on the head with the edge of the hoe, cutting through a felt hat and penetrating to the scull, inflicting a frightful gash several inches in length. So vigorous was the blow that the handle broke, and with the end in his hand he renewed the assault, striking the prostrate attendant several times before he could be restrained. Duffy was immediately removed and such remedies applied as were necessary, after which he was conveyed home and now lies in a very precarious condition. When Nolan was next discovered he was unconcernedly sharpening the scythe preparatory to engaging in the very work his victim asked him to do. He was told he had killed Duffy, when he immediately replied that he was glad of it, that he had been chasing him around for a week with an engine and he was not going to put up with it any longer. To every attempt to get from him an expression of regret or sympathy a similar answer was made.

HOW WISTAR'S BALSAM CURES.—From Seymour Thatcher, M. D., of Hermon, N. Y. "Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry gives universal satisfaction. It seems to cure a cough by loosening and cleansing the lungs, and allaying irritation, thus removing the cause, instead of drying up the cough and leaving the cause behind. I consider the Balsam the best cough medicine with which I am acquainted." 50 cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by all druggists.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency, and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is of acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it. The test of half a century has proven its certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

Manhattan Feed!

—FOR—

HORSES, CATTLE, MILCH COWS, SHEEP AND PIGS.

IT is a source of health, because it keeps the organs in a natural healty tone. It acts as a relish, promotes perfect digestion, and purifies the blood, thereby keeping the coat in a free and glossy condition. TRY IT! BUY IT!

READ THESE RECOMMENDATIONS:

Toronto, March 4th, 1881.

We have used the "Manhattan Feed" for six weeks, reducing our oats one-quarter and using no bran. We have ordered more, considering the system of feeding a good one, having saved about $15 per month on the feed of 12 horses, their condition being fully kept up.

MESSRS R. W. SMITH & Co., MONTREAL:

Gentlemen,—We have used the Manhattan Feed this winter with our horses, one of which we have hitherto found it difficult to keep fat;—but since using your feed he has picked up and become remarkably well conditioned, so much so that it has been the remark of the townspeople how well our horses looked. Apart from this, we find that we are not obliged to feed as many oats as before; and have great pleasure in recommending its general use.

Yours etc.,

Peterboro, Jan. 4th, 1881.

Messrs Taylor & McDonald, Agents.—Dear Sirs:—The Manhattan Feed bought from you has not only done all you professed for it, but much more. Before feeding it to our hens we were only getting on an average two eggs per week from each hen, now we average five to six. The difference it has made in our sheep one would have to see in order to credit. I would advise all interested in getting their cattle in good condition to get a bag. It has more than paid me its cost twice over.

Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 21, 1881.

Liberal Meeting.

A meeting of the Liberal Electors of West Peterborough will be held in Bradburn's Hall, on Monday evening next, at which steps will be taken to fill the vacancy created by the lamented death of the late W. H. Scott, M. P. P. A full attendance of all in harmony with the Liberal party is requested. In the hasty issuance of notices, no doubt many of our friends have been overlooked, and these will please accept this intimation to be present on the occasion.

The Coming Contest.

The Review, with much unction, calls the attention of "the more moderate of "its political opponents"—notorious as it is for modesty itself!—to articles published in its columns in 1879, in which it advised the Tories of West Durham to make a virtue of necessity and allow Mr. Blake to be elected on Mr. Burke's resignation. Of course the West Durham Tories acted solely on the Review's suggestion! The fact is, Mr. Blake had never a majority in West Durham of less than 500. The Tories had tried one man after another in their party candidature, one defeat following another, till not a man could be found to accept the thankless task of making a sham opposition to Mr. Blake for the purpose of fattening the West Durham tavern-keepers. They simply refused to be bled any longer. But does the Review recollect when Mr. Geo. A. Cox was fairly and honorably elected member for West Peterborough in 1875 by a majority of 45? How generous, how magnanimous was the conduct of this crafty and malicious organist then! A frivolous technicality was laid hold of to oust Mr. Cox from a seat to which he had been fairly elected. Two notorious bummers without character or reputation, were suborned to do the dirty work, and by the aid of these vile instruments, the county was put to the expense and turmoil of a new election, and the creature's machinations succeeded. The back-door dictator of the Review now comes to the front and points to his generosity to Mr. Blake as a claim on which he may slip into a seat which the electors of the riding deny him on his own merits. He has a cheek the size of a house.

Prizes of the Party.

Smacking his lips with the relish of recent loot, with his spirit soothed and chastened by the pleasant jingle of the Dominion dollars in his pockets, and patriotically alive to the sense of what a fine thing it is to have a brother-in-law in the House of Commons, Mr. Census Commissioner Carnegie rolls up his journalistic sleeves and discusses the "spoils system" with as much holy horror of the evils of patronage as if he was not himself fattening on the same, like a surreptitious steer in a neighbor's clover field. The shooting of President Garfield suggests to him the alarming tendency to pursue the "spoils system" exhibited by Mr. Mowat's Government! And he gravely concludes that "their (sic) can be no question but "that year after year our governments "are coming more and more under the "control of the office-seeking element of "the country, and that the sooner all "good men unite to stamp out this "dangerous element in all governments "of the people by the people the better." Talk of Satan rebuking sin, after such an exhibition as this from this gorged self-seeker! And profoundly oblivious to the existence of a Government at Ottawa, the virtuous moralist goes on to conjure up this alarming picture:—"Since Mr. "Mowat came into power, the appointment of the following officers have all "been taken out of non-political hands "and placed at the disposal of the Pro"vincial Government, and are therefore "held out as political prizes to those who "do efficient party service, viz: 1 Jailor; "5 Division Court Clerks; 5 Division "Court Baliffs; 2 Inspectors of Taverns; "6 License Commissioners; total, 19." Of course no one knows better than the writer of the above that the appointments of the officers of the Courts and the License Act, whose numbers he multiplies, was taken into the hands of the Government to satisfy public opinion, which cried out at the nepotism and abuses which followed the old way of leaving the appointment of these officers, paid by the public, in the hands of Judges and Sheriffs, on one hand, and to ensure the perfect working of the License Act, free from local influences, on the other hand. No attempt was made, however, to practice the "spoils" system, as was done by the friends of the Review. Conservative officials remain undisturbed, and even one of the License Commissioners appointed by the Local Government is a Conservative. There was none of that nasty Yankee business by which the late Weights and Measures Inspector was removed to make way for Mr. Cahill, nor has the Ontario Government practised in any way that unscrupulous system by which Reform officials, from Lieut.-Governors downwards, have been cut down to make way for Tories clamoring for office. If the people want to "stamp out this dangerous office-seeking element," let them beware of placing the expert political forager of the Review in a position of public temptation.

A Spot on the Tupper Sun.

The Sherbrooke Gazette says it is confidently asserted in political circles in that constituency that Sir A. T. Galt, who has returned from his unenviable and unhonored (though expensive to the country) post at London, intends to offer himself as a candidate for the representation of Sherbrooke, which it is anticipated will be shortly made vacant by the appointment of Mr. Brooks, the present incumbent, to the Bench. If this be so, and taken with other circumstances it is by no means unlikely, it would indicate that Sir Charles Tupper is likely to fail in his aspirations for the leadership as successor to Sir John Macdonald, and that with all his ability, and he is undoubtedly the ablest man in the Conservative party, the leaders do not favor his assumption of the dictatorship. It has long been whispered in circles the best informed that Sir John, recognizing the fact that Tupper's leadership would involve the withdrawal of the best elements of the party strength, has been casting about for a more suitable political heir. Sir Samuel Tilley's chances would be better, but he unfortunately has lost much of the strength which once attached to him on the ground of personal uprightness, and has given too widely recognized proof that his good manners have been corrupted by evil communications. Sir Alexander Campbell could not lead a party in the House of Commons. The veteran chief knows how superficial a man Mr. Dalton McCarthy is, and as for the canaille of the party, the Plumbs, Langevins, Boultbees and Rykerts, no doubt each of them feels within him the full capacity to govern, but, alas, their merits are not recognized by the voting rank and file. It is not unlikely then that Sir John may desire to see his party led worthily, according to his lights, and that Sir Alex. Galt may be the man whom he has chosen as his successor. There is no object in concealing the fact that Sir John Macdonald's day as a political leader is done. Unfortunately, and we say it with all sincerity and with deep regret, his physical strength is never again likely to allow him, with any justice to himself, to bear the onerous burden of party leadership, and the time of his retirement must not be far distant. With his extreme protectionist notions, and loose ideas of the loyalty of the Canadian people to the British Crown, we should be sorry to see Sir Alexander at the head of a Government, but as his party will be sent into Opposition by the fates at the earliest opportunity the people have of assisting them, it does not much matter. He would undoubtedly be a more creditable frontespiece for the Conservative party than Dr. Tupper.

The Conservative Convention.

A convention of a number of leading Conservatives, called by circular, was held yesterday afternoon at the old Town Hall, when the following names were submitted to be ballotted for:—Messrs. J. F. Dennistoun, H. H. Smith, Dr. Kincaid, A. P. Poussette, John Carnegie and H. Waddell. It was, however, decided to adjourn till Tuesday evening, to await the action of the Liberal convention to be held on Monday, with the understanding that should Mr. Geo. A. Cox receive the nomination he would be allowed to be returned unopposed. This course is a decidedly commendable one, as both Mr. Cox's political principles and his personal interests make him a desirable representative, and should he be nominated on Monday, which is quite probable, he will without doubt be elected. If the Conservative leaders choose to save the county the trouble and expense of an election, by facilitating Mr. Cox's return, they will deserve credit for their good sense and moderation.

Editorial Jottings.

Mr. Sidney Bellingham is spoken of as the probable Liberal candidate in Argenteuil, in opposition to the Hon. J. C. Abott, unseated, who will probably offer himself for re-election.

Concerning the rumoured approaching departure of H. R. H, the Princess Louise for Canada, an enquiry at the office of the Allan Line was answered by the statement that no application had been made for her accommodation on any of the vessels of that line.

The Dominion Government have given another singular proof of their regard for the motto "Canada for the Canadians." They have ordered from a New York firm, ten millions of postal cards, the printing of which might just as well have been performed in Canada.

Ald. Scott, who is a member of the Civil Service, has been notified by the Minister of Public Works that he must resign his position as a city alderman, in accordance with the Order-in-Council recently passed prohibiting civil servants from occupying civic positions.

The Review copies the Mail's lying report of the demonstration at St. John, in honor of Mr. Blake. The Ottawa organ of the Government, the Citizen, says:—"Mr. Blake seems to have met with a cordial reception at St. John. His meeting was a success as far as numbers were concerned."

We congratulate Mr. O'Beirne on the handsome appearance of the first number of the Napanee Express, issued under his auspices. It is a handsome sheet, well printed on good paper, and the contents evince care, taste and discrimination. Mr. O'Beirne's maiden effort at the editorial quill is most creditable to him, and we have no doubt under his management the Express will become a power in its district. Politically the Express is "sound upon the goose."

CALCUTT'S LINE OF STEAMERS.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

The steamer Golden-Eye, of Calcutt's line, which has been towing the logs of Messrs. Rathbun & Son's big drive through Rice Lake to the Trent, for the past two weeks, returned to Peterboro' on Friday morning, having been relieved by the King-Fisher, to resume her regular trips to Harwood, Idyl-Wild and Hastings, and to convey pic-nic parties down the Otonabee, &c. Upon her arrival at the wharf she was detained by order of the Government for further and more rigid inspection, owing to the complaint of some maliciously-disposed persons; in consequence of which she was unable to convey a large number of excursionists from Monaghan to Idyl-Wild, where every preparation had been made for their comfort and enjoyment. Mr. G. P. Lauder, Government Surveyor and Measuring Inspector, arrived by the noon train on the Midland Railway and proceeded to perform his duty. He was considerable surprised when he beheld the Golden-Eye, and was informed that she was the steamer referred to in the complaint. After a thorough examination and obtaining the measurements he took his leave, with thanks for the courtesy extended and the ready assistance rendered by the employees, and regretted that he had been the willing cause of loss to the proprietor by this detention, which he stated was owing to a misrepresentation to the Government. He pronounced the Golden-Eye a fine boat, thoroughly suited to these waters and well adapted for the purposes she was intended, and as carrying out all the requirements of the Government. From and after this date the Golden-Eye will run her regular trips as advertised.

THE RECENT EXCURSION FROM BELLEVILLE.

The Belleville Intelligencer of Saturday says:—"The committee who had in charge the recent excursion under the auspices of the Bridge Street Methodist Church, to Peterborough, were so well pleased with the attentiveness and courtesy of the Grand Junction Railway officials, that they have forwarded the following letter to the Traffic Agent of that road:

"Belleville, July 14th, 1881.

"A. White, Esq.,

"General Traffic Agent Midland and G. J. R. R. Peterborough.

"Dear Sir.—The committee managing the excursion given on the 8th instant over the Grand Junction Railway under the auspices of the Bridge Street Methodist Church of this city, have instructed me to convey to you an expression of their appreciation of the assistance and courtesy of yourself as well as of the other officials and employees of the road on that occasion. The difficulties that usually arise in arranging the details of such an excursion, and the great tax imposed upon the whole staff in assuming so much additional labor and responsibility are in a measure at least, realized, yet in the whole affair from its first inception to its conclusion the committee acknowledge that the most courteous consideration was always given their requests, and the utmost solicitude manifested on the part of yourself and the other officials of the road that every contingency that might arise to impair the pleasure or success of the excursion might be provided against.

"It is gratifying to be able to advise you that the committe are in every way satisfied with the result of the undertaking, and they deem it only proper and fair to acknowledge that their success is very largely attributed to the unwearied attention and gentlemanly consideration of yourself and the other officials and employees of the company.

"It is hoped that the fact that excursionists unanimously expressed themselves as fully satisfied with the provisions made to secure their safety, comfort and pleasure, may afford some compensation to yourself and others whose efforts secured them.

"Yours very truly,
"A. N. Reid,
"Secretary."

The Toronto News says that the standard of society at Ottawa is for the guests at a vice-regal ball to get drunk and want to kiss one of the ladies-in-waiting. The standard of society at St. Thomas—as set by the Premier of the Dominion—is for a guest at a ball to get drunk and chase the servant girls up and down the corridor in an attemp to kiss them. —London Advertiser. Our northern contemporary is unfair. Does the conduct of an Ottawa gentleman (?) fix the standard of society for this city? Most St. Thomas people think not.—St. Thomas Journal.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday's Meeting—Finance Report—Appointment of School Trustee—Desultory Work.

The Council met on Monday evening, when there were present,—His Worship the Mayor in the chair, and Councillors Richardson, Rutherford, Yelland, Paterson, Chamberlain, Kelly, McNaughton and Cahill.

The minutes of the two previous meetings were read and confirmed.

The Clerk read a notification from the Secretary-Treasurer of the School Board, of the vacancy at the Board created by Mr. Dennistoun's retirement; also a requisition from the same for the amount required for school purposes, being $8,324.

In answer to Mr. Chamberlain the Clerk said this was about $200 more than last year, and the matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Clerk read a statement of the license fees of the year, from the Provincial Secretary, showing $3,044.61 allotted to the town at the first division, and $210.39 at the second, or altogether $3,255. Referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication from the Fire Brigade stated that the firemen had expended some $400 in fitting up and furnishing the Fire Hall, which improvement became the property of the town, and asked the town to defray a portion of the expense. Received and referred to the Finance Committee.

Accounts of J. R. Stratton, $3; D. G. Heathorn, $3; and H. Best, $6.60, were referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Carnegie was heard in reference to the proposed visit of the Press Association, asking the Council for a grant for the purpose of driving the visitors round the town. Mr. Stratton and himself, for the Review and EXAMINER, proposed to do what they thought would be necessary for further entertainment. He thought the money would be well expended.

Mr. Stratton thought it would be to the advantage of the town if the visiting pressmen saw Peterborough to advantage. They would be writing an account of the trip in the several journals, and it would be a good investment to have a favorable impression on them.

After some discussion, on motion of Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Richardson, the matter was referred to the Finance Committee with power to act, the sum to granted not to exceed $25.

A communication was read from Mr. Blank, enclosing circulars, and offering to sell a road-making machine to the town for $180. The machine was guaranteed to grade one-half mile of road per day for town purposes, and it would be subjected to a ten days trial. The city of Belleville had purchased one.

The Mayor said he had written to the Mayor of Belleville to ask information, and read the reply, which stated that their machine had been subjected to a thorough and perfect test and worked extremely well. It graded streets at one-half the cost of ordinary construction, and they would not be without it for any consideration.

Referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Paterson the following report of the Finance Committee was received and adopted :—

The Finance Committee report and recommend payment of the following accounts :—

(1) Toker & Co	$32 80
Wm. Hamilton	4 75

(2) In reference to the account of John McLennan for work done by him on streets and bridges in 1880, and find by pay list No. 6, of that year that he worked with his team for three-quarters of a day, and that his name is entered therein as entitled to $2.25 but which he did not receive. We also find that the late Treasurer was allowed credit for the same as having been paid by him at the final settlement of accounts between him and the town. We therefore recommend that Mr. McClelland be paid $2.25 and that the Clerk request Mr. Edwards to refund the same to the town.

(3) As to Mr. Garvey's application for damages we have obtained the Solicitor's opinion by which it is seen that the town is not liable, we therefore cannot recommend payment of the same or any portion thereof.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed.) W. PATERSON, JR., Chairman.

Peterboro', July 18th, 1881.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that Mr. Poussette be appointed to fill the vacancy at the School Board created by Mr. Dennistoun's resignation.

Mr. Cahill said he had a resolution to appoint Dr. O'Sullivan to the vacancy. Since he had come here he had been told that there was some doubt of his eligibility, but he was satified that he was fully qualified. The Roman Catholics paid taxes towards the support of the Collegiate Institute, and the fact that they were Roman Catholics should not debar them from being represented. It was the principle in this country that where people were called upon to pay taxes they should have the right to exercise the franchise in respect of those taxes. Owing to the fact that he believed a majority of the Board were in favor of appointing Mr. Poussette, he would not move his motion, but he gave notice that if he were here next year as a member of the Council and a vacancy occurred he would move in the matter.

Mr. Rutherford said he had nothing against Dr. O'Sullivan.

Mr. Chamberlain said when Mr. Cahill claimed a seat at the School Board on the ground of contributing to the Institute it was all very well, if it only interfered with the Institute, but the Board was a joint one, and it had full control of the common schools of the town. The Roman Catholics of the town did not contribute to the Common Schools and could not reasonably expect to be placed in a position to exercise control over them.

Mr. Paterson said he would do away with the High School altogether. If any one wanted more than the English grammar let them pay for it.

Mr. Cahill said he was not against the Institute. He thought it was a credit to the town and he was proud of it.

Mr. Rutherford made some explanations in regard to the town water-cart, in reference to a paragraph in a contemporary.

Mr. Yelland complained that the streets were not watered alike. The cart came to the Post Office and turned around. He had been forced to pay the special rate against his will, and paid more taxes on this account than any of them, and he was bound to see that he had his rights.

Mr. Chamberlain asked who gave authority to the Chairman of the Fire, Water and Gas Committee to order a new box for the cart.

Mr. Rutherford said they had authority.

The Mayor said the Committee had been instructed some time ago to make such repairs as they thought necessary.

Mr. Chamberlain said there was no authority in that to go to the expense of buying a new box. He protested in the name of the ratepayers against the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, or any other Committee, incurring expenditures without the authority of the Council.

Mr. Rutherford drew the attention of the Street Inspector to the the fact that defective cedars were being put down under the new planking. The Inspector said some of the cedars were rotten at the ends, but that part was not measured. No defective parts were used except for blocking.

Mr. Richardson said it was very important that the cedars should be sound or they would not hold the nails.

A discussion ensued on the subject of riding round town, introduced by Mr. Yelland.

The Mayor said the only riding about that had been done was on the 1st July, when the conveyances were supplied free to the firemen, and the other occasion was the funeral of Mr. Scott, at which each man would pay his own expenses. It was not right that a wrong impression should go abroad as to this matter.

The Fire Brigade matter again cropped up incidentally, when

Mr. Rutherford said everything in the hall became the property of the town. The firemen had gone to great expense, of which the town would thus get the advantage. They had given up a whole year's pay for each man, and the Council should treat them with liberality.

Mr. Richardson said last year the Council gave the Firemen $100 and this year they got nothing, so that they could well afford to make the a grant for their hall.

The Council adjourned for three weeks.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

On Saturday evening a pleasant incident occurred at a meeting of Peterborough Court of Foresters, Mr. W. J. Larmour being the victim. It having been learned that he was about to leave town, his friends in the Court decided to give him a parting souvenir, and at this meeting Mr. Larmour was called up by Chief Ranger Watson, and presented with an elegant and valuable gold chain and locket, which was accompanied by the following

ADDRESS.

Bro. W. J. Larmour:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The members of Court Peterborough No. 29, C. O. F., having learned of your contemplated removal from amongst us, take this opportunity of testifying the regard and esteem in which you are held by them, and their regret at the loss by the Court of a worthy member, and by the community of a good citizen.

As a slight memento of the many pleasant hours mutually enjoyed in the communications of the Court, and as a souvenir of the pleasant relations which have existed in our intercourse as citizens, we beg your acceptance of this chain and locket, and trust that you may live long in health and prosperity to wear it.

We trust that in the future, wherever your lot may be cast, your career may be attended with all happiness and prosperity, and feel sure that the same genial, kindly and upright qualities which have distinguished your relations with your surroundings, in and out of the Court in Peterborough, will ever command for you the same warm regard which causes us to so deeply regret your removal from our midst.

On behalf of the members of the Court,

H. W. WATSON, W.C.R.

REPLY.

Bro. Larmour, in replying, said he was taken by surprise, and did not feel equal to expressing himself as he would like to. He thanked them very heartily for their beautiful and valuable present, and he warmly appreciated the cordial and brotherly good wishes contained in the address. It was a source of much gratification to him in leaving Peterborough to know that he carried with him sentiments so kindly and so encouraging. He had taken a warm interest in the Court, and would always remember with pleasure the associations connected with it. He was about leaving for Manitoba, where he hoped to better himself, and he trusted their good wishes for his future, for which he thanked them, would be realized. He hoped his lot in the west would be cast among Foresters, and if he did not find a Court there it would be his pleasure to endeavor to have one established. He wished the Court a continued career of prosperity and usefulness.

WARSAW.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On the evening previous to the departure of the Rev. C. Watch and family for their new field of labor, about one hundred friends, representing all the denominations of the village, met at the residence of Miss Lukey, and presented Mrs. Watch with a purse of $40, accompanied with the following address :—

DEAR MADAM,—On this the eve of your departure from amongst us, we feel it our duty to pay you a well merited and loving farewell. Although your sojourn with us has been short, your many virtues have earned for you a higher compliment than we can, in this short address, find words to express.

Accept this purse of money as a small token of our esteem and affection for yourself and family, and our earnest prayer is that wherever you and your dear partner's ministerial lot may be cast, it may be your unspeakable happiness to enjoy the benign smiles and favor of Him, under whose eye not so much as a sparrow falls to the ground unnoticed.

The Rev. Mr. Watch made a suitable reply, expressive of the pleasure and profit of their sojourn and work in Warsaw. A very pleasant evening was spent together, mingled with singing and prayer, and the wishing of much God-speed.

RAILWAY NOTES.

The President and other officials of the Midland, were at Midland on Tuesday, inspecting the new works of the company there.

The work of construction of an independent line of telegraph on the Grand Junction line, to connect Peterborough and Belleville, is to be commenced at once.

The first sod on the Toronto and Ottawa Railway was turned at Madoc, on Monday, by Miss O'Flynn, daughter of the Reeve. Mr. A. F. Wood, a director, was present. Mr W. C. Nunn was also present on behalf of Mr. Gooderham, President of the road. The two contractors, Messrs. Wood and Parr, who have taken a contract for five miles, were present.

Mr. Wm. Gooderham advertizes for 100 men to work at grading between Peterborough and Perth, on the line of the T. & O. R. R.

The Globe announces that the Toronto and Nipissing Railway has been sold to the Grand Trunk.

Mr. Hay, C.E., of this town, under direction of Chief Engineer Blackwell, is at Belleville making preliminary arrangements for the erection of a large elevator at the G. J. docks.

The Toronto Evening News announces that a consignment of steel rails for Messrs. Gooderham & Worts, left England last week. The firm proposes laying another rail and making the Nipissing road a wide guage. The old rails will not be disturbed, so that the purchasing of much extra rolling stock will not be necessary. Arrangements have been made with the Midland Railway, whereby the Nipissing will run on that line to Midland. A visit was paid to the Midland harbour, and an inspection proved that it would be large enough to meet all the requirements of the road.

The Traffic Returns of the Midland and Grand Junction Railways for the week ending July 7th, were :—

MIDLAND RAILWAY.—Passengers and Mails, $2315.05; Freight, $5290.35; Total, $7605.40, as compared with $6294.73, for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $1310.67; and the aggregate traffic to date is $164109.85, being an increase of $19390.44 over 1880.

GRAND JUNCTION RAILWAY.—Passengers and Mails, $775.39; Freight, $1166.41; Total, $1941.80, as compared with $888.89, for the corresponding week of 1880, being an increase of $1052.91; and the aggregate traffic to date is $9127.00, being an increase of $5089.58 over 1880.

PREPARED FOR SPRING.—After a long, severe winter the system needs cleansing of impurities. Nature must be assisted to recuperate, the Liver must be made to act, and all surplus bile and impurities carried off. Zopess, from Brazil, acts as a gentle purgative. It is just introduced into this country. The remarkable results of a few doses are most suprising. Ask J. D. Tully or T. Ruston for a 10 cent sample, and try Zopess, the most powerful remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion. Constipation and Biliousness ever introduced in this country. 44-1y

THE HIGHWAY COW.

The hue of her hide was dusky brown,
Her belly white bone and her neck was slim,
One horn was turned up and the other turned down,
She was keen of vision and long of limb;
With a Roman nose and a short stump tail,
And ribs like hoops on a home-made pail.

Many a mark did her body bear;
She had been a target for all things known;
On many a scar the husky hair
Would grow no more where it once had grown;
Many a passionate, parting shot
Had left upon her a lasting spot.

Many and many a well-aimed stone,
And many a brickbat of goodly size,
And many a cudgel swiftly thrown,
Had brought the tears to her loving eyes;
Or had bounded off her bony back,
With a noise like the sound of a rifle crack.

Many a day had she passed in the pound
For helping herself to her neighbor's corn;
Many a cowardly cur and hound
Had been trundled on her crumpled horn;
Many a tea-pot and old tin pail
Had the farmer's boys tied to her time-worn tail.

Old Deacon Gray was a pious man,
Though sometimes tempted to be profane,
When many a weary mile he ran
To drive her out of his growing grain;
Sharp were the tricks she used to play
To get her fill and get away.

She knew when the deacon went to town;
She wisely watched him when he went by;
He never passed her without a frown
And an evil gleam in each angry eye;
He would crack his whip in a surly way,
And drive along in his "one horse shay."

Then at his homestead she loved to call,
Lifting his bars with her crumpled horn;
Nimbly scaling the garden wall,
Helping herself to to his standing corn;
Eating his cabbages, one by one,
Hurrying home when her work was done.

His human passions were quick to rise,
And striding forth with a savage cry,
With fury blazing from both his eyes,
As lightnings flash in a summer sky,
Redder and redder his face would grow,
And after the creature he would go.

Over the garden, round and round,
Breaking his pear and his apple trees;
Trampling his melons into the ground,
Overturning his hives of bees;
Leaping him angry and badly stung,
Wishing the old cow's neck was wrung.

The mosses grew on the garden wall;
The years went by with their work and play,
The boys of the village grew strong and tall,
And the grey-haired farmers passed away.
One by one as the red leaves fall,
But the highway cow outlived them all.

Blasting Stumps.

Mr. E. Tanner, writing to the weekly Star, gives his experience on this subject as follows:

SIR,—For the benefit of those wishing to remove stumps from their land I will state my experience and observations as follows:—Some years since, wishing to remove from a ten acre lot many large pine stumps, and being accustomed to blasting rock I attempted to do the same with the stumps, but by reason of the blast diffusing its force so readily through the open grain of the wood failed to effect my object. I then of sheet zinc formed cartridges with the blasting powder, and one end of the fuse to be used enclosed therein. Then using a 1½ inch auger I placed the cartridge in as central a part of the stump as possible, tamping it firmly in with coarse sand or brick dust, when I succeeded in so blasting them that many from two to four feet in diameter were wholly used for stove wood, and the land entirely freed from them. While proceeding with this work I learned that a few miles from my place dynamite was being used for the same purpose, and therefore proceeded at once to learn the process and expense incident thereto, when I was fully convinced that the process which I originated was far preferable both as to expense and safety of practice, with quite as great success.

To form cartridges a sheet of zinc (30 inch) cut 4 by 5 inches, makes 128 (old tin or zinc from under a stove might answer); to form for use with 1½ inch auger, use a 1½ inch hard wood pin held with its endupright; wrap the zinc snugly around, closing it in upon the end of pin, then remove and nearly fill with powder, inserting the fuse and a light wad of paper close in the end, which will hold all in place ready for use; the above number would cost about $3.50. While the charge for each dynamite cartridge with fuse and detonating cap to explode them was then 85c.

The Cost of Feeding Sheep.

The Massachusetts Ploughman, in reply to a correspondent, gives a detailed statement of the amount of hay, &c., consumed by a sheep, in an ordinary New England winter of five months. Such calculations by Canadian farmers would be very beneficial. Why should not every man know the proximate profit or loss in every branch of his business. A sheep will eat 3 per cent. of its live weight in good hay, or its equivalent daily. Giving then to each sheep, of small size, say 75 lbs., 1½ lbs. of prime fine hay, which is 2 per cent. of its weight amounting to 225 lbs. for 150 days of winter, which, allowing for the hay $10 per ton, would be $1.12½. The other one per cent. should be made up of corn, whole or cracked; of this ½ a lb. should be fed daily; and would amount to 75 lbs., added to 225 lbs. of hay, making 300 lbs consumed. The required amount of straw for bedding will make up the additional half per cent. The total expense would be hay, $1.12½; corn, 85cts; straw, 30cts; or $2.87½ for a winter of 150 days. If The winter be six months or 180 days, requiring feeding, one-fifth of the above amount will have to be added, making $3.45.

The Evil of Overstocking Pastures.

The overstocking of land is one of the surest and quickest ways of ruining pastures. It is an every-day thing with many farmers, who cannot be made to believe that they are getting the full benefit of a pasture unless the grass is eaten off a little faster than it has time to grow; consequently, all who put this method in practice always have bare pastures and poor cattle.

The advantage to be derived from allowing the grass to gain on the cattle during the growing season are many, some of which are the following: Cattle kept growing all the time come to maturity at the proper age. Animals kept constantly on bare pastures never mature properly; those kept on good pastures do not have to work day and night to satisfy a craving appetite, or use up all their food in building up a system continually worn down by labor and semi-starvation.

A good covering of grass is a protection to the land in warm weather and protects the young grass from the bad effects of cold dry weather between the rains or in winter, so that new grass will be growing under a covering of the old, when that on bad ground will be sometimes literally starved to death. Old and new grass, when eaten together, is better for cattle than all new, while the seeding of the matured grasses keeps up the full variety of those kinds native to the soil. Consequently, pastures thus treated produce more food for stock during the year than those kept continually eaten down to the bare earth.

The Manufacture of Butter.

W. T. Carrington England, writes as follows:—In describing shortly the details of successful butter-making, we will first mention a few of the causes of inferior quality—(1) a want of cleanliness in dealing with the milk, and of suitable dairy rooms for setting the milk well-ventilated and free from any strong odours; (2) leaving the cream so long on the milk that it becomes sour; (3) not churning often enough, churning at wrong temperatures, or too fast, and not stopping soon enough when the butter begins to come; (4) not getting out all the buttermilk, or leaving too much water mixed with the butter; (5) over salting or using imperfectly mixed coarse and inferior salt; (6) working the butter with the hands; (7) want of tidiness in preparing and sending it to market; (8) feeding cows on turnips or other strong flavoured food, or giving them foul water or injudicious driving of the cows before milking.

"The milk, when brought from the cow, is carefully strained and put in shallow pans, from 2 to 4 inches deep, made of well-tinned iron, glazed earthenware, or glass, all materials which are not porous, and can be kept perfectly sweet by the use of hot water. The pans are set in a dairy the temperature of which in winter should not sink much below 50°, and in summer should be kept as cool as may be. The room should be well ventilated, and no strong odours of meat, vegetables, or smell from drains, should be permitted. The cream should be carefully skimmed off at twenty-four hours, and the milk be used for feeding pigs or rearing calves, for either purpose having considerable value when suitably mixed with meal. Some farmers churn all the milk without setting for cream. This plan has, however, nothing to recommend it. If churned sweet it is a wasteful plan, and all the butter is not obtained; whilst if, as is usually the case, it is lappered or soured before churning, the quality of the butter is sacrificed, there being a considerable mixture of curd in the butter. The purest butter is made from perfectly sweet cream, but many makers prefer the cream taken off sweet milk, but slightly soured before churning, and thus obtain excellent butter. Cream when put in the churn should be of the temperature of about 60°, or a little lower in the summer season. The cream is in cold weather best raised to the required temperature by floating some of it in a tin vessel within a furnace of hot water. The churning should be done steadily, a pace of from fifty to sixty revolutions per minute being found desirable. There is a ventilating peg in some of the best churns, which is removed occasionally during the first ten minutes of churning to give ventilation. Churning should be stopped as soon as the butter forms, or the quality will be injured. The time occupied in churning usually varies from twenty to sixty minutes; but where the temperature is too low, or the cream is from the milk of old-milched cows not liberally fed, churning is sometimes a tedious and unsatisfactory Operation.

As soon as the butter is formed in small particles the buttermilk is let off by means of a plug, a hair sieve being used to prevent waste, and the little butter which flows through the tap is returned to the churn. The churn is then half-filled with pure cold water, and after a few revolutions the water let off. This process is repeated until the water comes out of the churn as clear as when it was put in. The butter may then be taken out with a pair of wooden patters without coming in contact with the hand. The water may be pressed out and if desired a little fine salt mixed with the butter by working it with the wooden patters, or by the use of a mechanical butter-worker. There are circular butter-workers which are of use in improving the condition and purifying inferior or badly-made butter, but when butter is thoroughly well managed from the first they are not generally necessary.

The most scrupulous cleanliness in every particular, and neatness and attractiveness in packing and preparing butter for market are desirable.

THE LICENSE ACT.

Experience in the working of the law with reference to the sale of liquor in Ontario, had shown that there are so many means of evading its provisions, that more stringent enactments were necessary if the law was to be anything better than a dead letter. At the last session of the Ontario Legislature several amendments of a very stringent character were made to the Liquor License Act. Under new law a magistrate may issue a warrant to any person to search for liquors on any suspected premises, and if any liquors are found, they shall be deemed to be there for the purpose of sale contrary to law. Should the occupant or owner of the premises fail to prove his innocence, then the magistrate before whom the case is tried shall punish him with the option of a fine for the first or second offence, and for the third shall imprison without a fine. All liquor found on the premises may be seized, and and in the case of a conviction may be ordered to be destroyed. The provisions of this Act have been put in force in Toronto during the past few days and a large number of seizures have been made. In addition to the destruction of the liquor the Act provides also for the destruction of the vessels in which it is contained, and it is thought when the brewers and others who furnish such vessels to parties who are illegally engaged in the sale of liquors discover that the law can be made to reach them in the destruction of their casks and bottles, that they will be very careful not to sell to such parties. In this way it is believed that the Act will be sure to effectually put a stop to the illicit sale of liquors, as after a time it will be found by all parties concerned that it won't pay to break the law. The Crown Attorney of Toronto has given it as his opinion that the word may in the Act is equivalent to shall, so far as the destruction of the liquor and vessels seized is concerned, because as he says, "the statute provides for no other disposition of the liquor."

THE BIDDULPH MASSACRE.

SOME TELL-TALE EVIDENCE—THE FEEHLEY PRISONERS COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

At the magisterial investigation in the case of William and James Feehley, at London, the first witness called was James Hogan, to compel whose attendance a warrant has been issued. He gave his evidence rather reluctantly. He said he remembered walking with William Feehley on the day the Feehleys left for Saginaw. On the way they met Pat. Donnely, and the latter asked prisoner if they had got any money. The prisoner replied, "Not yet," but that they expected to get it. They then went on and got to talking about the murder. Donnelly said he always thought that they (the Feehleys) knew about the murder, and that they ought to tell of it. Donnelly said if the Feehley family had been murdered and he knew about it he would get up and tell it. Wm. Feehley then said that he thought after he got his family away that he would come back and tell about the murder. He said also that Jim Maher, Pat. Quigley and James Twohey carried in Tom Donnelly, that Tom rose up after they laid him on the floor and tried to speak, but the blood choked him, on which James Carrol said, "Give the son of a —— another stroke with that spade," and then James Twohey hit him with the spade. He also said that all that Johnny O'Connor has sworn to was correct except that relating to Purtell, who was not there. He said it was an old man down the road that Johny took for Purtell. Pat. Donnelly said he did not know who it could be except Pat. Ryder or old Mike Carrol. Feehley said it was a little further down the road, and that he generally wore a cap. Feehley also said that the Donnelly house was watched the day before the murder. Donnelly said, in alluding to the murder: "I don't believe that you were in it, Will, but you must have been on your way home and tumbled into the fence and seen it." After this Donnelly and Feehley were talking together by themselves, but witness did not hear what they were saying at the time; after this Pat Donnelly rode away, and Will Feehley and witness walked on to Lucan together; Feehley said at this time that the spade with which Tom Donnelly's head was split open belonged to Pat Quigley. Witness admitted that he had come here unwillingly, and that he had now come here on a warrant; he also admitted that knew that attempts had been made to get him to go and give evidence in Detroit, and that he had kept out of the way.

This evidence corroborated that given by Pat Donnelly.

Johnny O'Connor and Wm. Donnelly gave formal evidence as to the murder, after which the Magistrate committed the prisoners, refusing bail.

NOT THE SLIGHTEST AFFINITY exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, itself, and nothing else. It embodies the best results of pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive, decisive results, effectually relieving coughs when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected) colds, laryngitis and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure Consumption it is the most reliable means of defence against that dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing emollient action of the cod liver oil upon the inflamed lung mebrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of those elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto and sold by all druggists.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and untimely decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends its self so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which so many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all druggists

A Widow's Wiles;

OR,

A BITTER VENGEANCE

BY RACHEL BERNHARDT.

CHAPTER VI.

"She is very beautiful," he answered.

"Beautiful? Gad, Jack, she's lovely—divine!" ejaculated my lord, warming into enthusiasm, and delicately kissing his scented finger-tips. "The Duchess of Athone, an old flame of mine, couldn't have held a candle to her in her best season. She is exquisite—each form, each intellect, each vivacity! But she's lost hopelessly, irretrievably lost!"

"Why don't she go to London, then, Uncle?" said Jack, dryly, not relishing quite this praise.

"Why not?" assented Lord Bramber, leaning back, and reflectively tapping the Sevres coffee-cup with his spoon. "Ah, I wish I had but the opportunity of introducing her! At my age, Jack—ha, ha!—I would be content to shine with a borrowed light."

"You take her to London, my lord?" exclaimed his nephew, throwing up his head, and his blue eyes wide with surprise.

"I said I wished, my dear boy," laughed his lordship, lightly brushing the tips of his fingers with his handkerchief. "No, 'gad—ha, ha!—I may not have aged as other men, but still I have passed the time when to come and to see was to conquer."

Jack Bramber was silent from amaze. Here, decidedly, was a threatened complication of matters. Did his uncle really mean that he was smitten by Lady Cunningham, and intended to enter the lists as her wooer?

In that case, any remarks of his own that Jack might have intended to make respecting her ladyship and Hilda Horne would not only be thrown away, but do injury from that hour.

"In a brown study, Jack?" remarked Lord Brumber, darting a keen glance across the table. "I trust we are not to be rivals. Tut! She is lovely, but too old for you."

"Indeed, uncle, you need have no fear on that point. But is it possible—do you really mean that you contemplate—"

"Marrying again—or, rather, wedding Lady Cunningham?" broke in his lordship, concluding the sentence. "Well, why not, Jack? I have been thinking it over during the night. A man, especially a widower, rather finds the need of a companion as his years begin—begin just a little to tell upon him. Of course," he added, rapidly, "I do not intend it should make any difference in your prospects, Jack; my present income you would still inherit. Should any family blest our union, of course, the Castle, their mother's property, would be for them."

Jack Bramber bit his lip. He was astonished, vexed, annoyed. His uncle had every right to marry again if he chose; yet it was hard. For the time he even forgot Hilda Horne.

"Do you not see it in that light, Jack?"

"I see, uncle, you have a right to marry again, if you please." He had wished to say, "perpetrate an idiotic folly," but wisely curbed his tongue.

"Thank you—thank you, Jack. Take my word, you should not lose by it. If there were no family, the Castle would still come to me—I have ascertained that; and, in time, my dear boy, as my heir, it would become yours. It's a fine place—a very fine place!"

"Have you at all hinted the state of—of your feelings to her ladyship?" queried Jack, mastering his voice.

"No more than the language of the eye goes," remarked the old beau, shrugging his thin shoulders. "Even in affections of the heart, Jack, I never leap in the dark. But come—what is your opinion of my success?"

The nephew paused, recalling Lady Cunningham's looks and words regarding Lord Bramber the preceeding evening; then answered frankly, "I believe, my Lord, you will succeed."

"Thank you—thank you. You don't mean it in flattery?"

"No; in right down sober earnest," replied the young man; adding, mentally, "I wish to Heaven I did not!"

"Then thank you again. You shall not lose, I repeat, by taking it in this spirit."

"In what spirit did you expect me to take it?" was the reply, as the speaker took the other's extended hand. "Surely you are at liberty to act as you please?"

"Yes, yes; and my income will be yours, only,"—hesitating—"you see, Jack—of that I'm sorry—if there should be any children,—an heir, the title must pass to him."

"Very well, uncle; then I shall have to go to my grave with plain squire jacked to my name," answered Jack Bramber, with a short laugh, as he rose from the table. "Will you excuse me if I leave you, but I have an appointment, and I see Clegg has brought my horse?"

That statement about an appointment was scarcely true. But Jack always rode after breakfast, and wanted, as quickly as he could, to get away, and think over what he had heard.

The possibility of his uncle wedding Lady Cunningham, had, for the moment, stunned him. Honest, frank, and not an atom selfish, he had owned Lord Bramber's right to do as he chose. Yet, as he rode slowly along the country road, he saw it might prove very perilous to his future.

His interviews with Hilda had given him a better insight into her ladyship's disposition than his uncle had. By her years of juniority, and her dangerous fascination, Lord Bramber would prove but soft clay in her hand. Did children chance to appear, her ladyship might not care to have their father's property willed away to a nephew. Besides, Jack had come across one or two "old inhabitants" who had known her from plain Mrs. Howard Deveril, and who had told him of her marriage with the Baronet, the banishment of the son Herbert, and the singular disappearance out of everybody's ken.

"Who knows but her ladyship may have had a finger in that pie," meditated Jack. "No one ever heard a stranger will than Sir Hereward's, I'm sure. They say the son was never mentioned. Her doing, I swear. Well, then, supposing I married Hilda—and I have never seen any one I cared for so much—and that were to offend my lady, she might get me kicked out, and cut off with a shilling, too."

Certainly the prospect was not encouraging. Jack's reverie was broken by a faint railway whistle.

Raising his head, he perceived the smoke in white wreaths raising through a cutting of beeches, from which the train, small at present as they affair, speedily issued.

The rails passed across the road that he was traversing; and, as it was easy to see a long distance down every way, no gate or guardian was placed.

"Shall I be able to get over before it comes?" he thought. "When a man's time is his own, why need he harry to save a few seconds. Besides, it's express."

He came to this conclusion as he reached the crest of a rise in the road leading to the rails. He might as well draw rein, and wait its passing there as anywhere.

As he did so, he became conscious of an old man in leathern gaiters, straw hat and a blue coat, some twenty pace in advance, proceeding in the direction of the rails. His gait was unsteady, as of one much enfeebled; and, having nothing better to do, Jack watched him.

"The confounded idiot!" he muttered, as he saw the old fellow approach to the lines, and heard the swift rush of the train. "Why does he go so close? The velocity with which it will pass will be enough to knock him down. Good Heaven!" he added, with a cry and a shiver; "he is going over! He'll be smashed! Is he mad? By Heaven, I see it!—he is drunk!"

The old fellow had crossed half over before he seemed to become aware of the pitiless monster, rushing upon him.

The sight took all power of motion away save from the hands. These he rose, with a piteous scream, toward the smoke-belching engine, as pleading for mercy.

To get out of the way he did not try.

He was paralyzed with terror, and if drunk previously, was now sobered sufficiently to see his awful danger.

"Great Heaven!" cried Jack, as he beheld the shaking knees, the poor, extended, trembling hands, and white hair blowing on the wind; "I can't stand this. If it's to crush us both, I must risk it."

Already he had put his horse at full speed. He knew it was a race between him and the express. One, perhaps two, lives depended on a second lost or gained—on the strength of wrist and steadiness of eye!

In imagination he saw the train hurl the wretched old man yards forward, then crush and tear him as it rushed on; and the idea sickened but did not deter him. He thought not at that supreme moment of peril to himself.

It appeared an age before he reached the rails; yet it was but a few seconds.

The thud of the train seemed to beat like thunder in his brain. He saw the monster close upon him. He seemed to feel the heat of the furnace.

But all he was really conscious of was dashing across the rails behind the old man, seizing the latter by the coat collar with a grip of iron, dragging him after him, then swerving his horse round; for so close had been the encounter, that otherwise its hind quarters might have been struck. Then all three—the frightened, snorting beast, the preserved and preserver—sunk down in a heap together, as with an awful noise the train flew on, with eager, frightened, inquiring heads gazing out at them from the windows.

Jack, in a few moments, staggered to his feet, secured his horse, that was palpitating and trembling with terror, its large eyes dilated and nostrils blue, then pulled up the shaking object who had been the cause of all.

"You old idiot!" he said; "what made you place yourself in such danger?" But the "old idiot" was in too pitiable a state even to be angry with. As pale as death, his eyes starting, every nerve trembling, he could but clutch his preserver's arm, and mutter unintelligible sentences.

"The fright has utterly turned his brain, or he isn't yet sober," thought Jack Bramber. "I can't leave him, or he'll be getting into fresh trouble. Where do you live? Down in the village, man?"

But the words or their significance, failed to reach the old inebriate.

"Saved, saved! Oh, if I had died—died! I—I couldn't—not yet—not yet!" he mumbled; and tears began to trickle down his cheeks. "I ain't fit to die, I ain't!"

"You're not fit to live, you old sinner!" said Jack, heedless that he spoke above his breath.

"Yes, yes; sinner—sinner!"

And the tears fell faster.

"Good Heavens, what a pitiable sight!" thought Jack Bramber, with a shudder. "Delirium tremens, I suppose. Well, I'll get him to the village. Perhaps I may meet some one who knows the old drunkard."

Putting one hand on the horse's rein, and with the other grasping the arm of the man, he proceeded in the direction. Within half a mile he overtook a field laborer.

"I say, my man," he called, "can you tell me who this old fellow is, and where he lives?"

"Thot, sur," said the laborer, with vicious fingers irritating his shock head—"thot be old Jemmy Stone; her ladyship's pet pensioner, we calls 'um. Be he drunk? What be the matter, sur?"

Jack briefly explained.

"An' you risked your loife to save 'um? Oi wouldn't ha' risked moy horse's, even, the drunken old reprobate! He's allis drunk. I reckon moy lady would ha' been better pleased if you'd let 'um go. She ha' kep' him these fifteen years.'

"Why, was he disabled for work? Who was he?"

"Just a servant oop at t' Castle. Disabled?—not as I ever heerd on. She'd pay him double, I've heerd, if he'd leave the ploice."

"I won't leave, I won't," abruptly broke in James Stone, with senile passion, clenching his trembling hands. "I was born here, and I won't go for her ladyship, nor any one. Can't her ladyship trust me?"

He gazed, with his weak, watery eyes, from one to the other; then, apparently forgetting the cause of his wrath, relapsed into tears.

"Do you mind taking him home?" asked Jack, accompanying the request with a proffered shilling. "I'll call and see how he is, to-morrow. The shock may prove more than he can battle against, after all."

The man readily consented, led James Stone off, and Jack Bramber, mounted his horse, rode away in an opposite direction, ignorant to what important results his having risked his life in this act of charity was to lead.

CHAPTER VII.

TWO PROPOSALS OF MARRIAGE—JACK'S TERRIBLE SUSPICION.

Three weeks had passed since the rescue of old Stone, and Jack Bramber had been much lionized for his bravery. The universal opinion, however, was, especially in the village, that he would have done a greater benefit to society had he left the old fellow on the rails. James Stone, indeed, being always drunk, was an unmitigated nuisance, and why her ladyship showed such favor to him, above others, was a surprise to all. In fact, others hinted, as had the laborer, that Lady Cunningham would have been better pleased had the express been left to reboop James Stone out of her path.

From her ladyship herself Jack would never have drawn that conclusion. No one could have been more profuse in her thanks and praise.

"My late husband, Sir Hereward, was much attached to James Stone," she said. "Trusted him quite like a confidential servant, and Stone was a faithful creature. Unhapily, after the Baronet's death he took to drinking. So, as I could not keep him at the Castle, and could not let him starve, I thought, out of respect to Sir Hereward's memory, it would be best to pension him off. I am indebted to you much, Mr. Bramber. It would have deeply grieved me had the poor old man met so awful a death. I shall drive over and see him."

Had she been five minutes earlier she would have met Jack Bramber. Indeed, he frequently looked in upon James Stone. Perhaps, as he had saved his life, he felt it right he should take an interest in it.

The shock produced upon the drink-sodden old man was never to be overcome. He sat in his chair by the hearth, shaking like an aged paralytic. Even his craving for stimulants had ceased. The only thing that aroused him was the entrance of Jack. His dull eyes would brighten, and he always uttered the same thing—"Ah, you saved me! Heaven bless you, sir! I ain't fit to die! I shan't die yet, though Amos Peggin said my lady would be glad. Ha, ha! Would she? She begrudges me the poor little bit of money, then! Humph! I wonder if she'll be glad when I am really dead? Ah," catching Jack's arm, "but you won't let me die? You saved me once—you will again, eh?"

And so he would ramble on till Jack withdrew—not, however, before James Stone had made him promise to come again.

The sweetest reward the young man received for his prowess was the expression—half pride in him, half fear for him—of Hilda Horne's face when next they met. Her hand trembled as he took it, and she murmured, plaintively, "You were very brave—a hero! But if you had been killed, Mr. Bramber, oh, what should I have done?"

"Would you so have missed me?" he asked, smiling down upon her.

"Missed you! How could I have done otherwise? No one has ever spoken so kindly to me as you have done. You seem to have brightened my whole life! You cannot tell how wretched that life has been—so dull, so drear! And I tremble lest Lady Cunningham should find out that I come here! She never would let me do so again!"

"Poor child!" said Jack, in compassionate tones, gazing at the lovely countenance raised so trustfully to his. "Her ladyship appears to have only one person dependent upon her that she cares to be kind to—that drunken old fellow, James Stone!"

"Yes," smiled Hilda, as, side by side, they sauntered under the trees in the early morning, brushing with their feet the dew from the grass and ferns; "is it not singular? She treats him as she treats none other of her inferiors. Sometimes, but not often, he comes half tipsy to the Castle, but she always receives him. It is strange!"

"Very," said Jack, dryly, his hands clasped behind his back, his eyes on his boots. "Miss Horne, have you ever heard Lady Cunningham speak of her late husband's son?"

"Never more than that he offended his father by marrying beneath him, was disinherited, and sent from the Castle, and was never heard of again."

"But he did marry the curate's daughter?"

"Oh, yes; he had married her in secret long before it was discovered."

"Do you think he did wrong?"

"In marrying the girl he loved; and who loved him? No!" was the instant reply.

"Neither do I."

"Only it was wrong, perhaps, to do it in secret," put in Hilda, like a rider.

"Ah! But I have heard that the Baronet might have overlooked that after a time, but for her ladyship."

"That is possible. She seems very jealous and revengeful."

"Did you ever hear whether Sir Herbert—for of course the title became his—had any children?" proceeded Jack, turning to get a glimpse of the sweet face beside him.

"No," with a shake of the head; "her ladyship never speaks of his affairs."

"Ah! and Mr. Rivers the curate?"

"Got an exchange after his daughter left, and died, I think, a year or so later."

Jack was silent, falling into meditation.

He was a robust, muscular young Christian, yet had an imaginative brain for all that, and sometimes the strangest crotchets would get into his head. Now, abruptly, he threw up that member, and burst out laughing.

"Why not?" he queried, unconsciously, aloud.

"Oh, please don't, for my sake!" pleaded a frightened, tender voice.

Looking, Jack beheld Hilda Horne, peering anxiously among the trees.

"I would do anything for your sake," he exclaimed, perplexed. "But what, Miss Horne, am I particularly not to do?"

"Laugh so loud, Mr. Bramber. It might attract somebody's notice, and then—"

"Then you would suffer," said Jack, as the girl, stopping, dropped her head. "Confound it all, that you should be in such a state of bondage!"

"Ah!"—and she looked up with a timid smile—"I shall run away one day, and try to work for freedom and independence as a governess."

"Freedom and independence as a governess, without capital! You! poor child!" said Jack, gazing still down at her as in a brown study, but as if he hardly saw her.

A flush came to Hilda's cheek. She had a dim sense that she ought to be indignant. But how could she be with this handsome young man, who spoke so kindly as, since that vague recollection of her father, none had ever done. Nevertheless, she said, "I think I must go now, Mr. Bramber."

He still seemed wrapt in the brown study.

"If I stay longer, I shall be missed. "Good morning!"

She had taken a step away before he roused himself.

Following, taking her hands into his, gazing with earnest passion into her violet eyes, he said, in a low, quick, clear tone, "Miss Horne—Hilda, do you know what love is? Can you, do you think, ever love me? I love you with all my soul. Will you be my wife?"

She turned red, then terribly pale, as, shrinking back, she gasped, "Your wife?"

But Jack could see the shrinking was not pain: he had only startled her.

"Miss Horne, I confess to thinking there is a mystery about you. Will you give me the right, as your lover and future husband, to unravel it?"

She had plucked her hands away to cover her face, and stood trembling before him. Wanit joy orsorrow that made her heart beat so fast?

TEAS! TEAS!

CHINA and JAPAN.

As an article of Domestic use, there is none perhaps for which there is at the present day a greater demand in the aggregate than TEA.

Notwithstanding the increased demand yet the price of TEAS is lower to-day than it has ever yet been.

The causes which have procured so desirable a result to the TEA-DRINKER are practical.

FIRST:—A more extended and scientific system of cultivation in the Tea producing countries,

SECOND:—Cheaper and better carrying facilities, and

THIRD:—Increased and closer competition amongst traders and dealers.

TEAS are popularly known as Green, Black and Japan, and of each of these there are a number of grades and varieties. Thousands of pounds are annually adulterated and sold in this country.

For description of grade, modes of adulteration, and tests for detection, see "ads" to follow.

Meantime we offer JAPAN TEA at 40c. per pound. NONE BETTER. TRY IT!

AN OLD LANDMARK REMOVED.—On Thursday night last, just as the firemen were returning, or had just returned, from the reunion in the Fire Hall, at half-past eleven o'clock, an alarm of fire was rung from from the town bell. The Brigade were promptly on hand. The fire was found in the old building known as Boswell's brewery, owned by Mr. Edmond Chamberlain, and occupied by Sam Detcher up to a recent date, when he removed to more commodious quarters in the County buildings. The buildings, which consisted of stone and logs were, destroyed, and were of no great value. The Fire Brigade rendered effectual service.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday afternoon, during the Lacrosse match, Mr. R. A. Morrow tied his horse under a shed. A large number of lodges will attend.

Fully seven hundred persons attended, the excursion train being accompanied by the Fire Brigade Band. The day was pleasantly spent, and the party arrived home at an early hour.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—On Monday last as Mr. Allan, of Otonabee, was driving into town, his horses became unmanageable and ran away, throwing him out of the vehicle and, unfortunately, breaking his arm and severely bruising him. The runaway team were caught on the road, and the injured man driven to Dr. Clarke's surgery, where the bone was set and his injuries attended to.

CHANGED HANDS.—Mr. A. F. Huffman, the popular proprietor of the Huffman House, has sold out his hotel business, furniture, fittings, etc,, to Mr. J. E. McIntyre, well known in connection with the Rossin and American Hotels Toronto. RECOVERING FROM INJURIES.—Young Jamieson, of Mt. Pleasant, reported last week fatally injured by the knife of a mower, is, we are glad to learn, recovering.....Brady, the G. J. fireman, who who was severely injured by being knocked from a cab on the Methodist Excursion from Belleville, is sufficiently recovered to be out with a crutch. He has been at the Croft House under medical care since the accident, and could not have chosen a better place to ensure careful nursing and attention.

FIRE AT BUCKHORN.—On Sunday afternoon a fire originating from a defective stove pipe, broke out in the premises of Mr. Wm. Hall, at Buckhorn Bridge, and soon gained such headway as to defy the efforts of the neighbours and river-drivers who speedily gathered to render assistance. The dwelling house, barns and outbuildings were totally destroyed. with a portion of the furniture, the balance being saved in a damaged condition. The mill had a narrow escape. Loss between $2,000 and $3,000, without insurance.

SINGULAR CIRCUMSTANCE.—The Review in describing the fire at Boswell's brewery, thus graphically depicts the struggle between the contending elements, fire and water. It says:—"The Silsby was placed "on the bridge, and soon water was play- "ing on the flames, which threw out an in- "tense heat, through two lines of hose." When the fire fiend gets his forces organized to throw heat on the water through two lines of hose, he is clearly disposed to take a mean advantage of the firemen, and it is evident that the sooner we get water-works the better.

THE COMET.—The comet, which only three weeks ago was the brightest object in the nightly heavens, has now become so dim that the observer is obliged to look closely for it. It has advanced to a position only a few degrees west of the polar star, but the head scarcely rivals in brightness a star of the third magnitude. The coma has greatly contracted, and the tail is shortened so much that to the naked eye it appears to be only four or five degrees in length. A slight haze in the atmosphere even suffices to render the tail invisible.

CORRECTION.—Father Kelly, Secretary of His Lordship, the Bishop of Kingston, writes to the Recorder correcting the statement of that journal, which was copied into the EXAMINER, as to an alleged narrow escape of Bishop Cleary at the Grand Trunk station, Brockville. Father Kelly says that, though boarding the train while moving slowly, "With- "out difficulty I ascended the platform of "the car. The Bishop then handed me "his cloak, and, taking my hand, stepped "upon the platform without difficulty or "danger of any kind whatever."

ROAD ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday evening, as Mr. W. H. Mitchell, sewing machine agent, was driving into town from Ennismore, the night being dark, his horse bolted, being frightened at the roughness of the road, throwing Mr. Mitchell out, bruising him considerably and badly wrecking a machine which was in the buggy. It seems that the road at this place, about half way between the Cross and Mud Lake Bridge, had been turnpiked up in a very rough manner, and rails put on the smooth part of the road. Mr. Mitchell threatens to look to the Ennismore Council to make good his loss.

A HASTINGS EXPLOIT.—Last Thursday a cricket team from Hastings came to town to play a match with Peterborough. A team of our juniors had been selected for the match, but the Hastings men declared they would play no boys, and demanded a "First eleven or none." Four or five of the first eleven were scared up, and a mixed team organized to meet as far as possible the wishes of the eager Hastings men. Peterborough went to the bat first, retiring for 111, of which W. A. Stratton made 15, Hallet 14, Rutherford 32, Haultain 18, Hamilton 8, Rogers 5 and Hatton and Canning 2 each; extras 15. Hastings went in and retired for 56. Peterborough took its second innings, scoring 77, making a total of 188. Hastings then went to bat a second time, when the home team, to give them a souvenir of the visit, took up the play in earnest, Stratton bowling. Three wickets went down for five balls, and the Hastings men began to look blue, and at the end of eight minutes the last wicket bit the dust, for one run off the bat, Stratton taking seven wickets and Rutherford three. Three extras made the Hastings total score 60 runs, leaving Peterborough winners by 128 runs. The Hastings boys should practice with Norwood or Bobcaygeon for a while before coming up here to clean out a "first eleven," or better still, hunt up some game they can play better than cricket.

FOR THE WARM WEATHER.—Mens an Boys' Linen and Lustre Coats and Straw Hats. A nice lot of Ladies Muslin Dress Goods. Crumpton Corsets from 18 to 33 inches. Be sure you try our Green, Black, or Japan Tea at 50c per pound. W. J. Wallace Lakefield. 28-4t

AN UNLUCKY BUG-HUNT.—On Monday afternoon the children of Mr. Wesson, who resides about three miles south of Keene, were engaged in gathering potato bugs, which were burned in a fire built in a large kettle. Unfortunately a spark from the fire caught in the straw at the barn, some distance off, and a high wind prevailing, the whole buildings, consisting of two barns, were soon in flames, and were totally destroyed, with their contents, consisting of all this year's hay crop just stored, and a quantity of household furniture which had been stored in the barn. There was an insurance of $1,000 in the Sovereign: $300 on one building, $200 on the other, and $500 on contents. The loss will largely exceed the insurance.

LACROSSE—MILLBROOK V. PETERBORO'.—A closely contested game of Lacrosse was played on Monday afternoon between the Peterborough second twelve and a "mixed" team of the Millbrook Club. The players were as follows:

PETERBOROUGH.		MILLBROOK.
J. Coughlin	Field Captain	H. Richards
J. Donoghue	Goal	R. Brandon
M. Tierney	Point	W. Breaky
J. Rickey	Cover Point	F. Walsh
A. Yelland	Defence Field	A. Smith
S. Clegg	do.	J. Krieger
J. Lynch	Centre Field	A. Duncan
E. Rogers	Home Field	R. McMahon
J. Craig	do.	J. Coombe
J. Armstrong	do.	R. Gaut
C. Coughlin	do.	J. Brandon
P. Corkery	Home	J. McKelver
W. Morrow	do.	W. Raper
F. Faren	Umpire	W. Wood
W. Morgan	do.	M. Henry

The play throughout the five games was very rough, but was contested in excellent humor, and in very good style. On the side of Millbrook Breaky, Gaut and Walsh bore the brunt of battle, the home team finding its most effective men in Tierney, Yelland, Craig and Donoghue. The first game lasted 35 minutes and was finally won by Walsh for Millbrook. In the second game Gaut, for Millbrook, passed the rubber through the flags of Peterborough in twelve minutes. The home team now began to get their backs up, and went into it with a will, which was met with obstinate resistance by the Millbrook team, and after an hour and five minutes' play the game was awarded to Peterborough by decision of the Referee, James G. Macdonald, the ball being put through by Craig. The second game was won in a minute's play, rather by a fluke of the defence, Corkery putting the ball through. The winning game, after six minutes of excellent play, was won for Peterborough by Craig. The visitors were escorted to the Caisse House, and thence to the station, by the Peterborough players.

LITERARY.

WARWICK'S PUBLICATIONS.—Messrs. Wm. Warwick & Son have favored us with the numbers for July of "The Boys' Own Paper," "The Leisure Hour," and "The Girls' Own Paper." We have frequently felt it our duty to call attention to the neat and artistic manner in which these serials are put on the market. They are replete in literary selection, neatly printed and profusely illustrated.

LOVELL'S GAZETTEER.—We have received from the publishers, John Lovell & Son, Montreal, a copy of their Gazeteer of British North America, just issued. It contains the latest and most authentic description of over 7,500 places, descriptions of over 2,300 lakes and rivers and a table of routes, together with other information of a most useful character. A careful examination shows the work of compilation to have been done with accuracy and thoroughness, and the information given to be in the most concise and convenient shape. We can heartly recommend it to the business public to whom it will be invaluable.
